FOREWORD

It is not an easy task to write the history of such a county as Leavenworth. Of all the counties in the State of Kansas, there is none so rich in historical lore. Carved, as it was, out of the heart of the wild and unbroken frontier; organized and developed amid the hardships and vicissitudes of pioneer days, its story is one of unusual historic interest. Many events had an influence in shaping its destiny. Less than a century ago, the territory of which it is now composed was a wild, unbroken waste, inhabited by the untutored Indian. Where once the council fire blazed and the wigwam of the red man stood, we now find unsurpassed commercial, industrial and social institutions have developed.

History is but a record of the happenings of human events, the personal element ever being present, and the history of a community or county is merely a record of those who have contributed to its upbuilding and advancement. Each step in the development of the above mentioned institutions; each incident connected with the passing of the original inhabitants of the territory of which our country is now composed as well as the coming of the pioneers—our forefathers—is history today. Centered about every pioneer family; about the rude log cabin, long since deserted and fallen to decay; about the old landmarks that live now only in our memory; about the farms, and about the grave marked by some weather worn piece, there is a story worth the telling; a story that would interest someone. Unfortunately the authors have been compelled to eliminate much that they would like to tell owing to want of space.

Having finished our undertaking of writing a history of Leavenworth County, though not to our satisfaction, we look back upon our labor as one of love and pleasure. While the task has been a tedious one, yet we feel a bit of satisfaction in our belief that we have written a story of our county in "Leavenworth County" language; that it is not so much written as spoken and in a way that we feel the average citizen can read and understand. We claim for this work no literary merit, neither do we claim absolute correctness. Errors have doubtless occurred by reason of transcribing, typesetting and proof reading. Again much of this history as it is written herein has been handed down by word of mouth, and realizing as we do the frailty of human memory, we have attempted to arrive at the truth as best we could.

Throughout this work we have tried to tell the story of Leavenworth County and its people simply and plainly with the hope that we might be able to present a substantially authentic history of our county and its people to which the present and future generations may refer with confidence and satisfaction as the years come and go, that it may be a permanent record for all time, and incidentally to inspire, by the sweep of the story, a love for our county and our cities and an intelligent solicitude for their destiny.

Especial attention is directed to the biographical sketches which form a part of this volume. In these sketches will be found much interesting and valuable reading, from which the future historian may well compile a history of Leavenworth County. It is to be regretted that many others of our citizens have not availed themselves of the opportunity to perpetuate the history of their families for the benefit of those who come after them. However, it is no fault of the editor, as the pages of this volume have been open to all who cared to respond to the invitation of the solicitors.

*To the memory of our fathers and mothers—the hardships and adversity with which they have met as pioneers of this county—their unswerving devotion to us—the sacrifices that they have made for us—their honest toil and brave hearts, as an humble token of our grateful appreciation for the sacred heritage they have left us in these, we respectfully

INDIAN HISTORY

THE KANSAS—PRINCIPAL VILLAGES—THE TRIBE REMOVAL—CHARACTERISTICS—NOTED CHIEFS—TREATY OF 1806—DELAWARES AND KICKAPOOS—TREATIES—LEGENDS—CHIEFS—"JOURNEY CAKE"—"KETCHUM"—CUSTOMS—OTHER TREATIES.

The earliest known inhabitants of the territory which now comprises Leavenworth County was a tribe of Indians known as the Kansas. Early day historical accounts vary greatly in the spelling of the name. They were frequently known and referred to as the Canceas, Kansez, Canzas, Canzes, Okanis, Cances, Kansies, Canzon, Kanzon, Konza, Konzas and the Kasas. It was not until 1854, when Edward Everett Hale wrote his "Account of Emigrant Aid Companies and Directions to Emigrants," under the title of "Kanzas and Nebraska," that the spelling of the word was finally settled upon as Kansas, in preference to what he terms the more fashionable way of spelling it, "Kansas." The name of our state as well as the river, Kansas, which flows through it from west to east, draining a major portion of it, was derived from the name of this early Indian tribe.

Early historical accounts of this tribe place their lands and country as north of the Kansas River of today and along the western banks of the Missouri. The tribe was known to have been divided up into two principal villages referred to as the upper and lower village. What was known as the lower village was located about forty miles north of the junction of the Missouri and Kansas rivers, the present site of Kansas City, Missouri.

In 1804 when the explorers, Lewis and Clarke, ascended the Missouri River they reported that they were unable to find any trace of the lower Kansas village but had found at its location the ruins of an old French fort that had apparently been abandoned some twenty-five or thirty years previous. It is believed that the cause of the Kansas removing from this locality was due to the war-like encroachments of the Iowas and Sacs, tribes to the northward who had previously had extensive dealings with Mississippi Valley traders, had been abundantly supplied with firearms and were desirous of obtaining the hunting and trapping grounds of the Kansas.

Upon leaving their country, which extended over all of the territory of which Leavenworth County is now composed, the Kansas removed to a point situated on the Kansas River, near the present location of Manhattan, Kansas. It was not until June, 1825, that the Kansas ceded their lands, of which Leavenworth County is now a part, to the United States by treaty. The treaty by which they ceded their lands was made at St. Louis, June 3, 1825, with Superintendent of Indian Affairs Clarke and, with reference to the land ceded, reads in part as follows:

"Beginning at the entrance of the Kansas River into the Missouri River; from thence North to the North West corner of the state of Missouri, from thence westerly to the Nodaway River, thirty miles from its entrance into the Missouri River and with that river, (the Nemaha), to its source; from thence to the source of the Kansas River, leaving the old village of the Pania (Pawnee) Republic to the West; from thence on the ridge dividing the waters of the Kansas River from those of the Arkansas, to the westerly line of the state of Missouri; and with that line Thirty miles to place of beginning."

According to the terms of the treaty, the United States Government was to pay in consideration of the ceding of the above described lands the sum of $3,500.00 per year for a period of twenty years to the tribe. In addition thereto a reservation was made to the Indians of a tract of land near the present location of Manhattan, Kansas, and the government was to provide the Indians with stock and agricultural implements, and was to supply them with a blacksmith and furnish them a teacher of agriculture.

The Kansas, or "Kaws," as they were sometimes known by the French contraction of the word, Kanza, which signifies "Smoky," were said to have been more or less inclined to be a peaceful tribe. They were more industrious than some of the tribes west of the Mississippi, yet there was great room for improvement. Their requirement in their treaty of 1825 with the United States Government, that they be furnished agricultural implements, a blacksmith and teacher of agriculture, would indicate that they were desirous of deserting the chase and hunt as a means of obtaining a livelihood and resorting to the tilling of the soil. Their treatment of visitors has always been recorded as generous and considerate. In the journals of M. de Bourgmont, the French explorer, it is said that they believed in a Great Spirit; had crude forms of religious worship; a code of ethics existed which looked with extreme distaste upon such a crime as drunkenness. Insanity among them was unknown. Their language was the dialect of the Dacotahs. Among their most noted chiefs were "Na-he-da-ba" or Long Neck; "Ka-he-ga-wa-ta-ning-ga" or Little Chief, and "Shen-ga-ne-ga." To the south of this tribe dwelt the Osages, with which they occasionally became involved in disputes. At a grand council of these tribes held at Pawnee village, Republic, September 28, 1806, a treaty was entered into between them and the United States Government, the government being represented by Lieut. Zebulon Montgomery Pike and Lieut. J. B. Wilkinson, which reads as follows:

"In council held by the subscribers, at the village of the Pawnee Republic, appeared Wahonsongay with eight principal soldiers of the Kansas nation on the one part, and Shin-ga-wasa, a chief of the Osage nation, with four of the warriors of the Grand and Little Osage villages on the other part. After having smoked the pipe of peace, and buried past animosities, they individually and jointly bound themselves in behalf of and for their respective nations to observe a friendly intercourse and keep a permanent peace, and mutually pledge themselves to use every influence to further the commands and wishes of their great father.

"We, therefore, American Chiefs, do require of each nation, a strict observance of the above treaty, as they value the good will of their great father, the President of the United States.

"Done at our council fire, at the Pawnee Republic village, the 28th day of September, 1806, and the Thirty-first year of American Independence.

"(Signed)

"Z. M. Pike,
"J. B. Wilkinson."

The above treaty as entered into by the chiefs of the Kansas and Osage tribes was never broken.

With the removal of the Kansas from the territory of which Leavenworth County is now a part, came the entrance of two other tribes, the Delawares and Kickapoos, of which more is known. In the year 1818 at St. Mary's, Ohio, the Delaware or Lenni Lenapes ceded all lands held by them in the State of Indiana. Part of the consideration being that the government was to furnish them with a country west of the Mississippi in which to reside. Subsequent to this they were assigned certain tracts of land in the State of Missouri to which they removed. On September 24, 1829, the Delawares again ceded their lands by treaty to the government and were granted lands further west and in what was later to be organized into Kansas Territory and of which Leavenworth County was to become a part. In the treaty granting the lands last mentioned to the Delawares, the tract granted them is described as follows: "The country in the fork of the Kansas and Missouri rivers extending up the Kansas river to where the Kansas (Indians) live and up the Missouri River to Camp Leavenworth and thence West by a line drawn westerly leaving a space ten miles wide North of Kansas boundary as an outlet."

This tract of land as ceded to the Delawares comprised the greater portion of what is now Leavenworth County. Of this tract of land granted them, the Delawares on December 14, 1843, sold to the Wyandottes triangular tract at the junction of the Kansas and Missouri rivers which comprised the greater portion of what is now Wyandotte County. Later, and on May 6, 1854, the Delawares ceded to the United States Government by treaty practically all of their lands excepting a strip ten miles wide on the north bank of the Kansas River beginning at the western boundary of the Wyandotte lands and extending forty miles westward. This strip, commonly known and referred to as the "Delaware Strip," "Delaware Reserve," and "Delaware Trust Lands," remained in possession of the tribe until May 30, 1860, when it was ceded by the Delawares to the United States Government by treaty.

The Delawares or Lenni Lenapes as a tribe were rich in legendary and historical lore. They were descendants of the famous Algonquin tribe. Their oldest known home was in Pennsylvania, where they resided along the banks of the Delaware River, the river getting its name from that of the tribe. The name, Lenni Lenape, by which they were sometimes known, means in Indian parlance "Original Man." The tribe claimed to have been the original parents of the Algonquins. Among other things this tribe had the distinction of being the first Indian tribe upon the American continent to negotiate a treaty with the United States. This treaty was made at Fort Pitt, September 17, 1778.

Among the names of the chiefs of the Delawares we find those of "Four Miles," "Fall Leaf," "Ketchum," and "Journey-Cake." In his valuable work, "Beyond the Mississippi," which dealt exclusively with the New West of the early fifties, Albert D. Richardson tells of a night spent by himself at the cabin of Chief "Four Miles." He describes the location of the cabin as being about fifteen miles east of Lawrence, where it is believed to have been located in what is now Sherman Township, Leavenworth County, Kansas. It was during this stay that he met the chief "Fall Leaf," after which the station, Fall Leaf, on the main line of the Union Pacific Railway between Linwood and Lawrence, is named. A legend connected with the name of the chief, "Four Miles," is to the effect that he once ran a distance of four miles and back without stopping.

The city of Linwood, Leavenworth County, Kansas, which is situated at the junction of Big Stranger Creek and the Kansas River, was originally called Journey-Cake. It was named after a chief of the Delaware tribe around which the following legend was interwoven: At one time a young brave of the Delaware tribe was captured by white traders and carried to a far distance from his tribe. He eventually managed to escape and upon his long journey home, which was fraught with many dangers and hardships, he was forced to rely for subsistence upon a small cake of corn bread which he had concealed upon his person. Having arrived safely with his tribe and after telling them the story of his escape he was immediately rechristened "Journey-Cake." This name was originally given to the city of Linwood, Kansas, owing to the close proximity within which Journey-Cake lived to the city at the time of its establishment. The name, which is of purely Indian origin, has been corrupted by the whites to that of "Johnny-Cake." Another legend of the Delawares in connection with their chief, "Ketchum," was to the effect that while he was quite young, he was captured by white soldiers while in battle and carried away captive. Long afterward he escaped by tearing away a board from the floor of the guardhouse in which he was held prisoner. After he had gained the open he was discovered by one of the guards who immediately fired upon him several times and then cried loudly to his associate guards: "Catch him!"

Upon his return to his tribe and after telling the story of his escape he was rechristened "Ketchum." Later he became chief of the Delawares and died as chief of the tribe in 1857.

The Delawares as an Indian tribe were unusually industrious. Many of them were quite intelligent and quite readily forsook the chase and hunt as a means of livelihood and resorted to agriculture. The government gave them considerable assistance in their agricultural work. They built numerous cabins which were found mostly upon the hills and bluffs and along the well established trails through their lands. It is recorded that they were not as a rule very strict about the marriage relation. Whenever a brave took a liking to one of the female members of the tribe he usually gave her father some sort of a present, a pony, hunting knife, or some other article valuable to the Indian way of thinking, and took the girl. They lived together as long as he liked and then he either traded her off or they separated. The offspring, as a rule, went with the mother.

On May 30, 1860, the Delawares entered into a treaty at Sarcovieville, a settlement on their reservation named after a chief of their tribe, "Sarcovie," the terms of which assigned to each member of the tribe eighty acres of land in one compact body. A privilege was extended the Leavenworth, Pawnee & Western Railroad Company, now the Union Pacific Railway Company to purchase the balance of the land at not less than $1.25 per acre.

On July 4, 1866, what was left of the Delaware lands, then referred to as the Delaware Diminished Reserve, was offered for sale by the Secretary of the Interior of the United States at not less than $2.50 per acre. All of the remaining land was subsequently bought by the Leavenworth, Pawnee & Western Railroad Company, the date of transfer being January 7, 1868.

The greater portion of the tribe removed to the Indian Territory in 1867, leaving only about two hundred members who in 1868 removed to the Wichita Agency.

The Kickapoos, who followed the Delawares in the occupation of the territory of which Leavenworth County is now composed in part, ceded their lands and country on the Osage River in Missouri, October 24, 1832, by treaty to the United States Government. Subsequent to this and on November 26, 1832, they were granted a tract of land in the territory of which Kansas was later to be formed and of which Leavenworth County was to become a part, which was described as follows, to-wit:

"Beginning on Delaware line where said line crosses the left branch of Salt Creek; thence down said creek to Missouri River; thence up the Missouri River to a point thirty miles when measured on a straight line; thence westerly to a point twenty miles from Delaware line so as to include in the lands assigned to the Kickapoos at least 1,200 square miles."

The first settlement of the Kickapoo tribe on their arrival upon their new lands to take possession was at the southeastern corner of their grant or reservation, a short distance northwest of where Fort Leavenworth now stands and near the present site of Kickapoo. As a tribe they were industrious and of extremely good habits. Like a great many Indian tribes they were prone to build their villages upon high places such as hills and bluffs. Their cone shaped lodges were closely grouped. About the individual lodges were grouped such ornaments as buffalo skulls, various hides, and bits of pottery. Occasional sacrifices might be seen in the way of some gayly colored cloth or costly stuff hung over the door of the lodge of the chief, offered by him for the good fortune that the Great Spirit saw fit to allow him to enjoy. The Kickapoos were more or less religious in a sense. They believed strongly in a Great Spirit. "Kennekuk," their prophet, resented in a way the teaching of the white missionaries, holding that they, not teaching the way of the Indian prophets, were wrong. He taught long among his tribe and the major portion of the tribe were ardent followers of his doctrine. Among other things embodied in his teachings was the total abstinence from the use of liquor. He also taught that he would arise upon the third day after his death. So strong was the belief of his followers in his teachings that upon his death in 1857 from smallpox, a large number of his adherents stayed with his body until after the third day, expecting to see him arise from the dead. Almost all of those who so attended his dead body in turn contracted the disease of which he died, and in many instances it proved fatal.

By the treaty of May 18, 1854, the Kickapoos ceded the major portion of their lands to the United States Government for the sum of $20,000. They reserved in this treaty, however, a tract on the western portion of their land containing 150,000 acres, to which they moved.

Two early missions were founded upon the Kickapoo land. In May, 1836, a Catholic mission was located near the junction of Salt Creek and the Missouri River. It was established by Fathers Van Quickenborn and Hoeken, assisted by two lay brothers. It was established for the benefit of the numerous Pottawatomies who were at that time located on the Kickapoo lands. A Methodist mission was established for the Kickapoos in 1833, which was under the supervision of Rev. J. C. Berryman, of Weston, Missouri.

EARLY EXPLORATIONS

History has been held to be speculative, inferential, and actual; speculative when it records conclusions based on hypothesis founded on facts, far removed; inferential when conclusions are reasonably based on facts; and actual when facts alone are recorded. The historian in his writing deals with all three more or less in combination one with the other. This chapter is more or less inferential and speculative insofar as it deals with the visits and explorations of the earliest explorers.

When the new world was discovered and had wonderfully revealed itself to the adventurous and daring men of the Old World, the enterprise of Europe was startled into action. Those valiant men who had won laurels among the mountains of Andalusia, on the fields of Flanders, and on the battlefields of Albion, sought a more remote field for adventure. The revelation of a New World and a new race, and communication between the old and the new, provided a field of fertile imagination. The fact was more astounding to the people then than it would be to us today were we to awake some morning and find communication had been established with one or more of our nearest planets.

The heroes of the ocean despised the range of Europe as too narrow, offering to their extravagant ambition nothing but mediocrity. Ambition, avarice, and religious zeal were strangely blended, and the heroes of the main sailed to the west, as if bound on a new crusade, for infinite wealth and renown were to reward their piety, satisfy their greed, and satiate their ambition.

America was the region of romance where their heated imaginations could indulge in the boldest of delusions, where the simple ignorant native wore the most precious ornaments, the sands by the side of the clear runs of water, sparkled with shining gold. Says the historian of the ocean, these adventurous heroes speedily prepared to fly by a beckoning or a whispering wheresoever they were called. They forsook the certainties of life for the lure and hope of more brilliant success.

To win provinces with the sword, divide the wealth of empires, to plunder the accumulated treasures of some ancient Indian dynasty, to return from a roving expedition with a crowd of enslaved captives, and a profusion of spoils, soon became ordinary dreams. Fame, fortune, life and all were squandered in these visions of wealth and renown. Even if the issue was uncertain, success, greater than the boldest imagination had dared, was sometimes attained.

It would be an interesting story to trace each hero across the ocean to the American continent, and through the three great gateways thereof, through which he entered the wilds of the great West. The accounts of the explorations and exploitations into the great West reads like a romance. The trials through which these early explorers passed were enough to make the stoutest heart quail and to task the endurance of men of steel.

The earliest known claimants of the vast stretch of land and country west of the Mississippi River were the Spanish. Among the members of the crew that crossed the Atlantic with Columbus on his second voyage was a certain Juan Ponce de Leon, who had spent the greater part of his life in the military service of Spain. In the year 1513, with a squadron of three ships which he had fitted up at his own expense he set sail upon an expedition which resulted in the discovery of Florida a few miles north of the present location of the oldest city in the United States, St. Augustine. Here, Ponce de Leon and a greater portion of his crew remained for some time patiently and persistently exploring and penetrating the regions to the westward. Wild and fanciful tales were constantly poured into his ears by the various Indian tribes concerning the country further to the westward. They told him of great life-giving springs and streams of water found in the interior, a veritable paradise where the youth of those who had grown old was restored to them by bathing in the fabled waters. Ponce de Leon was old. His cheeks were deeply etched by the fingers of time. The spell of the strange wild country added new fire to his adventurous spirit. His fortune had been squandered, the lure of the fabled "Fountain of Perpetual Youth" of which the Indians told; the dream of replenishing his dwindled fortunes by conquests of new kingdoms, led him on and on. It was on his second voyage to this territory in 1521 that he was killed in a battle with Indians who resented his intrusion. His body was buried on the island of Cuba.

It was thus that the Spanish laid claim to the vast stretch of territory of which the territory of Kansas, later the State of Kansas and our own county was to be organized as part thereof.

In the year 1528, Pamphilo de Naravez, who had been appointed governor of Florida by the King of Spain, organized an expedition for the purpose of exploring the lands of which he had been made governor. With a fleet of four ships and a company of nearly 400 men under his command he set sail from Havana, Cuba. Upon his arrival in Florida he took possession of all the territory in the name of Spain and proceeded at once to diligently explore the regions to the westward. Upon his return to the sea after one of his exploring expeditions he found that the ships of the company had been spirited away or destroyed. The stranded explorers were forced to construct several rude boats and with these they started out to find the nearest Mexican post, following the gulf coast. During their voyage along the gulf coast several of their boats were wrecked and a number of the crew were drowned. Those who were not drowned were taken captive by the Indians. The cruel treatment accorded them by the savages soon led to the death of the major portion of the captives. Cabeza de Vaca, who had occupied the position of treasurer of the expedition, learned the language of the tribe as well as their customs and gained their confidence. After remaining captive six years he escaped and made his way to San Miguel, in Sonora, Mexico.

Cabeza de Vaca, who had been a member of the ill-fated Naravez expedition, had as before mentioned set out with that expedition from Havana, Cuba, in the year 1528. He had remained with Naravez and his expedition as treasurer and had been one of the members of the expedition that had been left stranded when the ships of the party disappeared. He was one of the party that had escaped drowning when the illy-constructed boats of the party were destroyed and wrecked in an attempt to reach a Mexican port and had fallen into the hands of Indian tribes as prisoner. Six years after his capture, during which he had studied the ways of the tribe, their language, and had gained their confidence, he effected his escape with a small party and started out to reach the Spanish settlements in Mexico. Upon leaving his captors on the gulf, his party proceeded north toward what they termed a great range of mountains which are believed now to have been those in northern Alabama. From thence they proceeded in a westerly direction crossing what they referred to in their story as "the large river that comes from the north" (the Mississippi). It is believed by many historians that in the course of their wanderings and explorations to the westward that they traversed the territory of which Kansas and the State of Colorado are now comprised. Whether or not this Spanish crusader and his party touched upon any of the territory of which Leavenworth County is now a part is highly conjectural. It is known that it was the custom of exploring parties in those days to follow closely main river courses. In view of the fact that Leavenworth County as originally laid out occupied all that territory of which Wyandotte County is now composed and the confluence of two great river systems center there, it is highly probable that did, Cabeza de Vaca at any time follow the course of the Missouri which led westward from the Mississippi, that he traversed territory of which either Wyandotte or Leavenworth County is now composed.

In all probability the most famous of all exploring expeditions sent out under the Spanish Government for the purpose of exploring its holdings west of the Mississippi River was that of Coronado. The expedition of which he was at the head set out from Mexico on the morning following Easter, 1540. The party consisted of some eleven hundred members. They were well equipped and supplied for a long journey. The object for which the expedition went forth was to find and take possession of the cities of Cibola, Indian cities which were said to be enormously wealthy in gold and other valuable articles. After a long and tedious journey fraught with much hardship the party reached the object for which they sought to find that they had been deceived. The cities of Cibola had nothing in the way of riches to offer them, yet they did find thereabouts provisions with which they replenished their diminished supply. After remaining for some time with the tribes of Indians thereabouts, there was brought to the ears of Coronado by one of the leaders of the numerous scouting and exploring parties he sent out, a wild fanciful tale concerning the wealth found in the kingdom of the Quivera, far to the eastward. In due time the party, again thoroughly organized and equipped, set out in search of the kingdom of Quivera. When the party reached the Arkansas River they again found their provisions low and it was decided to split the party up, allowing some to go on forward while the others proceeded upon their return trip to their base on the Rio Grande. Coronado took with him from this point on the Arkansas thirty of his best mounted troops and six foot soldiers and proceeded on in search of the kingdom which he believed the streets whereof to be paved with gold. After marching on for a period of some forty days the party halted in the fabled kingdom, only to find that they had been deceived. The wealth of which they had dreamed was nowhere to be found. The Indian guides who had attended the party finally confessed that the stories they had told the Spaniards had been told for the purpose of luring them away from the native tribes of the guides that they might not be further imposed on by the Spaniards and with the hope that after leading the party far into the desert like interior, their supplies would fail and they would eventually perish.

The exact line of march of Coronado and his party through the State of Kansas is and always will remain a matter of pure conjecture. Major Henry Inman, best known as the author of "The Santa Fe Trail," and who spent a great many years on the western frontier, believes that the expedition crossed the Kansas River near Abilene and then proceeded to the northward, striking the Missouri River in the vicinity of Atchison. He further contends that the expedition returned by following the Missouri to its junction with the Kansas River, where the party turned to the westward along the north bank of the Kansas River, proceeding as far westward as the Smoky Hill River, where they crossed the Kansas and again proceeded on to Big Creek, where they turned to the south toward the Arkansas.

Coronado in his report of the voyage to the Viceroy of Mexico stated that he had reached the fortieth degree of north latitude, and described the country thereabout as being very fertile and productive. Jaramillo, a member of the party who chronicled the expedition's progress, mentions the name of a large river, the "Saint Peter and Saint Paul," which is believed by historians to be none other than the Arkansas. After reaching the province of Quivera, he tells of the party's learning of another large river to the northward which was named by them the "Teucarea." Gen. J. H. Simpson in his "Annals of Kansas" expresses the belief that this latter river was the Missouri of today.

The expedition of Coronado it is estimated cost the Spanish approximately one-half million dollars and netted them practically nothing. It is recorded that more than a hundred years elapsed before the country over which Coronado traveled was again visited by any member of the white race.

As a rule the Spanish explorers treated the Indians with barbarous cruelty. Their great hopes of limitless riches and conquered provinces became as ashes in their hands. Their men, after long marches for months through the wilderness, became tattered, disgruntled and surly. They were burdens upon the red men whom they visited in their different villages, and consumed their maize and provisions. The Indians were distrustful and suspicious, and an inborn hatred for the white man instantly grew in their breasts, that was handed down by tradition with growing rancor, to future generations. The fabled cities of Cibola were found to be miserable mud huts. Indian guides lured them from place to place with wonderful stories in order that the white men might be kept away from their own country.

The earliest known explorations upon which the French based any claim to the territory of which Leavenworth County is now a part were those of Jacques Marquette and Louis Joliet. In May, 1673, Marquette, who was a French missionary at the time with station on Lake Superior, set out with five companions and three canoes to the southwestward in search of rich Indian tribes and valuable mines, the stories of which had been borne to his ears by various Indians. Probably this was merely a secondary object of the expedition, as it is known that one of the purposes was to establish a mission among the Illinois Indians, and another to carry the gospel to the tribes west of the Mississippi.

The party set out from the Straits of Michilimackinac and went by way of Green Bay, the Fox River, the Wisconsin River and then into the Mississippi, which they followed to the southward to near the mouth of the Arkansas. It is known that they explored the Missouri River for some distance up its course from the Mississippi and in their various reports of their travels they refer to the Missouri as the "Pekitano"

Having heard the story of the great river whose course Mar and Joliet had followed on their trip to the southward, Robert Cavaier de la Salle conceived the idea that it was none other than the great river that had been discovered by De Soto in 1541. With a view of opening it for navigation La Salle led an expedition that set out from the Illinois River, February 6, 1682, with three barges. Upon entering the Mississippi, La Salle gave it the name, "Colbert." At various points along the river on their journey to the south they erected crosses and took possession of the vast tracts to the westward in the name of France. On April 9, 1682, the party entered the Gulf of Mexico. By right of discovery they claimed all of the lands and country west of the Mississippi for the French Government.

Being desirous of getting into actual possession of the vast area of territory which they had come into ownership of through the right of discovery, the French Government on September 14, 1712, granted the Louisiana Territory, which this country had come to be known as, to one Anthony Crozat, a merchant, for a period of ten years, the said Crozat to have perpetual propriety of all mines and minerals he should discover subject to certain conditions, and other stipulations. Later, Crozat retroceded this vast tract to the French Government and they immediately and under similar conditions ceded these tracts to a company which offered many inducements in the way of land, etc., to emigrants.

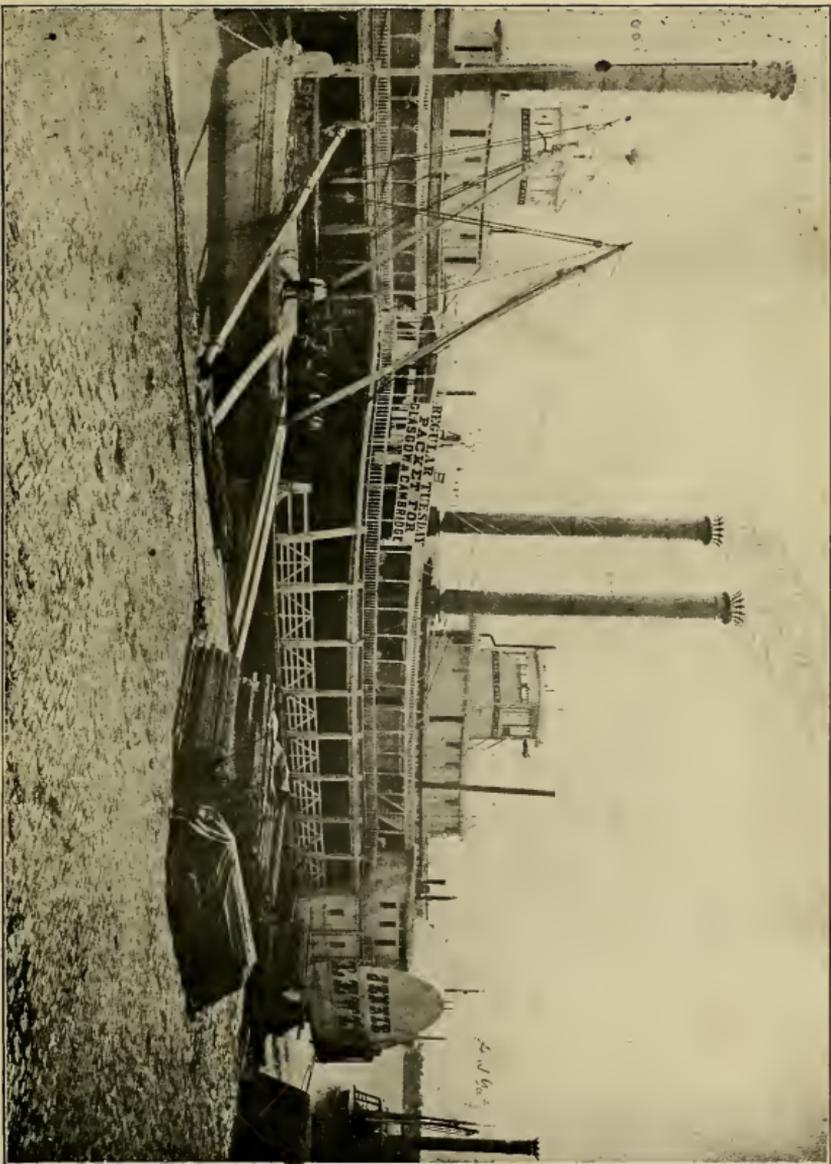

In the year 1719, M. Du Tisnett, who had previously been in the service of M. Crozat when the French Government had ceded him the Louisiana Territory, was ordered to make an expedition to west of the Mississippi. It was during his travels that he crossed and explored a great deal in territory of which the State of Kansas is now a part. He visited many of the native tribes and erected many crosses, taking possession of all the territory explored and discovered by him in the name of France. The principal object of this expedition was to locate valuable mines the story of which had been poured into the ears of the French as well as those of the Spanish explorers. Du Tisnett is commonly referred to by various historians as Du Tisne. He was the first French explorer to give definite information concerning the native tribes of Kansas.

In order to protect their great interests west of the Mississippi, the French, as early as 1722, commenced the construction of a fort on the Missouri River near where the Osage River empties into it, which they named Fort Orleans. It was completed in the year 1723 and was placed in command of M. De Bourgmont. De Bourgmont in the year 1724 made an extensive trip of exploration to the westward about and through the territory of which the State of Kansas is now composed. He entered what is now the bounds of Kansas near the present site of Atchison, Kansas. One of the objects of the expedition was to try and effect a reconciliation among numerous native tribes who were at war among each other. After visiting among the tribes for a considerable length of time, during which he succeeded in bringing about an amicable adjustment of the various difficulties among a large number of the tribes, he returned to Fort Orleans November 5, 1724. It is almost a certainty that De Bourgmont during his travels touched, either himself or some of his party, on territory which now goes to make up Leavenworth County.

After Jefferson had negotiated the purchase of the great Louisiana tracts of land from the French in 1803 there arose a desire on his part to have the territory acquired thoroughly explored, and investigated with a view of learning what uses it might be best adapted to. Accordingly in the year 1804 the first American exploring expedition that had ever set foot on the vast expanse west of the Mississippi set out from St. Louis under the supervision of Capts. William Clarke and Merriwether Lewis. The party in full consisted of from thirty-five to forty-two men, accounts differing; the date of the expedition's starting was May 10, 1804; they traveled in three boats and made their way very slowly up stream. As a rule hunting parties proceeded along the banks with the boats as they wended their way against the muddy current and it was through the agency of these parties that the party was supplied with much of its provisions. On June 27, 1804, the party reached the present site of Kansas City, Kansas, where they encamped. On July 2, 1804, they encamped near the present site of Leavenworth, in all probability a little to the north and nearer the fort. The journals kept by the party refer to an island in the river to the north several miles under date of this encampment, which was in all probability the island known as Kickapoo Island these days. There is no question but the members of this party and it wouldn't be unreasonable to say the leaders of the expedition had tramped over considerable of the territory comprised in the eastern part of Leavenworth County. The expedition as a whole was most successful in every way. The trip consumed about two years of time and much of the territory embodied in the Louisiana Purchase was traversed, mapped and thoroughly explored.

For twelve years after the Lewis and Clarke expedition into the Northwest nothing was done further in the way of exploring the regions traversed by the first mentioned parties. In the year 1819 an expedition was sent out by the United States Government for the purpose of arriving at and collecting all scientific knowledge possible pertaining to the newly acquired territory. The expedition was in charge of Major J. C. Long and set out from Fort Osage on the Osage River in Missouri in 1819, and proceeded up the Missouri River by steamboat to Council Bluffs, where winter quarters were established for the winter of 1819-1820. The expedition required two years and while much scientific data was gathered, the practical value derived therefrom was insignificant. One of the chief features of the expedition was in the fact that it was the first expedition as well as the first men of any kind or race to proceed up the Missouri River in a steamboat.

A bit of exploring of a very different nature than that hitherto set out was done between the years 1805 and 1815 in the valley of the Kansas River by Daniel Boone. Boone, the most famous of American hunters and trappers, Indian fighters and pioneers, was one of the first white men of American birth to visit the Kansas Valley. His grandfather, George Boone, was born in Devonshire, England, 1668, and came to America in 1717, locating in Berks County, Pennsylvania. Daniel, the grandchild, was born in Bucks County, Pennsylvania, February 11, 1735. In the year 1796 he lost much of his land holdings in Kentucky through defective titles, which led him to renounce all allegiance to the government and resort to the wild frontier. Later he declared his intention while residing in the territory west of the Missouri of becoming a citizen of Spain, and was through this given a position of overseeing certain Indian districts. It was his wont and habit to take long hunts and to go on trapping tours that kept him much away from his home country. In that interval of time elapsing between 1805 and 1815 he is known to have hunted and trapped up and down the Kansas River Valley for a distance of 100 miles or more from its mouth. The Kansas River, as it does, touching upon the southern end of Leavenworth County and the southern extremity of the county being rough and consisting in places of rugged bluffs, it is not unreasonable to believe that Boone in the ten years which he spent in this river valley, touched many times upon Leavenworth County territory and hunted and trapped thereon. This great son of the wild and untamed frontier died September 26, 1820, in his ninety-second year.

John Peck, the noted Baptist preacher, in his memoirs of the Louisiana Territory, described Boone thus:

"His high, bold forehead was slightly bald, and his silvered locks were combed smooth, his countenance was ruddy and fair and exhibited the simplicity of a child, a smile frequently played over his countenance; in conversation his voice was soft and melodious; at repeated interviews an irritable expression was never heard; his clothing was the coarse, plain manufacture of the family; but everything denoted that kind of comfort that was congenial to his habits and feelings and evinced a busy, happy, old age. His room was a part of a range of log cabins kept in order by his affectionate daughters and granddaughters. Every member of the household appeared to take delight in administering to his comforts; he was sociable and communicative in replying to questions, but did not introduce incidents of his own history. He was intelligent, for he had treasured up the experience and observation of more than fourscore years. 'Not moody and unsociable as if desirous of shunning society and civilization'."

Among other explorers whose deeds and names are not recorded, yet who played an important part in the early settlement of Leavenworth County, were those children of the river, the woods and frontier, who intermingled with the various tribes, frequently marrying into the tribe; who knew the habits of wild game with the same degree of adeptness as did the savage; who was as skillful at the hunt, in the chase or with the traps; who were generally referred to as Coureur-de-bois.

These men were as a rule of French descent. They were always found domiciled along the various rivers, where they depended upon their traps and hunting prowess to provide them a means of livelihood. They were free and easy of manner, peaceful of disposition and quickly adapted themselves to the customs of the various tribes. They traveled by boat exclusively and as the trading posts moved westward they preceded them, usually at long distances.

Leavenworth.—While the preceding chapters deal with history, largely speculative and inferential, leading up to the year 1804, when the United States took possession of Upper Louisiana, the present chapter is based on actual facts from the year 1827 on and deals most pertinently with that section of Leavenworth County comprising its northeastern part.

The history of Leavenworth County from the time of the red men and the first hardy adventurers and pioneers involves indeed a wondrous story which is well worth preserving. States and nations preserve their history, but the story of a county, its creation and development touches a chord of home life and home making which is nearer and dearer than that which is purely informational.

The beginning of settlement of the territory of which Leavenworth County is now composed came when Col. Henry Leavenworth, Third United States Infantry, was directed in March, 1827, to proceed up the Missouri River with four companies of his regiment and to select a site within twenty miles of the mouth of the Little Platte River to be used as a location for a permanent cantonment. The story of how Col. Leavenworth, not being able to decide upon a suitable location on the Missouri side which he was instructed to do, and of his fixing upon the present site of Fort Leavenworth has been told in detail in other parts of this volume as well as the approval of the selected site which became official September 19, 1827. With the establishment of this military post, which was known as Cantonment Leavenworth, there was opened up the first post-office in the territory which was known as Cantonment Leavenworth or "La Platte," Clay County, Missouri, Clay County being the Missouri county that joined the post on the east, the river separating them. This postoffice was established May 29, 1828, and Phillip G. Rand was the first postmaster.

The first white settlers who came into the territory were mostly farmers and mechanics who secured positions tending the farm on the government reservation and were employed in various capacities in and around the post. There were also some white missionaries, who had come in previously with emigrant tribes of Indians. After the passage of the territorial act of 1854 numerous settlers flocked in and proceeded to take up claims, mostly in close proximity to the present location of the fort. All of those who had come in previous to this year could not in any way establish any right or title to their lands, it being ceded by previous treaties to occupying Indian tribes. When the Territorial Act of 1854 passed a great majority of the emigrants who came into the territory were under the impression that the lands were then subject to pre-emption under the pre-emption laws of the United States. Yet when the Delawares in May, 1854, ceded the greater portion of their lands in what is now Leavenworth County, reserving a strip ten miles wide along the north bank of the Kansas River in the southern end of the county, it appears that the lands so ceded were not under the terms and conditions of treaty subject to settlement but were to be sold to the highest bidder after having been surveyed. Many of the emigrants who came into the territory of which this county is now composed were from Platte County and Weston, Missouri. They knew the value of these new lands and acting upon the advice of David R. Atchison, then United States Senator from Missouri, came over and took up all land possible. So strong was this rush for land that followed the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska Act that it is said by the month of June, 1854, there were very few acres of land in what is now Leavenworth County that had not been staked out and claimed.

What is believed to have been the first land "staked" and claimed upon what is now the present site of Leavenworth City after the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska Act was that "staked" and claimed by Gen.

George W. Gist, John C. Gist and Samuel Farnandis. Later when the Leavenworth Town Company was organized Gen. George W. Gist was chosen its president and it was he that platted and surveyed the original townsite. To this day it is known as the "Gist Survey." The plat of this survey was filed in the surveyor general's office at Fort Leavenworth, December 20, 1854. John C. Gist, who was a son of Gen. George W. Gist, and Samuel Farandis were also members of the town company. John C. Gist and Samuel Farandis "squatted" upon their respective claims June 12, 1854.

On June 10, 1854, the "squatters," having had more or less contention in the way of getting valid titles to their respective claims, held a public meeting at Rively's store in Salt Creek Valley and drew up a series of resolutions with reference to their respective rights and holdings. Among other things done at the meeting it was decided by the "squatters" to relinquish any claims that they might have to land which in any way conflicted with those of the Leavenworth Town Company, which company was then in process of formation and was definitely organized June 13, 1854. This was the first "squatter's" meeting ever held in the territory of which Kansas is constituted as well as in Leavenworth County.

Despite the fact that the "squatters" were held to have no right to settle upon the lands lately ceded by the Delaware Indians until the lands had been surveyed and sold at public sale, they nevertheless lost no time in staking out the town of Leavenworth, selling shares in the town company and proceeding in general and on a large scale to occupy and claim the territory. The first sale of town lots of the city to take place in the city of Leavenworth occurred on Monday, October 9, 1854. Previous to this the town site had been cleared of all timber and underbrush by "Uncle George" Keller, who had been given the contract. He began this work about June 15, 1854, and employed eighty men and finished the job about the middle of September. The "Herald," Leavenworth's weekly paper, under date of October 13, 1854, contained the following article with reference to the sale:

"On Monday last, at 11 o'clock A. M., the sale of lots in this town was commenced. There was a large assemblage of people on the ground, many of whom had come from a distance for the purpose of attending the sale. The survey had been completed and charts of the town drawn. The streets had been cleared of rubbish, and marked with their names. Those parallel with the river are numbered as far out as Seventh Street; the cross streets are named for Indian tribes, and commencing on the south, are as follows: Choctaw, Cherokee, Delaware, Shawnee, Seneca, Miami, Osage, Pottawatomie, Ottawa, Kickapoo, Kiowa, Dacotah, Pawnee, and Cheyenne. The streets parallel with the river are sixty feet wide, and the cross streets are sixty-one feet wide, except Delaware, which is seventy feet. The lots are twenty-four feet front, by 125 feet deep, and there are thirty-two lots in each block. Through the center of each block runs an alley fifteen feet wide. Seven lots have been laid off next the river in warehouse lots, the fronts of which are about 150 feet from the water's edge. All the space between Main or First street and the river, except these several blocks, has been donated for a levee and esplanade.

"The terms of the sale were one-third cash and the balance payable when the title is secured. G. W. McLane, of Weston, and W. S. Palmer, of Platte City, were the auctioneers on the first day. Fifty-two lots were sold, at an average of $140.00; on the second day fifty lots were sold, at an average of $120.00; making the average of both days' sale about $130.00. Only four lots were sold out of the thirty-two in each block. The sales were distributed equally over the entire site. The purchases were generally made for immediate improvement, but a small number having been sold to shareholders. Every lot that was offered was sold, and many others could have been disposed of if time had permitted. The highest price paid for any one was $390.00, the lowest, $50.00. It was recollected that no lot exceeded twenty-four feet front."

The Leavenworth Town Company, which was permanently organized June 13, 1854, was made up in the great part of citizens of Missouri, as follows: George W. Gist, Lorenzo D. Bird, D. H. Stephens, L. W. Caples, William H. Adams, Oliver Diefendorf, L. A. Wisely, Amos Rees, Samuel Norton, William S. Murphy, Sam Farnandis, Meret Johnson, G. H. Keller, William G. Caples, H. Miles Moore, Joseph Murphy, John C. Gist, G. B. Panton, Edward Mix, Joseph B. Evans, Malcolm Clark, John Bull, Frans Impey, James F. Bruner, Frederick Starr, J. D. Todd, A. Thomas Kyle, Sackfield Maclin, E. A. Ogden, Samuel F. Few.

The officers of the company were as follows: Gen. George W. Gist President; H. Miles Moore, Secretary; Joseph B. Evans, Treasurer. Amos Rees, L. D. Bird, and Major E. A. Ogden were selected as a board of trustees, and the committee on by-laws was composed of L. D. Bird, O. Diefendorf, and H. Miles Moore. H. Miles Moore was until his death considered one of the ablest authorities on the early history of Leavenworth City and Leavenworth County. His classification of the members of the original Town Company was as follows: Ministers, three; lawyers, four; doctors, five; printers, two; merchants, four; surveyors, one; army officers, two; army clerks, one; farmers, eight.

The company staked off and claimed a tract of land comprising some 220 acres of land on the present site of the city of Leavenworth and proceeded at once to have it surveyed and divided into lots. The organization was perfected on June 13, 1854, and on October 9th, following, the first public sale of lots was held in the city as will be seen in account previously set out in this chapter. Shortly after the platting of the town a discussion arose among the members of the by-laws committee as to what the town should be named and the majority of the committee, L. D. Bird and O. Diefendorf, favored naming the city "Douglas" in honor of the author of the Kansas-Nebraska Act, Sen. Stephen A. Douglas of Illinois. It was due to the influence of H. Miles Moore that the name "Leavenworth" was chosen. The naming of the streets from Choctaw, north to the reservation after the various western Indian tribes was done upon the suggestion of Major E. A. Ogden.

With the establishing of the city and the selling of the lots, the town immediately took on an industrial aspect. Houses were erected as quickly as possible and in the meantime tents and various other structures that provided shelter were pressed into use. The first dwelling house to be erected within the present confines of the city limits is said to have been erected at the corner of 4th and Walnut streets in 1854 by Jeremiah Clark. This house, which was afterward moved to a location on the alley between 4th and 5th streets and Spruce and Olive remained standing until the summer of 1919 when it was torn down.

A saw mill, one of the most needed industries at this time, began operations a short distance north of the mouth of Three-Mile Creek. It was owned and operated by Capt. W. S. Murphy and Capt. Simeon Scruggs, the partnership being known as Murphy & Scruggs. H. Miles Moore, in his valuable work, "Early History of Leavenworth City and County" tells of his advancing the members of this firm the sum of $96.00 with which to pay the steamboat freight on their mill and of his having to take his pay long afterwards in cottonwood lumber at the rate of $35.00 a thousand feet. Capt. W. S. Murphy, one of the partners in the project was a member of the Leavenworth Town Company. Before his coming to Leavenworth he was a very prominent citizen of the city of Weston, Missouri.

He had served as a captain in the Mexican war under General Doniphan. Captain Scruggs had, too, been a resident of Weston before coming to Leavenworth and had served as constable there for a number of years. Following the erection of the saw-mill Captain Sawyer erected a dwelling house near northeast corner of Second and Shawnee streets and moved his family there from Weston, Missouri. Their mill did a flourishing business until the death of Captain Murphy when the business affairs became involved in litigation which resulted in Captain Scruggs losing much of his interests. After this he removed with his family to a farm northwest of Kickapoo and just across the line in Atchison County where he lived the remaining days of his life. The mill later came to be known as Col. Isaac Young's Eclipse Mill.

Stores and storerooms were opened soon, the first being that of Lewis N. Rees which was erected in the summer of 1854. The store which Rees erected was upon the present site of the Union Depot and was what is commonly known as a general merchandise store. Rees also acted as postmaster without pay as an accommodation to the public for some time until he was officially appointed. The postoffice remained in his store of the Levee for some time when it was later moved further up town as a matter of public accommodation. Numerous other stores of various nature soon sprung into existence. Engleman Bros. built the second store in the city. It was located on Main street about the middle of the block between Delaware and Cherokee. H. Miles Moore, in his "Early History of Leavenworth City and County," mentions the following stores that began operation in the city during the years 1854 and 1855: Nelson McCracken, on Water street near Choctaw; Adam Fisher, general store, southwest corner Water street and Cherokee; James L. Beyers and M. M. Jewett, grocery, Water street and Choctaw; White & Fields, dry goods, Water street below Cherokee; A. M. Clark, grocery, south side of Cherokee, west of Third street; Cohn & Abel, general store, on Water street; Col. J. C. Clarkson, general store, southwest corner of Cherokee and Second; Hall & Walcott, dry goods, south side of Cherokee between Second and Third streets; George Russell, stove and tin, east side of Main street near Delaware; Strass, Block & Rosenfield, dry goods and clothing, between Third and Fourth streets on south side of Cherokee street; Shannon & Van Doren, general store on Cherokee street between Second and Third; James Dixon, dry goods, on Cherokee between Second and Third; Meyer's Grocery, on Levee north of Cherokee; Philip Rothschild's clothing, on Levee north of Delaware; E. Cody, grocery, west of Main street between Delaware and Cherokee streets; R. E. Allen, drugs, on Main street, west side, north of Delaware street; William Russell, dry goods and outfitting, on east side of Main street where Bittman & Todd's wholesale grocery now stands. The latter, Mr. Moore states, was the largest institution of its kind on the Missouri River above St. Louis.

A newspaper began operations in the city before there was a building in the city in which to house its plant. The first edition of the paper was published under the shade of a large elm tree that stood near the northwest corner of Cherokee and Front or Levee streets. The type of the original issue was set up by W. H. Adams. The first issue bore the date of September 15, 1854. The second issue appeared September 22, 1854, and was published in a one-story frame cottonwood house, the first erected in the city of Leavenworth which was situated south of Delaware on Levee or Front street. W. H. Adams, the original owner of the paper which was known as the "Kansas Herald," was also one of the original thirty-two members of the Leavenworth Town Company. He was a son-in-law of Gen. George W. Gist, president of the Leavenworth Town Company and a brother-in-law of Hon. John C. Gist, who was also a member of the Town Company. A certain Mr. Osborn was associated with Adams in the newspaper adventure at first possibly in the way of a printer more than anything else. He had little or no capital invested and was retired from the business after a period of about six weeks. He later became a U. S. Deputy Marshal under I. B. Donaldson. With the retirement of Osborn from the newspaper, W. H. Adams sold an interest in the paper to Gen. Lucien J. Eastin, who became the active editor of the paper from then on. General Eastin was originally from Missouri. He remained in Kansas until about the year 1859 when he again returned to Missouri to become editor of a Missouri paper. During his stay in Kansas he was elected a member of the first Territorial Council from Leavenworth County in 1855 and 1856.

In 1855 H. Rives Pollard, a young Virginian, became associated with General Eastin in the editorship and publication of the "Herald," the latter having acquired complete control of the paper at that time. From this time on the paper became an unusually bitter pro-slavery organ. In 1859 General Eastin sold out his interest and removed to Missouri. William H. Gill, who became editor at that time, tempered the policy of the paper to great extent, going so far at one time as to support Stephen A.

Douglas for the nomination to the presidency. In 1860 the paper was again sold to William P. Fain, a former U. S. marshal, who in turn sold it to R. C. Satterlee, B. R. Wilson and C. W. Helm. The financial status of the paper at this time had gotten low and the publication of the paper was no longer prosperous. Publication was suspended in June, 1861, the last issue being under date of June, 27, 1861. Only two weeks previous to this R. C. Satterlee, one of the owners, was shot and killed by Col. D. R. Anthony.

The great influx of emigration into the territory surrounding the city and the city itself in those early days necessitated the opening of hotels and other places where the emigrants might be housed. George Keller, commonly known and referred to in those days as "Uncle George" and one of the most resourceful of the town's citizenry at the time took advantage of the opportunity and opened up the first hotel erected in the city as well as in the new territory. The hotel which was erected in 1854 was a frame structure and was located at the northwest corner of Main streets and Delaware. It was a two-story affair and was situated upon much higher ground than is found at the location this day, the ground thereabout having been submitted to much grading and excavating since those days. A. T. Kyle, a son-in-law of Keller, was associated with him in the conducting and managing of the institution. Before coming to Leavenworth and Kansas territory Keller was a Missourian and lived near Weston. When the town was platted and mapped out by the Town Company Keller was given the job of cleaning the brush from the townsite as well as opening up the various streets. The Keller and Kyle hostelry was operated for about a year when it was sold. Kyle soon after removed to Weston, Missouri, where he engaged for a number of years in the conducting of a general merchandise store. Later he returned to Leavenworth County and settled at Lansing, Kansas, where he and his wife conducted a boarding house for the officers of the Kansas penitentiary.

After selling out his interests in the "Old Leavenworth Hotel," "Uncle George" Keller subsequently engaged in the hotel business in various parts of the city. At one time he was connected with the management of the "Fisher-Parry" Hotel which was later remodeled and re-named the "Old Mansion House". This famous old hostelry was located at the southeast corner of 5th and Shawnee Streets. It early became such a rendezvous for Free State men that it earned the title "Abolition Hill" and Abolition Hotel by those of Southern sympathy.

Keller for years took an active interest in early day politics. He served as a member of the First Free State Territorial Legislature of 1857-1858, and also later after the building of the State Penitentiary at Lansing he served as warden from 1867 to 1869. After leading a very active life in the city during its early days and associating very much in the building up of the county he retired to his farm a short distance south of the little village of Springdale in the western end of the county where he died.

While the "Old Leavenworth Hotel," under the managership of Keller and Kyle, was always well conducted, yet it came into early disrepute especially so by those of Southern sympathies. "Uncle George" Keller, while a Missourian in every sense of the word, never approved of the tactics of the South in trying to force slavery upon the newly organized territory of Kansas. Consequently his attitude was frowned upon by all Southerners who had emigrated to Leavenworth in those days. It was this feeling that led several radical Southerners to organize a company and solicit subscriptions for the purpose of erecting a new hotel in the city of Leavenworth. The city was growing very rapidly and the proposition met with much favor as the accommodations of the "Old Leavenworth Hotel" were more or less limited. H. P. Johnson, known as "Hog" Johnson, a rabid pro-slavery advocate of those days, solicited the subscriptions. With the funds that were thus raised the "Old Planters Hotel" which is now situated at northeast corner of Main and Shawnee streets, was erected in 1855.

One of the terms and conditions of the membership of the Association was:

"That the hotel was to be owned by Southern men and was to be conducted on exclusive Southern principles."

This was looked upon with much disfavor by the Abolitionists and Free State men of those days and for several years there was much antagonism shown toward the hotel on their part.

The original structure was of brick and was four stories in height. It was first managed and conducted by McCarthy & McMeekin, both of whom were originally from Missouri and of strong pro-slavery tendencies. In 1857 the hotel was sold to Len T. Smith and Col. Jepp Rice who operated it for a period of seven years. Both Smith and Rice were Northerners and not wishing to entirely change the policy of the business they strove to strike a happy medium. They catered to both the Northern and Southern trade and assured each of equally fair and honest treatment, a policy which boomeranged against them from both sides for some time. An amusing incident of the Smith and Rice policy is mentioned by the late H. Miles Moore in his work, "Early History of Leavenworth City and County," in which he tells of the proprietors hiring two bartenders, one pro-slavery, the other Free State. When a thirsty citizen of the South would happen into the place of business and between drinks proceed to give vent to his opinion on matters of importance of the day he immediately found an interested listener and sympathizer in the person of the Southern barkeep. When a Free State man of like inclinations and contrary opinion happened along he found a friend in the barkeeper at the other end of the bar.

Numerous incidents of note attended the operation of the famous old hostelry in its early days. At one time a negro slave that had escaped from his master in Kentucky was apprehended while working in the barber shop there. He was arrested and was going to be returned to his master when Free State men interfered. Controversies and altercations immediately arose between the various factions which finally resulted in the Free State men's refusing to allow the negro to be placed in jail to await his hearing before the U. S. Commissioner, James McDowell. As a sort of a compromise the negro was finally placed in a room on the fourth floor where he was under a guard consisting of two Free State and two pro-slavery men. During the night the Free State men in numbers made an assault upon the room and after liberating the negro, he refused to accompany them. This attempt at liberation so enraged the pro-slavery adherents that they immediately brought out the "old Kickapoo Cannon" and planted it facing the hotel, at the same time passing the word down the line that unless the slave was turned over to them they would proceed to destroy the hotel. The negro was finally spirited away under a heavy guard and appeared before the U. S. Commissioner the following day for a hearing. During the hearing some one called the commissioner outside and during his stay the negro was spirited away. He was never re-captured.

During the days when the Civil War was at its height more or less guerilla warfare was carried on across the river. It was not an uncommon thing for the windows on the east side of the building to be shot out by guerillas under the leadership of Cy Gordon who would gather his men together on the Missouri River sandbars and fire at the hotel and the building south of it owned by Col. D. R. Anthony. On March 17, 1879, Dan Smith, a brother of the proprietor, Len T. Smith, was shot and killed on the west steps of the hotel by a party named Lattin following an altercation over a horse. Smith had attacked Lattin with a hatchet, cutting him in several places before he was shot by the latter. Lattin was afterward acquitted of the crime of murder.

Probably no other western hotel can boast of having entertained in its day more notable early day characters as can the old Planters House. Stephen A. Douglas, the author of the Kansas-Nebraska Act and Senator from Illinois, made one of his famous speeches from the balcony there. Abraham Lincoln stopped there on his visit to Leavenworth. Gen. William T. Sherman, famous for his march through the Southern states during the latter part of the Civil War and who later came to Leavenworth to practice law, stayed at the old Planters while he remained here engaged in legal practice.

Among other hostelries that sprang into existence during the early days of the city of Leavenworth was that one located at the Southwest corner of what is now 5th and Shawnee streets. The original owner of this hotel was George Keller, the original owner of the old Leavenworth Hotel at Main and Delaware streets. In 1857 Keller sold out his interest to Adam Fisher, one of the oldest settlers of the city, who at once proceeded to remodel the place and enlarged it some. It was then named the Fisher House. Subsequent to this the place was leased to a party named Parry and came to be known as the Parry House or "Fisher-Parry" House. Insley and Kiser later purchased the place and it began operations under the name of "The Mansion House". It rapidly came in favor as a hotel, being especially favored by Free State men which led the Pro-Slavery forces to refer to it as Abolition Hill. At that time the ground was much higher at this particular point than now, it being graded down some fifteen or twenty feet when the present buildings were erected on the site and the streets paved.

Among the numerous other hotels that operated in the city of Leavenworth during the middle and late '50's was the "Shawnee Hotel" which began operations in 1856. It was owned by Miles Norton and was located on the north side of Shawnee Street between Main and Second streets. The "Rennick House" was built in 1857 on the southwest corner of Main and Seneca streets by Doctor Rennick, an early day physician. It was a three-story frame building. Later the name was changed to the "Brevort

House". The "Woodward House" was built in 1858 on northeast corner of 4th and Seneca streets. It was afterward known as the "Morris House" and later as the "Washington House". It is still standing though much the worse for wear and tear. It has long since been abandoned as a hotel and has been unoccupied for the past seven or eight years. The original "Pennsylvania House" was built in 1856 on northwest corner of Main and Cherokee streets. It was burned down at an early date. A hotel by the same name was later started on the north side of Shawnee street between Second and Third streets. It was on the identical site of the present site of the "Wilkins Hotel". Still later an early day hotel by the name of the "Pennsylvania House" began operations at the southeast corner of Broadway and Sioux streets. It was owned and operated by Hubbard Frazier and was built in the late fifties. The "Pittsburg House" was also built during the late fifties at the southwest corner of Cherokee and Front or Levee streets. It was operated by a famous early day character known as "Pap" Hancock. The "Merchants Hotel" was built in 1858 by Adam Fisher on the south side of Cherokee street between Main and Second. It was a brick structure three stories in height. It was operated as a hotel for a number of years by Adam Fisher who was an experienced hotel man, having previously operated the old Fisher Hotel at Fifth and Shawnee street and the "Fisher-Parry" House at the same place. "Harmony Hall" was built and operated as a hotel and public hall in 1855 by an old Swiss by the name of Jean-de-Arms. It was located at the northeast corner of Second and Choctaw streets. Among other famous early day hostelries were the "Railroad Hotel" located near Walnut and Main streets; "Poor Jake's House" situated on the southeast corner of Main and Choctaw streets, conducted by Jacob Stroble, an early day politician; "The Leavenworth House" located at northwest corner of Fourth and Cherokee streets, now known as "The Imperial Hotel; the "McCarthy Hotel," owned and operated by an early day politician named Timothy McCarthy; the "Second Ward House" located on the south side of Cherokee street about the middle of the block between Second and Third streets, operated by William Cranston; the "St. George Hotel" located near the northwest corner of Second and Delaware streets; the "Balensloe House" located at the northwest corner of Seventh and Kickapoo streets, operated by Capt. John J. Murphy, and the "Half-Way House" located on Sioux street about the middle of the block between Seventh and Broadway on the south side.

Scarcely had the city of Leavenworth got well under way of existence when flour mills began operations, being at the time a very necessary industry, yet meeting with great obstacles in the carrying on of their business. The first flour mill to be erected was built in 1857 at the northwest corner of Main and Short streets by Earle & Bunbing. It was a two-story brick structure approximately forty-five by one hundred feet in dimension. It was not the roller type of mill prevalent these days but the flour was made through a process of crushing between stones or what was known as "burrs". There was not a great deal of wheat grown in the community hereabout at the time and as the mill required considerable money to be invested to get it on an operating basis, it did not prove to be a profitable enterprise. After a short time it was abandoned as a flour mill and the building was occupied as a furniture factory by Woods & Abernathy. Among the other flour mills that were later started was one by Capt. Elijah Wilhite, known as the "Wilhite Mill". It was located along the river under what is now known as the South Esplanade. The "Koehler Mill" was built in 1865 on Delaware street near Broadway by Philip Koehler. It was a brick structure three stories in height. The business failed a number of years later and passed into the hands of Hines & Eaves who later sold it to H. D. Rush. Rush enlarged the capacity of the mill and built the elevator that stands to the west of the original structure. This mill was later destroyed by fire. It stood on the site where the Vogel Box Factory is now located. The "Plummer Mill" was built near the intersection of Kickapoo and Main streets in the year 1872. This mill was also sold out later to H. D. Rush who enlarged it. It too was burned down in the year 1878. Possibly one of the most successful of early flour mill industries was that engaged in by A. B. Havens and Paul Havens who built what was known as the "Havens Mill" a short distance south of the bridge over Three Mile Creek on Main street. The location originally taken up by this mill site is now occupied by the railroad tracks of the local terminal company. The mill was a three-story frame building and was equipped with all of the latest machinery available in those days. It was burned down like a great many other early day business institutions, the fire occurring May 28, 1882.

Among other mills which might in a way be termed later day milling industries was the "White Mill" which was erected and operated by a party named White. This mill was located on Choctaw street, south side, near Fifth street. It was later sold to H. D. Rush. This is the same mill as is now known and operated as The Leavenworth Milling Company. The Kelly & Lysle Milling Company owned and operated a mill on the north side of Choctaw street near the intersection of Sixth street. This mill site is now occupied by the Lysle Milling Company. Another mill of the '80's was located near the intersection of Fifth and Oak streets. It was built in 1886. This mill operated at considerable loss for some time owing to its not being on a railroad and having to go to the expense of having the wheat hauled to the mill and the finished product. It was later sold to Thomas Ashby and has been operated as a corn meal mill for a number of years past. An oat meal mill was constructed during the early '80's at the northeast corner of Main and Delaware streets. It was very successful from its inception. The mill was operated by S. F. North and occupied a building which stood immediately north of the Union Station. It was destroyed by fire a short time after its beginning operations. A woolen mill was put in operation during the early days of the city known as the "Leavenworth Woolen Mills." It was erected in 1857 on a location immediately across Cherokee street from what is now known as the Klemp Furniture Factory. The original promoters of this industry were L. N. Latta and W. H. Hastings. It met the fate of many other early day mills, being destroyed by fire at an early date. The old "Latta" House originally owned by Judge L. N. Latta, one of the proprietors, is still standing near the former mill site. The Leavenworth Carpet Mills began operations in the city in 1870 on the south side of Choctaw street near where the Great Western Foundry now stands between Second and Third streets. It prospered for a time and was destroyed by cyclone May 24, 1878.

Among other industries that put in their appearance early in the city of Leavenworth during its early settlement was the brewing industry. The first brewery to be built in the city was that built in the fall of 1855 by Fritzen & Mundee. It was a two-story stone structure and was located along the bank of the river immediately adjoining what is now the South Esplanade. This brewery was operated for a number of years and was later sold out to Capt. Elijah Wilhite who used the building for the operation of his flour mill known as the "Wilhite Mill." Another early day brewery was that known as the "Kuntz Brewery." It was located on South Fourth street along the south bank of Three Mile Creek immediately across the creek from the present site of the Fisher Machine Works. The large square stone house standing on the bank overlooking the former site of this brewery was built by the proprietor, Joseph Kuntz, for his family. Underneath the present location of the house which has been known for some time as the Ferrill property immense subterranean vaults were constructed for holding the beer until it had reached certain stages of fermentation and aging. A road to the brewery building proper led in from Fifth street on the west. A large veranda and grove adjoined the house in early days and was a favorite resort of summer evenings to which thirsty citizens of the city flocked for refreshments and an evening's entertainment, music generally being furnished in the nature of some first-class band. After the death of the proprietor the property fell into the hands of his nephew, Charles Kuntz, who married the widow. Lack of proper business management soon brought the business into litigation and it was finally closed out.

The "John Grund Brewery", owned and operated by John Grund, was erected in 1857 on Delaware street between Fifth and Sixth streets, south side, and on the location of the former building which was known as Chickering Hall and what is now known as the "Leavel Motor Company". Henry Foot, one of the wealthiest of Leavenworth's citizens in those days, was associated with Grund in the enterprise. The brewery was a brick structure two stories in height. Its operation at this location was never a complete success, owing to the fact that they could not provide suitable conditions under which to have their beer age and the place was sold out, the partners buying out a small brewery which was located on the west side of what is now Shoemaker avenue, and which was operated under the name of the "Little Cannon Brewery", and run and operated by an old German on a small scale. The Grund interests at the same time also purchased a tract of land on the east side of what is now Shoemaker avenue and proceeded to erect an up-to-date brewery, the building itself being of stone and the ruins of which are to this day standing. This brewery continued to do a flourishing business until the early '60's when it was closed out by Lucien Scott, then president of the First National Bank, from whom Grund had borrowed heavily.

Another prominent early day brewery was opened for business in 1857 near the northeast corner of Choctaw and Sixth streets upon the present site of the Lysle Milling Company. It was owned and operated by Keim & Wehrle, and while it did business upon a smaller scale than the other breweries heretofore mentioned, nevertheless for the amount of capital invested, the business was a very profitable one.

In 1858 John Brandon and David Block started the manufacture of soda water at the southeast corner of Second and Kiowa streets. A few years later M. Kirmeyer bought out the interest in the business and he first operated under the name of Brandon & Kirmeyer and the business was changed to that of brewing. This industry was finally forced to cease operations through the interference of the law as administered under the Prohibitory Act. A still later adventure at the brewing industry was set upon when John Brandon and George Beal formed a partnership and engaged in the manufacture of beer under the firm name of Brandon & Beal. Their brewery was located on Kickapoo street, north side, between Second and Main streets. This was the last brewery to do business in the city of Leavenworth.

Schools were not so quickly to be established in the city. This was due principally to the fact of the unsettled condition of the slavery question in those days. As soon as it became apparent that the new territory was to be Free State the establishment of schools took on a new impetus. Previous to this about the only schools existing in the city were those that were privately conducted. The first school of this nature to be established was located on the southeast corner of Fifth and Delaware streets. It was opened during the summer of 1855 and was conducted by Rev. J. B. McAfee. He conducted the school at this place for several years. Later McAfee was ordered out of the territory owing to the color of his political views and not wishing to make a contest of the matter he left. It was not until after the year 1858 when the first organized system of schools was perfected, that the education of the children of the territory and city ceased to be neglected.

A large two-story frame building was erected in the fall of 1856 at the southeast corner of Third and Delaware streets which was used as a public hall and theatre. It operated until the fall of 1858 when it was destroyed by fire. Another building was erected in 1863 on Shawnee street, north side, about the middle of the block between Fourth and Fifth streets by the Goddard Bros. It was operated as an opera house and theatre, playing vaudeville principally and was very popular until destroyed by fire. The next early day theatre established in the city was that which was located on the southeast corner of Fourth and Delaware streets. It was known as the "Thorn Theatre", being named after a party named Thorn who, with his family, were actors and generally made up the stock company that played there. Thorn, himself, owned and operated the place for a number of years. The old Crawford Grand Opera House was erected in 1880. It, while not in any sense being an early day house of amusement, will be remembered by many of the old timers of the present day. It was located on Shawnee street, south side, between Fifth and Sixth streets, and was erected by a stock company of which H. D. Rush was president. It played for years to large audiences and always showed the very best bills. In 1910 the building was sold to the Abdallah Shrine and after being thoroughly overhauled, has been since used as a Shrine Temple. Recent theatres are not mentioned here, owing to the fact that this article is supposed to deal with only the earlier history of the city of Leavenworth.

A number of buildings used as public halls were erected and conducted during the days of early settlement in the city. In 1855 a large two-story frame building was erected on the north side of Delaware street between Second and Third streets which was used for public meetings and for church services. Melodeon Hall, Stockton Hall, Turner Hall, Lainge Hall, Odd Fellows Hall, and Chickering Hall, were also famous in their day and enjoyed equal popularity as places of public meeting and entertainment.

"Melodeon Hall" consisted of the third floor of a large three-story brick building which was located on the north side of Cherokee street between Main and Second streets. It was erected in 1851 by Springer & Fries, a Cincinnati firm. It was one of the most famous as well as the finest of early day halls. It was totally destroyed by fire at a later date.

"Stockton Hall" was located on the southwest corner of Fourth and Delaware streets. It was erected in 1857 by Capt. J. B. Stockton. Abraham Lincoln spoke there December 3d, during his visit to Kansas in 1859. It, too, was totally destroyed by fire at a later date.

The original "Turner Hall" was located at the northeast corner of Sixth and Delaware streets. It was erected in 1857 by the Turner Society of which Henry Deckelman, who ran a jewelry store in Leavenworth in early days, was first president. It was equipped with a stage and served the purpose of both public hall and opera house for the society. It stood on this corner for thirty years or more. Later the Turner Society erected a larger and finer hall at the northeast corner of Broadway and Shawnee streets which is still standing. The original structure, after being deserted by the Turners, was used for years as a livery stable.

"Lainge Hall" was located at the northwest corner of Fourth and Delaware streets. It occupied the third floor of what was known as the Lainge building. It was used principally for political and religious meetings.

The "Odd Fellows Hall" was erected in the early '60's at the southeast corner of Sixth and Shawnee streets. It was one of the largest and finest structures of its kind in those days and early became immensely popular. The building is still standing and is still used for lodge purposes, the lower part being at present used by the J. C. Davis Undertaking Co., J. C. Davis of the latter mentioned company, being at the present time owner of this famous old building.

"Chickering Hall" was erected in 1885, by Carl Hoffman. It was located on the south side of Delaware street between Fifth and Sixth streets on what is now lots owned and occupied by the Leavel Motor Car Company. It was very popular as an early day hall and theatre, being equipped with a stage. It passed into the discard as a theatre with the establishment of the Crawford Grand Opera House on Shawnee street. It was totally destroyed by fire November 14, 1914.

"G. A. R. Hall," located immediately north of the court house grounds on Fourth street, and on the south side of Three Mile Creek, long served as a public meeting place and hall. While it can not be linked with the history of the earlier day halls of the city, yet it deserves mention here, owing to the fact that its tearing down in 1912 marked the passing of a familiar landmark.

The banking business became quickly established in the city during its early settlement. The first bank to open for business was located on the north side of Delaware street between Main and Second streets. It was owned and controlled by a party named Bailey and began business operations in the early part of 1855. It operated, however, but a very short time.

Another early day bank was located on the north side of Cherokee street, between Main and Second streets. It was originally owned by Issett, Brewster & Co. Later Lyman Scott, an early day citizen, purchased the interests of Isett and Brewster and the institution came to be known as Scott, Kerr & Co. This banking business was later absorbed by the First National Bank now located at the northeast corner of Fourth and Delaware streets.

Among the other early day banks that operated in the city were those of Eaves & Keller; Henry J. Adams & Co.; Clark & Gruber; J. C. Hemingway & Co.; Smoot, Russell & Co.; J. W. Morris; Diefendorf, Hellen & Bliss; Newman & Havens; E. Schoolscoff; E. H. Gruber; The German Bank, and the Leavenworth Savings Bank.

The bank operated by Eaves & Keller was located near the northeast corner of Main and Cherokee streets. It began business in 1858 and operated for only a short time. The bank owned and operated by Henry J. Adams & Co., was located in a one-story frame building which formerly stood on the south side of Delaware about the middle of the block between Second and Third streets. It was organized under the territorial laws of the territory of Kansas in 1857 and was sometimes referred to as the Leavenworth City Bank. It, like former banking adventures, continued in business but a short time. Clark & Gruber started a bank during the middle '50's on Delaware street two doors west from the southwest corner of Delaware and Third streets. The original building is now occupied by the Sanitary Bakery, a new business adventure in this city. It, too, operated but a short time when the partnership dissolved and the business was merged into other banking institutions. The J. C. Hemingway & Co. bank was originally located at the northwest corner of Shawnee and Main streets, immediately west of the old Planters House. This bank was the outgrowth of the banking business of Smoot, Russell & Co., which was started in 1855. The bank was later removed to the east side of Main street between Delaware and Shawnee streets and still later was again located at the southwest corner of Shawnee and Main streets. The bank operated and conducted by the banking firm of Smoot, Russell & Co., was originally located at the southwest corner of Main and Shawnee streets. As previously mentioned, it was opened for business in 1855. The original bank building was a two-story frame structure. Russell, one of the partners in the firm was heavily interested in the great overland freighting concern known as Majors Russell & Waddell, and when that company removed from the city, the bank was sold to J. C. Hemingway & Co. A banking business conducted by J. W. Morris which was opened for business in 1857 was located near the northwest corner of Second and Shawnee streets. It did business only on a small scale and was early discontinued. The banking firm of Diefendorf, Hellen & Bliss which began business in 1858 was located at the southwest corner of Delaware and Main streets. It discontinued business at an early date. Paul E. Havens and H. L. Newman began a banking business during the late '50's under the name of Newman & Havens. Their bank was located on the northwest corner of Third and Delaware streets in the building now occupied by the Tremont Hotel. This bank operated successfully and on a large scale for a number of years. The banking institution conducted by C. E. Scholscoff located on the north side of Delaware street between Second and Third streets, which did business during the late '50's was more of a loan office than bank. It was conducted for a number of years on a very successful scale. The large three-story brick building which now stands at the southwest corner of Main and Delaware streets was built by E. H. Gruber, a partner of the early banking firm of Clark & Gruber who started a banking business a few doors west of the southwest corner of Third and Delaware streets at an early date. The former building mentioned was erected in 1859 by Gruber after the dissolution of the Clark & Gruber partnership. Gruber, upon the completion of this building, started a bank there on a large scale known as the "Gruber Bank." He did a large and flourishing business there for a number of years but overstepped the bounds of propriety in his desire to outdistance other banks and was finally closed out. A bank known as "The German Bank" was started at the northwest corner of Third and Cherokee streets by Simeon Abeles at an early date. Later it was moved to the southeast corner of Fourth and Delaware streets and occupied the room now occupied by the Reif Drug Company. It was finally merged into the First National Bank which is now located at the northeast corner of Fourth and Delaware streets. The bank known as the "Leavenworth Savings Bank" was established during the late '60's by Hines & Eaves. It was at first located at the southwest corner of Main and Delaware streets. Later it was removed and eventually was located at the Times building on Fourth street. While located there it failed, causing much financial distress to its depositors who were numerous and were unfortunately of the working classes. The banks of today in the city are not mentioned, owing to their having no historical significance in this article which purports to deal only with the early day institutions and early settlement of the city.

That the pioneers who helped establish the city of Leavenworth, although typical frontiersmen and soldiers in a sense of civilization's edge, were a God fearing lot and Christians at heart is clearly evidence by the quick establishment of churches and the building of other houses where religious services were conducted. Scarcely had the city been laid out, before religious services were being held in different ways and forms, throughout its limits. The first religious service believed to have been held within the present city limits was conducted October, 8, 1854, by W. G. Caples, a Methodist elder. The services were held on the west bank of the Missouri river near the northeast corner of the city limits. There being no appropriate building in the city at that time which could be utilized for church purposes, the first meeting was held under the shade of a large grove of trees which formerly stood at the aforementioned place. Rev. Caples was one of the members of the original Town Company and came here from Missouri. The Rev. Father Fish of Weston, Missouri, officiated at the first Catholic church services that were conducted in the city. There being no appropriate building, the residence of Andrew Quinn who resided on the south side of Shawnee street between Second and Third streets was used. A bureau was pressed into service as an altar. This mass, the first Catholic mass to be said in the city, was held during the early summer of 1855.

What is believed to have been the first building erected for exclusive use for church purposes was built during the summer of 1855 by the Methodists on Main street. The first Catholic church of the city was built during the latter part of 1855. It was erected at the southwest corner of Fifth and Kickapoo streets where the Catholic school now stands. It was a large frame structure and was erected under the supervision of the Rt. Rev. Bishop Miede whose pastorate it continued to be for a number of years. The present Catholic Cathedral supplanted it in 1863. Other Catholic churches were later established, a history of which will be found elsewhere in this volume.

A Christian of Campbellite Church was erected during the summer of 1855 on Shawnee street between Second and Third streets which was destroyed by fire several years later. Shortly after this the congregation erected another church building on the east side of Sixth street between Shawnee and Seneca streets. This building is still standing and is still used for religious purposes.

A Methodist Church, south, was erected in 1855 on the north side of Choctaw street between Second and Third streets. It stood near where the Great Western Manufacturing Co. now has its offices. In 1859 the Methodist Church which stood for so many years at the northwest corner of Fifth and Choctaw streets was erected. It was purchased in 1912, by the J. C. Lysle Milling Company and was torn down, its present site being converted into a lawn to the East of the milling company's offices. In the late 50's or early 60's another Methodist church was erected at the southwest corner of Sixth and Osage streets.

A Presbyterian Church was erected in the fall of 1855 at the southwest corner of Sixth and Miami streets. Rev. A. W. Pitzer was pastor of this church for about five years after its erection. Later and during the year 1871 a First Presbyterian Church was erected near the northeast corner of Seventh and Delaware streets on Delaware street. It was eventually purchased by the Goodjohn Sash and Door Company and converted to their business. Part of the old original building is still standing and is incorporated into the new building which they recently constructed for the carrying on of their business.

Other branches of the Presbyterian Church included the "Westminister Presbyterian Church" which formerly stood at the corner of West Seventh and Oak streets; the "Second Westminister Church" which was built on the north side of Walnut street between Fourth and Fifth streets; the "Cumberland Presbyterian Church" which was erected on the north side of Cherokee street between Fourth and Fifth streets, and the "United Presbyterian Church" erected in 1866 between Fifth street and Second avenue on Arch street, often referred to as the "Flatiron Church."

The first Episcopal Church erected in the city was built near the southwest corner of Fifth and Chestnut streets. It was erected in 1858 and was abandoned later when the congregation erected a new church at the northeast corner of Seventh and Seneca streets.

A German Lutheran Church was erected in 1857 at Seventh and Miami streets. The first Congregationalist Church was located on the northwest corner of Fifth and Delaware streets in 1859. The congregation sold their property at this location in 1887 and built their church which at present stands at Fifth and Walnut streets, the northeast corner. The Jewish Synagogue which stands at Sixth and Osage streets was first erected in the year 1866. In 1916 it was completely overhauled and remodeled and the new synagogue now stands on the old original location. The first Baptist Church which is at present still standing and still used for religious purposes was dedicated in 1871 at the southwest corner of Sixth and Seneca streets. For years it was one of the most massive and imposing looking church buildings in the city. A Colored Church was erected in 1868 on the south side of Kiowa street between Fourth and Fifth streets. It was of the First Methodist denomination. The First colored Baptist church was erected in 1868 at the corner of Seventh and Pottawatomie streets.

KICKAPOO—DELAWARE—EASTON—SPRINGDALE—TONGANOXIE—RENO.

Kickapoo.—One of the most bitter of rivals of the city of Leavenworth during its fight for the supremacy of the cities of the county was waged by the little city of Kickapoo, situated several miles northwest of the government reservation on the Missouri River. Kickapoo is in reality a much older city in point of settlement than the city of Leavenworth. It was for a time a very bitter rival of Fort Leavenworth in a business way.

The name of the city, "Kickapoo", was derived from that of the Kickapoo Indians, who came there and settled in 1832 upon grounds that had been allotted them by the United States Government.

The original townsite was composed in all of three hundred and nine acres of land and covered ground and land located principally in the northwest quarter of section thirty-three, and the north one-half of the southwest quarter of section thirty-three, township seven, range twenty-two. The townsite was surveyed in July, 1854, and Josiah Elliott, who was selected the first mayor of the city acknowledged the plat of the city in October, 1854. The townsite was re-surveyed in May, 1858, and on September 10, 1858, the plat of the city as it was re-surveyed was recorded with Scott J. Anthony, Register of Deeds of Leavenworth County at that time.

The recorded plat of the city of Kickapoo, according to the re-survey shows a city with streets beginning at the west bank of the Missouri River and numbered north to south from one to thirteen. The names of the streets from east to west are as follows, beginning at the north:

Locust, Chestnut, Walnut, Main, Washington, Jefferson and Madison. All streets were eighty feet in width with the exception of Main street which was one hundred feet wide. The alleys as laid out were sixteen feet in width and all lots were 124 feet by 44 feet in dimension.

For a number of years it appeared that the city of Kickapoo was destined to outstrip Leavenworth in growth and political prominence. As early as September 20, 1853, a convention was held there for the purpose of selecting a delegate to go to Washington and urge the organization of Kansas and Nebraska as territories. A Catholic Mission was established there in 1833 under the supervision of Fathers Van Quickenborn and Hoecken. A trading post was doing a large business there at that date. The old mission building that was erected by the Catholics was later converted into a hotel and operated for a number of years. Later it was used as a land office and was also used as an office for the "Kansas Pioneer," a newspaper published there under the management of Saxton & Hazzard. A part of this old building remained standing until a few years ago when it was torn down by O. L. Spencer into whose hands this property had eventually passed.

One of the most flourishing industries of early day Kickapoo was a saw mill which was operated there under the management of Capt. Elijah Wilhite and Captain Dennis. The lumber out of which many of the early day buildings in this city were constructed was made at this mill. Nearly all of the early day frame buildings at the fort were constructed from lumber sawed at the Wilhite & Dennis mill. Wilhite later sold out the interest which he owned in the mill and moved to the city of Leavenworth and started a flour mill which stood on the river bank along the South Esplanade. George A. Sharp, father of William F. Sharp, a prominent farmer of Kickapoo at the present time, was an early employee of the Wilhite & Dennis saw mill at Kickapoo.

A postoffice was established in the city of Kickapoo in 1855 and T. D. Armond was appointed the first postmaster. For years the mail was received at Kickapoo, coming across the river from Weston, Missouri. Kickapoo then in turn acted as a distributing point for all points further west in the surrounding country.

Among the early day settlers of the city of Kickapoo and vicinity were Rev. Joel Grover, Major Robert Wilson, Major R. P. Rively, William Finley, John Freeland, Jesse Connell, George O. Sharp, Captain Dennis, Isaac Cody, Lawrence Kennedy, Merrill Smith, David Herley, T. D. Armond, A. B. Hazzard, Elijah Wilhite, John Baker, Francis M. Beagle, Benjamin F. Edwards, Frederick Hoberg, Jackson Hundley, Henry Clay Squires, and Nathaniel S. Ward.

Rev. Joel Grover was a missionary to the Kickapoo Indians and came to Kansas in 1851. He settled on a farm a short distance south of the village of Kickapoo. He was the father of D. A. N. Grover and C. A. Grover, both of whom were early day attorneys in the city of Leavenworth. C. A. Grover was the first County Attorney of the city and county of Leavenworth.

Major Robert Wilson was the first white settler in Kickapoo Township, coming there in 1844. He settled on what is now known as the Cad Flint farm which is located a short distance west of the station called Miocene on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway. He kept a trading post there for several years and sold out in 1852 to Major R. P. Riveley, who conducted a general store and hotel there for several years. Riveley's place of business was one of the most noted on the Fort Riley Road and Oregon Trail. One of the first "Squatters" meetings ever held in Kansas territory was held there June 10, 1854. It was at this meeting that the famous "Salt Creek Valley" resolutions were drawn up, a copy of which appears elsewhere in this volume. Riveley conducted a general store and inn at this place until July, 1857, when he sold out to Hiram Rich.

William Finley settled on a farm in the Kickapoo community during the middle '50's and for years took an active interest in the affairs of the city of Kickapoo and the surrounding community. John Freeland was also a farmer who lived in the Kickapoo community during the early '50's. He took an active interest in early day politics and was elected a county commissioner at an early date occupying the position of chairman of the county board from August, 1858, until March 30, 1860. Jesse Connell was also an early day farmer in the Kickapoo community. He served several years as state senator also.

George O. Sharp, another of Kickapoo's oldest residents, came to Kansas in 1855. He held the position of postmaster for a number of years at that place and was also the first station agent there. He took an active interest in the early day politics of the little village and served one term as police judge there, and held the office of mayor from 1858 to 1861. He was the father of William F. Sharp who at present lives a short distance south of the little village.

Captain Dennis operated a saw mill. For a time Elijah Wilhite was associated with him. Practically all of the lumber that was used in the construction of the stables at Fort Leavenworth during the early days was sawed at this mill.

Isaac Cody, the father of the world famous "Buffalo Bill" also was an early day settler in Kickapoo Township. There is no record of his ever having lived in the village of Kickapoo. Cody's farm was situated on the south side of the Fort Riley road and Old Oregon Trail and was a short distance west of the Hund farm of today. His property eventually passed through different hands and it is now part of the Weisinger and Seymour farms.

Lawrence Kennedy, sometimes referred to as the "Mayor of Pleasant Ridge," the father of M. C. Kennedy and L. V. Kennedy, prominent farmers of Kickapoo Township, at the present time was also an early settler in the township. His farm was located a short distance to the northwest of the Cody farm.

Merrill Smith conducted a saloon and hotel in what might be properly called Salt Creek Valley, a small early day village situated south of Kickapoo. His place was located on the Fort Riley Road and old Oregon Trail and was a famous early day stopping place for freighting trains passing over these trails.

David Herley operated the famous early day tavern and saloon known as the "Eight Mile House". It was located approximately eight miles northwest of the city of Leavenworth in Kickapoo Township at a point where the Fort Riley Road and Old Oregon Trail branched. Part of the old building is still standing and the place is now owned by Mrs. Patrick Burns.

T. D. Armond was a resident of the village of Kickapoo during the early '50's. He was the first postmaster at that place, being appointed in January, 1855. At that time the mail was brought across the river from Weston, Missouri, by ferry.

A. B. Hazzard was the editor of the "Kansas Pioneer", a radical pro-slavery weekly published in Kickapoo. He published the "Pioneer" for a period of about three years and when it became evident that Kickapoo had lost the fight for the county seat and the territory was destined to become Free State the publication was suspended. He later published a paper in Savannah, Missouri.

Elijah Wilhite was also an early day resident of the city of Kickapoo.

For a time he was interested there in the operation of a saw mill with Captain Dennis. After selling out his interests he removed to Leavenworth where he opened a flour mill.

John Baker came to Kansas in 1857 and located in Kickapoo. He was at various times engaged in the manufacture of brooms there and also at farming. He served as police judge of the city of Kickapoo one term, as a member of the council three terms and as mayor of the city one term.

Francis M. Beagle came to Kansas in 1852 and at first settled on Kickapoo Island. About two years later he moved to the city of Kickapoo where he engaged in the general merchandise business under the firm name of Dennis, Lewis & Co. A short time afterward he moved to Colorado but later returned to Kickapoo.

Benjamin F. Edwards, one of the early and prominent farmers and stock raisers of Kickapoo Township, came to Kansas in 1855 and located on a farm northwest of the city of Kickapoo. During the Civil War he served as a sergeant of Company A, Seventeenth Kansas Infantry. Mr. Edwards took an active interest in early day political affairs. He was an ardent Free State man and was one of the foremost farmers of Kickapoo Township during his lifetime.

Frederick Hoberg, another early day resident of the city of Kickapoo, came to Kansas in June, 1854. His original claim constituted a part of the original townsite of the city. After selling it to the town company he moved to a farm a short distance outside the city.

Jackson Hundley came to Kansas in September, 1854, and at first settled in Salt Creek Valley, a short distance south of Kickapoo. He farmed quite extensively in Kickapoo Township for a number of years.

Henry Clay Squires was another early day settler of Kickapoo Township. He came to Kansas in 1858 and for a number of years engaged in the freighting business on the plains. During his lifetime he was one of the largest and most influential farmers in Kickapoo Township. He took an active interest in politics and served several terms as County Commissioner of Leavenworth County. His beautiful home is still well preserved and is located a short distance northwest of the little vilage of Lowemont on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway.

Nathaniel S. Ward came to Kansas in 1858 and settled on a farm a short distance west of the city of Kickapoo. During the Civil War he served as a member of Company A, Seventeenth Kansas Infantry.

Delaware.—Another former rival of the city of Leavenworth for political and business prominence, now long since lost and forgotten, stands about two miles east of the present site of Lansing. This city, known in its day as Delaware and sometimes referred to as "Old Delaware", was commenced during the summer of 1854. A townsite was laid out, surveyed and platted by the Delaware Town Association of which S. B. Prentiss was president. The original plat of the city of Delaware was filed in the office of Scott J. Anthony, Register of Deeds of Leavenworth County, Kansas, on December 15, 1859, and the description of the city from the plat recorded reads as follows:

"Beginning at a limsetone rock 15 inches long by 3 inches thick set for the northwest corner of the town of Delaware on the south bank of the Missouri River, in Leavenworth County, Kansas Territory, from which a cottonwood tree bears South S. $81\frac{1}{2}$ degrees W. 68 links and an elm tree bears S. $83\frac{1}{2}$ degrees E. 42 links distant, thence S. 35 degrees E. down the south bank of said river 80 chains to a limestone 30 inches long, 10 inches wide and $1\frac{1}{2}$ thick from which an oak tree bears N. 78 degrees W. 21 links and an elm tree bears N. 79 degrees E. A5 links distant. Thence South 55 degrees W. 40 chains set a part corner from which a hickory tree bears N. 9 degrees W. 17 links. Thence north 35 degrees W. 80 chains set for a corner a limestone 30 inches long, 10 inches wide and 2 thick. Thence 55 degrees E. 40 chains to the place of beginning. The width of streets, lots, alleys, and depth of lots are as appear on plat. The number of blocks and reserves are as well as the names of the streets laid down on this plat."

The plat referred to above was filed by George Quinby on behalf of the Delaware Town Association. The plat as recorded shows that the streets from east to west were numbered from 1 to 6. From north to south the streets were names as follows: Hazel, Hickory, Hackberry, Elm, Vine, Maple, Mulberry, Walnut, Main, Oak, Linden, Ash, Cherry and Plum.

In 1855 an election was held in the county for the purpose of selecting a county seat and on November 6, 1855, the County Board of Leavenworth met for the purpose of canvassing the votes cast. After canvassing the votes it appeared that the city of Delaware had cast 929 votes, the city of Kickapoo, 878 and the city of Leavenworth 726. At the election it is said that large numbers of Missourians had come over to Delaware and Kickapoo and voted for the purpose of securing the county seat to each of these cities. Following the canvassing of the votes Commissioners Hall and Walker voted that Delaware city be selected as the permanent county seat. John A. Halderman, one of the county commissioners at that time refused to take any hand in the matter of the selection of Delaware as the county seat for the reason that numerous illegal votes had been cast. A county building was built at Delaware following this election and the county offices were moved there February 20, 1857.

In 1857, however, the legislature ordered the holding of another election for the purpose of fixing upon a permanent county seat for Leavenworth County. At this election which was held in October, 1857, the city of Kickapoo received the largest number of votes, polling a vote of 1,004 as against Leavenworth's 968. When the board of county commissioners canvassed the vote they declared that Kickapoo was to be the county seat and the county records were ordered transferred from Delaware to the city of Kickapoo. After this the matter of the county seat was thrown into litigation and eventually the city of Leavenworth won out. With Leavenworth's winning the cities of Delaware and Kickapoo began quickly to pass into the discard and especially was this true as the Free State sentiment began to grow.

An amusing story is told of the election of October 8, 1855, when Kickapoo, Leavenworth, and Delaware City were waging a hot three-cornered fight for the county seat. On the evening of the election after the votes had been counted it appeared that Kickapoo had won out by a vote of 892 to 860 over Delaware, her closest rival. There was a great celebration held in Kickapoo and Weston where most of the Kickapoo votes had come from during the day. However, the next day, Delaware, not to be outdone, decided that there were several of her citizens who had not voted so they threw the polls open on that day with the result that the Delaware vote grew from 860 to 928, easily outdistancing Kickapoo in the final canvass by the county commissioners.

Among the early settlers of Delaware City and Delaware Township were the following: G. B. Redmond, J. M. Churchill, James Bruce, William H. Spratt, George Quinby, L. F. Hollingsworth, R. C. Foster, David Churchill, B. H. Twombly, S. D. LeCompte, G. W. Gardner, Eli Macamer, John W. Loar, H. T. Green, Thomas Abshire, Joseph Kelley, Barnabas Gable, Doctor Whiteside, Fred Frye, Matt Boyle, Herman Brandt, Mrs. Hanson, William Patterson, Jonas Edge, Tom Yates and William Sprague.

Practically all of the residents of Delaware and community emigrated to Kansas territory from Platte County, Missouri. They were in the main strongly pro-slavery.

Of the old-time settlers of the city of Delaware and Delaware Township heretofore named, none are now living. G. B. Redmond, whose name was mentioned afterward, started the little village of Weimer, which was located a short distance south of Delaware on the Missouri River. There he operated a saw-mill and for a time it appeared that the village was destined to blossom out into a real city. All of the former site of this little village has now been carried away by the encroachment of the river.

J. M. Churchill was one of the early day storekeepers. James Bruce was a brother-in-law of Churchill's and lived in the city of Delaware. William H. Spratt ran a saloon there for a number of years.

In the mind of the old timers there still lingers recollections of George Quinby, one of the leaders of the little village in its palmiest days. Quinby ran a livery stable there for a number of years. He was a man of the typical "town boomer" type of the fifties. He came to Delaware when it was nothing but a "wooding up" station for the steamboats and it was largely through his efforts that it gave promise for a time of being the leading city in Leavenworth County. L. F. Hollingsworth was an early day doctor of the little village and had an office there. Later he purchased a farm a short distance from the townsite and removed there following the less strenuous occupation of farming.

R. C. Foster was an early day farmer of the community. His farm was located adjoining the city. David Churchill was associated with his brother in the conducting of a general store there, and B. H. Twombly was an early day attorney of Leavenworth City and County who lived on a farm adjoining the village.

Of Samuel D. LeCompte much could be said. He was the first judge of the district of which Leavenworth County was a part. He was inclined to be a bit radically inclined toward the pro-slavery element and cause. He resided in the city of Delaware for several years and held court there when the county building was located there. When the city of Delaware, in order to defeat Leavenworth and Kickapoo for the county seat, threw open the polls and voted a second day, it is said that when the matter came before LeCompte as a legal controversy, he decided in favor of Delaware. After his retirement as judge here he practiced law for a number of years in Leavenworth but finally removed east where he died.

G. W. Gardener was another early day attorney of Leavenworth city and county who took up an early residence in the city of Delaware. Afterward he removed to a farm in Delaware Township where he followed the occupation of farming. Eli Macamer was another lawyer who resided at Delaware on a farm as well as was H. T. Green. John W. Loar was an early day farmer in the Delaware community as well as was Thomas Abshire and Joseph Kelley.

Barnabas Gable, another early settler of the Delaware community, came to Kansas in 1854 from Platte County, Missouri. At first he took up a claim on Broadway in the city of Leavenworth which he afterward abandoned, the same being taken up and afterward platted as Benz' Addition to the city. Mr. Gable died about ten years after locating on his Delaware Township farm, leaving a large family. Frank M. Gable of Delaware Township, and John M. Gable of this city, are his sons.

Doctor Whiteside was for years one of the leading physicians of Delaware city. He enjoyed a large and lucrative practice and was rated as one of the leading physicians in this part of the country.

Fred Frye was Delaware's baker. He conducted a bakery there during the fifties and did a large and flourishing business. Matt Boyle ran the leading saloon in the village. He was found guilty of selling liquor without a license after the town boom had died out and was compelled to serve a term in the penitentiary for same. Herman Brandt ran a saloon and a small general store. He later moved to a farm south of Lansing after that city had started.

The hotel which was operated by Mrs. Hanson, referred to as the "Widow" Hanson, was one of the most noted places in the little village. It enjoyed a large patronage and was political headquarters in early days. There was about fifteen rooms in the hotel building as well as a large hall which was often pressed into use as a dance hall. It was conducted under the name of the "Hanson House".

William Patterson was an early day contractor and builder of the village and later built himself a fine residence there. William Sprague was an early day stone mason and bricklayer who helped build many of the houses and buildings that sprung up when the boom was at its height.

The first mayor of the city was Thomas Yates, a typical town boomer who saw visions of big things in store for his infant city.

Henry Foreback was the first shoemaker to locate in the city. For a time he was a political "boss" there, controlling the German vote.

During its palmy days town lots in the city of Delaware sold for fabulous prices. An improvement company was organized to grade and make streets. The townsite was on very hilly ground and they cut one street down to the river landing. The street was about a quarter of a mile long and in many places it was necessary to make cuts as deep as twenty feet.

An amusing incident relative to the county seats being established there is still recalled by some of the old timers. After the building of a temporary structure there for the purpose of housing the county offices, it became necessary to hold a term of court. Judge Samuel D. LeCompte was at that time judge of the district of which this county was a part. During the trial of a case in the Delaware court house and while the jury was in the box, the floor of the building collapsed and the jury all fell into the basement. Fortunately no one was seriously injured.

Frank M. Gable, who came to Delaware Township as a small boy with his father, Barnabas Gable, tells that it was a practice during the early days of the town for the real estate agents to have emissaries down at the river who hailed passing steamboats in search of immigrants, crying out: "Hear ye me! Hear ye me! Come to my town. It is the best located."

Easton.—The city of Easton, situated about twelve miles west of the city of Leavenworth, was another early day settlement in the county. This city was originally called "Eastin" and was named after Lucien J. Eastin, one of the early editors and owners of the "Kansas Herald," a weekly Leavenworth newspaper. It was located and named in the fall of 1854 by Andre Dawson, William G. Mathias and L. J. Eastin. It is said the the name "Eastin" was changed to "Easton" owing to the fact that Governor Reeder, the first territorial governor of the territory of Kansas, was originally from a city in Pennsylvania named "Easton" and the change in the spelling of the name was done in his honor.

The first known white settler in the immediate vicinity of Easton is believed to have been Andre Dawson, who at first lived a short distance to the southeast of the present site of the city. Dawson's Creek Crossing on Stranger Creek was a famous early day fording place where trains traversing the Fort Riley Road crossed the stream. Dawson Creek, a small creek running through the south part of the city of Easton, was named after Dawson. Dawson was married to an Indian squaw. There was one son born to their union, a son named John.

The plat to the city of Easton was recorded May 8, 1855. It was recorded by Jesse Connell, administrator of the estate of Andre Dawson, deceased.

The plat of the city of Easton shows the city to be divided into sixteen square blocks. The streets are numbered from east to west, beginning with one and ending with four. From north to south the streets are named as follows, beginning at the north: Dawson, Riley, Kickapoo, and Broad Street. The blocks, as laid out, are divided into twelve lots each.

Among the earliest settlers in the city of Easton and its immediate community were Stephen Minard, who bought out Andre Dawson's hotel there and operated it as early as 1855; Samuel J. Kookagee, who operated a store there for several years during the middle fifties; John Large, who lived two miles south of the city and whose daughter married Andre Dawson, and John McNeesh, who also operated a hotel there during the early fifties. Samuel Pearson was also an early resident of the city. It was he who in company with Merrill Smith, then the proprietor of a hotel and saloon in Salt Creek Valley, engaged Martin Klien in an altercation in the Number Six neighborhood one day and shot the latter, seriously wounding him.

Other early day settlers included William H. Bristow, William N. Borden, John L. Bristow, Robert Fevurly, A. E. Cleavinger, Joshua Hall, Robert Kelsey, M. H. Langley, G. H. Loughmiller, C. D. Oliphint, J. H. Seever, Stephen Sparks, Joshua Turner, E. K. Adamson, H. B. Gale, Robert Bishop, Thomas Snoddy, Charles Foster, John Thornburg and Jackson Crane.

Practically all of these parties named in the last paragraph settled on farms in the vicinity surrounding Easton. William H. Bristow, for a number of years conducted a general merchandise store until it was destroyed by border ruffians during the fall of 1856. William N. Borden came to Kansas in 1842 and located in what is now Kickapoo Township. He later moved back to Platte County, Missouri, but again moved back to Kansas several years later, locating in the village of Easton, where he engaged in the grocery business for several years before moving to his farm north of Easton. Joshua Turner conducted a grocery store in the city for a number of years during its early days. Stephen Sparks, one of the earliest settlers in the Easton community, came to Kansas in 1854 and located on his farm on Walnut Creek a short distance to the south of Easton, where he lived until his death. A. E. Cleavinger came to Kansas in 1851 and located on a farm northeast of the city of Easton several miles. Until his death he ranked as one of the leading farmers of Easton Township. E. K. Adamson came to Kansas in 1854 and at first located on a farm in Alexander Township. Several years later he moved to Easton, where he engaged in the mercantile business. M. H. Langley came to Kansas in April, 1854, and located on a farm to the northwest of the city of Easton a short distance. He was a prominent farmer and stock grower there during his lifetime. C. D. Oliphint, another of Easton's most prominent old timers, came to Kansas in August, 1856, and located in Easton, where he resided until his death. He took an active interest in early day politics and served as a member of the State Legislature during the session 1877-78. J. H. Seever, H. B. Gale, Robert Bishop, Charles Foster, John Thornburg and Jackson Crane were all early day farmers in Easton Township and community. They all lived to the north and northeast of the city and all came to their respective homes during the early and middle fifties. There are none of those old timers heretofore mentioned living at this date.

An early day incident showing to what extent the pro-slavery forces willingly went in order to carry out their purposes is illustrated in the election which was held in the territory on January 17, 1858. Easton was at that time one of the polling places. The home of T. A. Minard was used as a voting place. A number of pro-slavery men sent word to Minard that they wanted the ballot box. A number of Free State men from Fort Leavenworth under the leadership of Capt. Reese P. Brown, a newly elected member of the State Legislature, had gone out to see that the election was conducted fairly. The Free State men of the vicinity were under the leadership of Stephen Sparks, who lived a short distance south of the city of Easton. The election went along quietly until the morning after, when the Free State men from Leavenworth learned that Sparks and his son had been taken prisoners. They immediately set out to rescue them. On reaching the village they found Sparks and his son and released them. Trouble followed. A pro-slavery man named Cook was killed and several Free State men were wounded. Capt. Brown set out with his party on their return to Leavenworth. On the way back the party was met by two bands of pro-slavery men, one under the leadership of Capt. Martin, and another under the leadership of Capt. Dunn. Most of both parties were "Kickapoo Rangers." Seeing that they were outnumbered the Free State men surrendered and were taken back to Easton. A mock trial was held and all the prisoners were turned loose with the exception of Brown. He was locked up. The mob, became unruly and broke open the jail, dragged Brown out and one of the party struck him in the head with a hatchet. He was stabbed and hacked from head to foot and thrown into a farm wagon and taken to his home, where he was thrown out at the door. His wife shortly after this went violently insane and later died from the direct effect of the shock.

Another incident is illustrated in the raiding of the store which was conducted at Easton by William H. Bristow. Bristow had been engaged in the mercantile business there during the years 1855 and 1856. In the fall of 1856 border ruffians from Missouri came to the little village of Easton and robbed the store of all the provisions they were able to carry. They then set fire to the building and set out on their return. The old store book kept by Bristow is still preserved and contains many items of interest. Among the first pages appears the heading: "Easton K. T. October 10, 1855." Among the first customers appears an Indian, who paid a balance on account of $1.00 for pantaloons. Several Indians' names are found in the record, showing a great deal of trade among them.

The following is a copy of some of the original items as they appear in this old account book:

"Saturday, Oct. 13, 1855; George W. Messersmith, to gallon of molasses, 75c; to 8 pounds of sugar, $1; to one gallon whiskey, 75c. Springdale.—The city of Springdale was platted and surveyed in 1860 by Hiram Rees and Eli Morris. It is located in the center of Alexander Township and about sixteen miles west of the city of Leavenworth. It has no railroad connections. John Wright was reputed to have been the first settler in the township, coming there in 1854. A postoffice was established there in 1860 and P. F. Walker was appointed the first postmaster. In those days the mail was hauled overland by stage on the Fort Riley Road, Springdale getting its mail from the station at Easton, and Easton in turn getting its mail from Leavenworth, where it was brought by steamboat. The township of Alexandria, in which Springdale is located, was settled to a large extent by the Friends' Society. They built a church and schoolhouse there at an early date. Among the earliest industries of the little village was a sawmill operated by Henry Ready and a grist mill operated by Thomas Ashby.

Among the earliest settlers of the village and community were the following: Robert E. Courtney, Garrett V. Keller, James Medill, Alfred B. Powell, Buell Trackwell and Dr. William B. Wood.

Robert Courtney came to Kansas April 7, 1855, and located on a farm near the village of Springdale. He soon acquired considerable real estate and was a prominent and prosperous farmer of that locality until his death. Garrett V. Keller, another early day settler, located in the Springdale community in January, 1859. He also was a farmer and resided there for a number of years, operating one of the leading farms of the community.

James S. Medill came to Kansas April 15, 1857, and did not until 1864 move to the Springdale community. He took an active interest in early day politics and served four years in the State Legislature and two years as railroad assessor. On his farm, which was one of the leading ones of the community, he specialized in the raising of Shorthorn cattle and Poland-China hogs. He was the father of a large family and was one of the county's foremost citizens until his death.

Buell Trackwell came to Kansas and settled in the Springdale community in 1857. He also was one of the community's leading farmers and citizens until his death. Dr. William B. Wood came to Kansas in the fall of 1855. After his graduation from the Missouri College of Medicine in 1875 he established himself in the practice at Springdale, where for a number of years he enjoyed a large practice.

Tonganoxie.—The city of Tonganoxie, which is the second largest city in Leavenworth County at the present time, was also an early settlement in the county. It was named after an old Indian chief who lived along the Lawrence-Leavenworth Road in that community during the early fifties and whose home was a famous early day stopping place for travelers in those days. The city of Tonganoxie was platted in 1866. The original townsite at the time of the platting was owned by Magdalena Berry. As platted the city contained forty acres. The first white settler of the village is reputed to have been William H. Fox, who built a log cabin on the townsite in 1862. During the early 60's a postoffice was established there, and James English was appointed the first postmaster. It was not until 1866 that a regular merchandise store was opened up there. It was owned by William Dane. A flour mill was put into operation there at an early date, the same being situated several miles southeast of the village and being owned by Mrs. E. Davis & Son.

Among the early settlers of Tonganoxie City and community were the following: Willard S. Angell, Jacob Becker, Wallace A. Brice, Charles Colwell, Francis J. Dessery, John S. Grist, Abner F. Hoskins, Archer J. Jones, Eli H. Linton, A. McLawrence, Ashley A. Moody, Crawford Moore, Axum Newby and Jonathan Winslow. Of these Willard Angell came to Kansas in 1869 and at first located in High Prairie Township. He settled later in the city of Tonganoxie, where for a number of years he conducted a livery stable and a hotel. Jacob Becker came to Kansas in 1867 and located in Leavenworth, where he lived for two years, when he moved to Tonganoxie in 1869. His occupation was that of a saddler and harness maker and for years he followed his trade in that village. William A. Brice came to Kansas in 1869 and landed at the city of Leavenworth. He was an early day farmer of the Tonganoxie community. Charles Colwell came to Kansas in 1861 and located for a time in Leavenworth. He was a blacksmith by trade and in the year 1866 he located in Tonganoxie, where he conducted an early day blacksmith shop. Francis J. Dessery located in the city of Tonganoxie in 1867. For years he traded in horses and mules there. John S. Grist arrived in Kansas in 1868 and located at Tonganoxie. He was a contractor and builder by profession and many of the early day houses of the city and community as well as the bridges were built under his supervision. Abner F. Hoskins came to Kansas in 1857 and during his first three years in the territory resided in Anderson County. In 1860 he moved to a farm in the Tonganoxie community. He was for years one of the leading farmers and stockraisers of that community. Archer J. Jones came to Kansas in 1859 but it was not until 1861 that he located in the vicinity of Tonganoxie on a farm. In 1866 Eli Linton arrived at the little village of Tonganoxie and located there permanently. He was one of the early day postmasters of the village and also worked as an agent for the railroad company there. A. McLawrence arrived in the Tonganoxie community in 1866 and located on Big Stranger Creek a short distance from the city. For years he conducted a grocery store at Tonganoxie. Ashley A. Moody located in Tonganoxie in 1868 and for years conducted a general merchandise store there. Crawford Moore came to the Tonganoxie community in 1861 and located on a farm which was situated about a mile northeast of the village. The station of "Moore" on the Leavenworth-Lawrence branch of the Union Pacific Railway is named after him. His farm, which consisted of 900 acres, was one of the finest in Leavenworth County. Axum Newby located on a farm in the Tonganoxie community in the year 1873 and for years was one of the most prominent farmers of the neighborhood. Jonathan Winslow was another of the early day farmers to settle in that vicinity. He located there in the year 1868.

Reno.—The little station of Reno, which is situated on the Leavenworth-Lawrence branch of the Union Pacific Railway, was named after General Reno. One of the earliest merchants of the place was John Jacobs, who was also the first postmaster there. Another small station which is situated in Reno Township is named Fall Leaf and is located on the main line of the Union Pacific Railway. It was named after an Indian chief who lived there in early days.

Among the early settlers of Reno Township are the following: R. C. Taylor, John Jordan, Gavin Allan, Smith Benedict, William Bruce, John C. Canary, John Develbess and Christian J. Halstead. Among these R. C. Taylor was one of the earliest settlers of Reno Township, the other oldest settler being John Jordan. They both were farmers and took up their claims in the township at a very early date. Gavin Allan came to Reno Township in 1869 and located on a farm there, where he lived for a number of years. He specialized in the raising of fine hogs and cattle. Smith Benedict was another early day farmer to locate in the Reno community. He came there in 1867 and for years conducted one of the finest farms in the neighborhood. William Bruce came to the community in 1869 and located on a farm. John Canary also located there at an early date and followed the occupation of farming. John Divelbess located on a farm in the township in 1867 and devoted most of his time to the raising of fine cattle. In 1880 he was elected state representative from his district. Christian J. Halstead located in Reno in the year 1866. He was one of the early day postmasters of the place. He also served his district as a state representative for a number of years.

CHAPTER V

PIONEER LIFE AND HOMES

TYPES OF PIONEERS—THEIR HOMES—HOW HOMINY WAS MADE—HOSPITALITY—IMPLEMENTS AND CLOTHING—THE TYPICAL PIONEER—THE PIONEER WOMEN.

“Home of our childhood! how affection clings,
And hovers round thee with her seraph wings.
Dearer thy hills, though clad in autumn brown,
Than fairest summits which the cedars crown.”

—O. W. Holmes.

There were several different types of men found among the early day settlers of Leavenworth City and Leavenworth County. There was the type which came here mainly for political purposes with but one object in view and that to make the new territory of Kansas pro-slavery. Many of these were in the employ of Southern agencies. Their names are found connected with many of the early atrocities which were committed in the county in its early days. After it became apparent that they had lost their fight and that the territory was destined to be free state they gradually dwindled and slunk away. There was another type who came here for the purpose of establishing homes for themselves and their posterity. It is indeed a grateful thought that the latter were in the majority. Those it was that made up what might be truly termed the pioneers of our city and county. They were a people who despised the coddling ease of luxury, ruddy of health, fired with an ambition of service to their progeny, true soldiers of civilization's edge. Their first care was to protect themselves from the elements. The first cabins that they erected were a cross between a hoop cabin and Indian hut. Soon after, however, the men assembled for what in those days was termed “log raisings." The forests furnished the timber and the strong arms of the pioneer with his ax fashioned out the logs. The earth supplied the clay. None of these first cabins are now in existence but the following is a fair description of the way and manner in which they were constructed.

These cabins were generally built of round logs, notched together at the corners, ribbed with poles, and covered with boards split from a tree. A puncheon floor was then laid down, a hole cut in the end and a chimney run up through. A clapboard door was then made, and a window was made by cutting a hole through at the end or side two or three feet square, and finished without glass or transparency. The house was then "chinked" or "daubed" with mud and the cabin was ready to go into. The household and kitchen furniture was adjusted and life on the frontier really began in earnest. Much of the furniture used by the earliest of these pioneers was "home made," being fashioned out of the timber by the husband with no other instrument than an ax. The doors were fastened with old fashioned wooden latches, and the latch string always hung out for friends and neighbors. The convenience of stoves was a thing at first unheard and unthought of, the housewife doing all of her cooking by means of pots and kettles over and above the fireplace, which was usually later constructed. The acquisition of glass windows was impossible for these first settlers. White paper was pressed into service, being greased and thus admitting a small portion of light.

Those settlers who thus faced the hardships of the new territory were indeed true home builders, the very foundation of our nation, the true root of patriotism and love of country. They appreciated the fruits of their own industry, and manufactured practically everything they used. The home made hominy-block is doubtless not within the memory of our oldest citizens. This was made after this fashion:

A tree of suitable size was selected in the forest and felled. If a cross cut saw was convenient, the tree was butted, that is the large end was sawed off so that it would stand firmly when ready for use. If there were no saws in the neighborhood the ax was used to do the work above mentioned. Then the proper length, generally four or five feet, was measured off and again cut off. After this the block was raised on end and the work began of hollowing out one of the ends. This was generally done with a common chopping ax. When the cavity was adjudged to be large enough a fire was built in it and carefully watched until the ragged edges were burned away. When completed it somewhat resembled a druggist's mortar. Then a pedestle or something was necessary to crush the corn. This was as a rule made from a suitably sized piece of timber with an iron wedge attached large end down. This completed the apparatus. The block was then ready for use. Sometimes one hominy-block accommodated a whole neighborhood and acted as a means of staying the hunger of a number of mouths.

One of the most noted of characteristics of the early day pioneer when contrasted with the people of today was the spirit of helpfulness and hospitality. Men and women everywhere assisted each other. Aristocratic feeling was unknown. Log raisings, brush clearings, hunts and such things were participated in by the entire neighborhood, each one doing his share. When a neighbor butchered, his neighbors were sure to come in for a portion of the meat. What one had all had. There is a difference today when if we look over a neighbor's fence we are charged for it. There are many who for these reasons decry the progress we have made in the last three-quarters of a century and long to go back to the years gone by when hospitality was a part of the human make-up. On Sundays and holidays the pioneers would as a rule go visiting, generally to one of the more important neighbors, who as a rule would kill a hog or sheep to provide eating for his visitors over Sunday. It was the custom for the whole family to partake of these visits, generally coming in the farm wagon and staying all day, sometimes several days.

The farming implements of the early county pioneers were very crude and have long since passed into the discard and disuse. The "bull" plough and mould board plow were early pressed into use. These plows were then made of wood. The "cradle" was an improvement on the common scythe of today and was used in harvesting early grain crops. When the "dropper" and "reaper" came into use in the early 80's their advent was heralded as one of the greatest advancements in the agricultural implement age. Previous to this but little wheat was grown owing to the fact that there was no way to care for it during harvest season. With the invention of the latter two machines wheat growing was given a new impetus, although even at that time the use of twine for the tying of the sheaves was unknown, they, before this, being tied by a handful of the sheaf ingeniously twisted and tied about it. A good "binder," after the use of the "dropper" came in, was always in demand during harvest season. The original way of preparing the soil for seeding by the pioneers was to plow or "root" it up with a "bull" plow and then drag it down with brush or logs. Later a harrow in the shape of the letter "A" was designed, it being constructed by mortising three heavy pieces of timber together in the form of a triangle and then boring holes through at certain distances apart and inserting therein at first wooden and later iron teeth or plugs. Rollers were designed by the early day farmer, being made out of a large log into each end of which there was mortised a heavy steel pin upon which a frame work was constructed which connected with a tongue and means by which it could be drawn by oxen or horses. The fences that usually surrounded the pioneer's domicile were constructed of rails which his ax had fashioned from the timber on the premises. When not of rails they were usually made of stone. Both forms entailed a great amount of labor when compared with the manner and form as used in these latter days. The family clothes were made entirely by the mother through the use of her needle and spinning wheel. Boots were worn more than shoes. Every pioneer was his own cobbler and the yarn hose knitted by the mother for the family for the winter months were repaired over and over again. The straw hats which the members of the family usually wore during the summer months were made by the mother from the wheat straw after its being threshed. There was nothing wasted; there was nothing fastidious. Life was lived in a sensible, homely, common-sense way.

The typical pioneer man was in the majority of cases strong and robust of physique. His face was usually bearded and his hair was allowed to grow long. As a rule the face was firm and seamed. His eyes were clear, strong and piercing, the sense of sight being developed to a wonderful degree as well as that of the other senses. He had vices and traces of barbarism in his makeup peculiar to the situation in which he was found. His manners were rough and appearance uncouth, yet underneath the rough veneer one generally found a true spirit of generosity and a sympathetic side to the nature rarely found in these later days. When one entered the door of the pioneer's cabin seeking shelter for the night his request was generally answered with: "I reckon you can stay, or I suppose we better let you stay." The welcome would indeed seem ungracious, yet it was generally the harbinger of every kindness and comfort his cabin afforded. Coffee, corn bread, butter, pork, wild fowl or wild game were generally set before one at the mealtime. The wife and mother, timid, silent and reserved but constantly attentive to your comfort did not as a rule sit at the table with the guest, but like the wives of the patriarch's stood by and attended. One seeking shelter was generally given the best the house could afford in the way of a bed. When this kind of hospitality had been shown the stranger as long as he cared to stay and when he was ready to depart and proceeded to speak of his bill he was generally told that they were not running an inn or boarding house, with some slight mark of resentment, and that he was indeed welcome to the accommodations such as they had been able to afford him.

The true pioneer woman and mother was a type of woman that is rapidly and lamentably passing out of existence. She was mild of manner and as a rule spoke but very seldom. She was generally strong and healthy of physique and met unflinchingly the hardships and perils of her situation. She was ever alert to the care and duties of her household and was seldom idle. Her house was always kept neat and tidy regardless of the nature of the structure. About it she drew no social lines based on the simplicity or grandeur thereof; she valued her friends and neighbors at their true worth and all were welcome to visit with her. Resolutely and cheerfully she bore her heavy burdens and met the many vicissitudes cumbent to her life. There was a whole-souled optimism and a spirit of buoyant laughter ever present in her heart. She was not adverse to the bearing of children and found solace in the care and homely attentions which she lavished upon them in her simple way. The "homey" instinct was deeply embedded in her. She was not a disciple of vogues, styles of the fashion plates and the relief offered her from her work in the divorce courts held no lure. She worshipped her God in the simple way, her Bible being her constant companion and her greatest pleasure being to gather her children about her of evenings and read to them therefrom and teach them simple prayers. With the establishment of churches at a later period she always tried to raise her family in her church. About this true mother and her rude pioneer home there has ever centered a magic enchantment. Recollections of the sacrifices which she unflinchingly made; of her many kindnesses, her honest toil and brave heart still clings and pays homage to the memory of many of the older citizens of today, touching their heart strings with angelic fingers. The influence which she exerted was stronger than death. She is gone but the spirit which she animated in the breasts of our fathers and mothers and their forefathers still lives in the progress and greatness, the advancement and worth of our city and county as it has established itself in the years that have gone by.

CHAPTER VI

FIRST THINGS IN CITY AND COUNTY

History has been said to be nothing other than a record of events. The older the event, in reality the more valuable information it is from a historical standpoint. A history that does not go back to the beginning of things and events loses much of its value as a historical work. Leavenworth City and Leavenworth County had to be started. A city or county is nothing in itself; a state is nothing in itself, neither is a nation; it is the people that constitute them that make them what they really are. The first settler in the city of Leavenworth and the first "squatter" in the county together with the industries which they started really form the nucleus around which our present day city and county grew. In consequence of this the present chapter, a chapter which deals with the first things of the city and county, has been inserted in this work.

In a former article it will be noted that the first white settlers of the county were mechanics and laborers who lived in and very close to the fort, where they were employed by the government in various capacities. Just who was the first white settler in the county is a matter which has long since been lost in the maze of antiquity. It is a historical fact that the first land staked out and occupied after the passage of the Kansas-Nebraska Act on the present site of the city of Leavenworth was that staked out and occupied by John C. Gist and Samuel Farandis. Gen. George W. Gist also staked out a claim on the present site of the city but was never an actual resident of the territory.

The first sale of the town lots into which the city of Leavenworth had been divided and which was held in the city of Leavenworth took place on October 9, 1854. G. W. McLane, of Weston, Missouri, and W. S. Palmer, of Platte City, Missouri, were the auctioneers.

The first industry of note to begin operations in the city was the saw mill owned and operated by Capt. W. S. Murphy and Capt. Simeon Scruggs on the north side of "Three Mile Creek" where it empties into the river. This mill began operation in the fall of 1854. A more detailed account of this industry is found in the Chapter on Early Settlement and institutions of the city of Leavenworth.

The first newspaper published in the city of Leavenworth and in the territory of Kansas was set up and published under the shade of a large elm tree which stood a short distance to the southwest of the corner of Cherokee and Main Streets. The first edition of this paper, which was named the "Kansas Herald," bore the date of September 15, 1854. The first editors of this paper were Adams & Osborne.

The first storeroom erected in the city was located at the northwest corner of Delaware and Levee or Front Street. It was erected in the summer of 1854 by Lewis N. Rees and was operated as a general store and later used for the first postoffice building in the city.

The "First Squatter's Meeting" held in the territory was held at the store of H. P. Rively, a short distance west of the Salt Creek Valley Bridge over Salt Creek. This store was located on the farm now owned by Cad Flint. About two hundred "Squatters" were present at this meeting and it was then that the famous "Salt Creek Valley Resolutions" were drawn, a fuller and more detailed account of which appears elsewhere in this volume. This meeting was held May 9, 1854.

The first church services held in the city of Leavenworth were conducted by W. G. Caples, a Methodist elder on Sunday, October 8, 1854. The services were conducted along the west bank of the Missouri River near the northeast corner of the present city limits and there being no building adequate for the purpose, the services were held under the shade of a grove of trees which stood at the aforementioned location.

The first postmaster of the city of Leavenworth was Lewis N. Reese. The postoffice conducted by him first was located in his store at the northwest corner of Delaware and Levee or Front Streets. He served as postmaster here for several years without pay, the mail being brought down from the fort postoffice. Later he was officially appointed by the government.

The first postoffice of the territory was established May 29, 1828, and was known as Cantonment Leavenworth. Phillip G. Rand was the first postmaster there. Up until and even after the establishment of Kansas as a territory this postoffice handled the mail of the earliest settlers as well as the official government mails at the fort or as it was then known, Cantonment Leavenworth. For several years after a post-office was opened in the city of Leavenworth by Lewis N. Reese, the mail was brought down from the fort to the local office.

The first dwelling house erected in the city of Leavenworth was built by Jeremiah Clark. It was located at the southwest corner of Walnut and Fourth streets in the fall of 1854. Later it was moved to a place on the alley between Olive and Spruce Streets near Fifth Street, where it stood until a few years ago when it was torn down.

The first territorial election held in the territory of Kansas was held November 29, 1864. This was for the purpose of selecting a delegate to Congress. The voting place in the city of Leavenworth for this election was the basement of the old Leavenworth Hotel, situated at the corner of Main and Delaware Streets. It was at this election that such a large crowd of Missourians came over and by the casting of their votes made it possible to secure the election of the pro-slavery candidate, Gen. John W. Whitfield.

The first hotel in the city of Leavenworth was situated at the northwest corner of Main and Delaware Streets. It was erected in 1854 and was a frame building. It was operated and conducted by George Keller and his son-in-law, A. T. Kyle, and was known as the "Leavenworth Hotel." The building was torn down in 1859.

The first well ever dug and known to exist in the city of Leavenworth was dug immediately south of the old Leavenworth Hotel by its proprietors in the year 1854. It was situated about the middle of what is now Delaware Street and almost at its conjunction with Main Street. It was filled up when Delaware Street was graded.

The first child born in the city of Leavenworth was born in the Leavenworth Hotel. She was a daughter of A. T. Kyle, one of the early proprietors of the hotel and was christened Cora Leavenworth Kyle. She was born December 5, 1855. After growing to womanhood she was married to James N. Allen, who for years was Rock Island ticket agent in the city of Leavenworth.

The first white male child born in the city of Leavenworth was George C. Richardson, a son of Jason Richardson, who then lived in a one-story frame house on Main Street, between Main and Cherokee streets. This child was born November 14, 1858.

The first marriage ceremony performed in the city was that performed by Squire Alexander Russell on January 13, 1856, when he united in marriage John Grund and Miss Eliza A. Tennell. Mr. Grund was later connected with the brewing industry in the city.

The first boarding house conducted in the city was opened in the year 1854 by an elderly lady named Gano. It was located on Main Street near the present site of the Union Depot.

The first flour mill operated in the city was erected at the northwest corner of Main and Short streets by Earle & Bumping. It was a two story brick structure.

The first brewery in the city was built in the fall of 1855. It was a two story stone structure and was located along the river bank about the middle of and under the bank of what is now the South Esplanade. It was owned and operated by a partnership known as Fritzen & Mundee.

The first school conducted in the city was located at the southeast corner of Fifth and Delaware streets on the present location of the Axa building. It was a private school and was conducted by Rev. J. B. McAfee.

The first public hall was erected in the fall of 1855 and was located on the north side of Delaware Street about the middle of the block. It was used for many diversified purposes, among which were religious meetings, political meetings, public speakings and was often used as a dancing hall.

The first bank to open for business in the city was located on the north side of Delaware Street between Main and Second streets in the early part of the year 1855. It was in the nature of a private banking institution and was conducted by a party named Bailey.

The first election of members to the territorial legislature of the territory of Kansas to take place in the city occurred March 30, 1855. The polls for this election were to have been in the old Leavenworth Hotel, but the proprietor, George Keller, objected to the elections being held there. The polling place was then selected at the saddlery shop of Ben Woods, near Third and Cherokee streets. A large crowd came down by steamboat from Weston, Missouri, the day of the election and cast their votes.

The first convention held in Leavenworth for the purpose of nominating a candidate for delegate to Congress was held November 15, 1854.

The first "Squatter's Trial" ever held in the territory of Kansas was held in Salt Creek Valley at the store conducted by Major R. P. Rively on September 20, 1854. The question involved was over which one of two parties had the legal right to the possession of a certain claim. The late E. Miles Moore, who for years was a practicing attorney in the city of Leavenworth afterward acted as attorney for a party named Martin, who claimed that his claim had been "squatted" upon during his absence. The case was tried by a board of three arbitrators, each party choosing one and the two chosen choosing a third. Malcolm Clark, who was afterward murdered in the city of Leavenworth, was acting as marshal of the "Squatter's Court."

The first fire company of the city of Leavenworth was organized September 17, 1855, by consent of the city council.

The incorporation of the city of Leavenworth as a city took place in the summer of 1855. A special charter was issued by the First Territorial Legislature which was then in session at the territorial capital at Shawnee Mission.

The election of the first city officers of the city of Leavenworth occurred September 3, 1855. This election was held pursuant to an act passed by the territorial legislature of 1855 authorizing the holding of an election in the city of Leavenworth for the purpose of electing city officers. J. H. Day, W. H. Adams and Lewis N. Rees, of the city of Leavenworth, were the judges of this election.

The first city officers of the city of Leavenworth were as follows: Mayor, Thomas F. Slocum; President of Council, J. H. Day; Councilmen, Fred Emery, Thomas H. Doyle, George W. Russell, M. L. Truesdell, Adam Fisher, Dr. G. J. Park and William T. Marvin. The Council, after being duly organized, appointed the following officers of the city: City Clerk, Scott J. Anthony; City Assessor, H. G. Weibling; City Marshal, William McDowell; City Treasurer, William H. Bailey; City Attorney, John I. Moore; City Engineer, E. L. Berthoud, and Comptroller, M. L. Truesdell.

What is believed to have been the first death of a settler of the territory occurred December 6, 1854, a short distance north of the present site of Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, at the old Platte City River landing when Stephen A. Noble was drowned while crossing from Weston, Missouri, to this side. Joseph O'Neil, who was with him in the boat at the time it capsized, was also drowned.

The first "grist mill" owned and operated by local settlers was not built on this side of the river but was built in what is commonly known as "Slabtown," a short distance east of the former site of Drydale. It was owned and operated by Panton & Yohe.

The first hardware store to open for business in the city was situated on Main Street and was operated by George Russell.

The first barber shop ever conducted in the city was owned and operated by Julius Trummel. It was opened for business during the month of February, 1855, and was located on Cherokee Street near Water Street, or Levee.

Dr. Charles Leib is believed to have been the first physician to establish an office and practice in the city of Leavenworth. For a time his office was located in a tent that stood near the "big elm tree" that stood near Cherokee and Water Street. Dr. John H. Day was also an early day physician, both he and Dr. Leib practicing here during the latter part of 1854.

The first person to engage in the carpenter business in the city of Leavenworth was Samuel M. Lyon. He came here and established himself as a carpenter in September, 1854.

The first wholesale grocery store established in the city was located on Water or Levee Street in October, 1854. It was owned and operated by Joseph J. Bentz.

What is believed to have been the first drug store to begin business in Leavenworth was that operated by M. France & Co. This store began business here when there was no building in which its products might be housed and for quite a length of time at first used the office of the "Herald" as a dispensing room.

What is believed to have been the first bridge to have been constructed in the city of Leavenworth was constructed across a creek which ran south crossing Delaware between Seventh Street and Broadway. It was erected by Majors, Russell and Waddell. It was a temporary structure and erected for the purpose of enabling this great freighting firm to cross this particular stream with their freighting wagons. The first frame bridge to be erected in the city was built over Three Mile Creek on Main Street. The first stone bridge was built over Three Mile Creek on Main Street.

James W. Skinner was the first official steamboat agent to have an office in the city of Leavenworth. This office was opened in 1855.

The first express company to do business was known as Richardson's Missouri River Express. It operated between St. Joseph, Missouri, and St. Louis.

The first city ordinance to be drafted by the Leavenworth City Council was entitled: "An Ordinance Relating to Games of Skill and Chance."

The first meeting of the regular council of the city of Leavenworth was held Tuesday, September 11, 1855, and the meeting was held on the second floor of a building located on the south side of Delaware about half way between Second and Third streets.

The first surveyor general of Kansas Territory was Gen. John Calhoun. His first office in Kansas was located in Leavenworth City and was in an old frame building on the south side of Delaware Street about midway between Second and Third streets.

What is believed to have been the first court ever organized in the territory of Kansas as well as the county of Leavenworth was that provided for by the Squatter's Meeting which was held at Rively's store in Salt Creek Valley June 10, 1854. Following this several squatter's meetings were held in Leavenworth with the result that a committee appointed for the purpose of arriving at some solution of the question of claims reported a preamble and resolutions which provided for a court to try all matters of contested claims. The officers of the court were H. R. Rees, Chief Justice; A. Payne, Associate Justice, from Stranger District; Alex. Russell, Associate Justice, from Salt Creek Valley District; Miles Shannon, Marshal; Green D. Todd, Deputy Marshal, and S. D. Pitcher, Chief Clerk of the Court and Recorder of Claims.

EARLY DAY TRANSPORTATION AND HIGHWAYS

STEAMBOATING ON THE MISSOURI—LANDING—EARLY HIGHWAYS AND TRAILS—OTHER ROADS—STAGE ROUTES—SALT LAKE TRAIL—SANTA FE TRAIL—OXEN USED—METHOD OF TRAVEL.

Advanced transportation and good highways are indices of a people, certain evidence of their culture, progressiveness and prosperity. As are these so are the people. Good transportation, advanced civilization; or advanced civilization, good transportation; either way one follows the other as certainly as night the day, or the day the night.

Transportation has been, is, and will be a process of evolution. Could we turn back the scroll of time and witness the primitive methods of the pioneer, great would be our astonishment; could we project ourselves into the future one hundred years, and observe the methods of transportation then, doubtless it would be beyond anything then that we today comprehend or anticipate.

When the first settlers of Leavenworth County arrived at the Missouri River, the routes of commerce and travel were largely the water courses. For this reason all early day settlements were made on the banks of that river or in close proximity thereto. Steamboats were then in use. Could we people of today behold one of the typical early day steamboats it would indeed prove an awe-inspiring sight. They had as a rule but one engine. They were small and most of them were constructed along the lines of a flat boat and were stern wheelers. The cabin was a primitive affair. It was on the lower deck, as a rule in the back part of the boat. At first there were no staterooms. They were arranged with curtains in front of the berths. They were very small as a rule and were slow. Weston, Missouri, was a great stopping place for early day boating in those days, the river then swinging in close to the present site of the city and there being a good landing place. With the advent of the late '40s and early '50s steamboating had undergone a considerable change. The boats had been improved. They were larger and faster. Some were of the side wheel variety. Regular schedules were established. When the city of Leavenworth was founded a landing place was established immediately east of the present site of the Union Depot. It was not an uncommon sight to see four or five river steamboats anchored there during the late '50s. It is said that during the year 1856 there were forty-one steamboats operating on the Missouri River that made regular stops at the city of Leavenworth and that in all 328 trips had been made by them during the year. J. W. Skinner was the general agent for the steamboating industry on the river in those days and had his office located for several years in the old "Leavenworth Hotel" at the corner of Main and Delaware streets.

The new born city of Leavenworth in the middle and late '50s was most fortunate in that it had at its disposal numerous highways and trails that had been previously established. When Fort Leavenworth was established in 1827 the government immediately set out to connect it with prominent trading centers to the east and west by roads or trails. These up to the establishment of the city of Leavenworth were used principally for military purposes. With the coming of the pioneer home builders other roads were quickly established such as necessity demanded. At this time the second largest city in the territory of Kansas was Lawrence, consequently a road was opened through from Leavenworth to there. Le-compton was the capital of the territory which led to the establishment of a road leading there. Other roads led up and down the river to the towns of Atchison, Kickapoo and Wyandotte. A hack line carried passengers three times a week to Westport Landing, Westport, Missouri. It was owned and operated by Kimball, Moore & Company. A tri-weekly line of hacks and stages operated between the city of Lawrence and here. Mail stages were run daily between here and Weston. Daily stages were operated between here and the capital at Le-compton and mail stages operated between the two latter named places three times a week. Fred Emery operated a line of passenger and mail coaches between here and Fort Riley, using the old Fort Riley Road and passing through Salt Creek, Easton, Manhattan and other towns along the way. A weekly mail and passenger stage service was in operation between Leavenworth and Atchison. This service passed through by way of Kickapoo following a branch of the old Salt Lake Trail which led off from the original trail at the Salt Creek bridge to the northward and again connected with the main trail northwest of the present site of the little city of Lowemont.

One of the most famous of the great early day trails had its eastern terminus in the city of Leavenworth. It was known to this county as the Salt Lake Trail. North of Atchison it connected with the St. Joe Emigrant Trail and led on to the northwestward, being there known as the Oregon Trail. Its route out of the city led to the northwestward along what is now known as the Fort Riley Road to a point known in early days as the "Eight Mile House," a famous early day inn and tavern conducted and owned by David Herley, which stood a short distance to the southeast of the present city of Lowemont, Kansas, Leavenworth County. Here it branched off, leading sharply to the northwest, while the Fort Riley Road led slightly to the southwest toward the city of Easton. It entered Atchison County about four miles east of the present site of the city of Potter, Atchison County, Kansas. Among the noted and famous early day stopping places along the trail in Leavenworth County in those days were the taverns and hotels operated by Merrill Smith in Salt Creek Valley; Isaac Cody, father of "Buffalo Bill," in Salt Creek Valley, and H. P. Rively in Salt Creek Valley. Also that famous early day tavern and inn operated by David Herley known as the "Eight Mile House." This famous early day trail and road was pressed into constant use during the middle '50s by the great government Overland Freighting Company, operated by Majors Russell and Waddell, which had established its eastern terminus in the city of Leavenworth.

The Great Santa Fe Trail, the eastern terminus of which was at Westport Landing, Westport, Missouri, was also a famous and much used trail by the early day emigrants of the city and county of Leavenworth. The establishment of this great highway across the southwestern part of the United States was necessitated through the growth of trade between the western trading establishments of the American frontier and the Spanish provinces in Mexico. Baptiste La Lande was the first white man to traverse the country and deserts through which this trail extended. In 1804 he made the trip from the western trading posts in Missouri to Santa Fe, carrying with him a small amount of articles which he traded to the Spanish traders at the latter post. The trail was practically established in 1812 when Capt. Becknell with a party set out from

EARLY DAY TRANSPORTATION

Franklin, Missouri, for the purpose of trading with western Indian tribes. After they had traded with the various Indian tribes they proceeded on to Santa Fe, where they sold the articles which they had obtained from the Indians at an enormous profit. When they returned to the American settlements in Missouri with the story of their great success it served to stimulate such trading excursions on a larger and still larger scale. These great trading excursions led to the permanent establishment of the Santa Fe Trail and it remained in constant use until superseded by the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad. At first these trading excursions met with many hardships at the hands of hostile Indian tribes, who held up and plundered the moving parties. This led to the sending out of larger and larger trains. The first wagon train that ever passed over this great trail made the trip in 1821. Up to this time pack mules had been used as a means of carrying the various goods and provisions carried. This great highway deserves mention particularly in this history of Leavenworth County because of the fact that a branch of the trail led out of this city to the southwest and connected with the main trail.

Experience very early demonstrated that the use of oxen was best in the handling of the heavy freight wagons over these various trails and roads, although mules came into very popular use at a later date.

When oxen were used, the day was usually divided into two drives. As soon as early dawn approached, the first drive was started and its termination was in a measure decided by the most favorable camping place where grass and water were to be found in plenty. About midday the wagons were corralled and the oxen were given food. In very hot weather the afternoon drive was not ordered until about three or four o'clock. On such days the drive often continued until nine or ten o'clock in the night. When the oxen were unyoked they were turned over to the night herder, who kept watch over them as they went about seeking the best grass. As it was only necessary for the herder to keep track of the leader of the herd, one man could easily watch over as many as three or four hundred head of oxen at night. In the herd on the trail there developed, very soon after the start, one animal which all the others recognized as a leader. Wherever the leader of the herd went the rest usually followed. The night herder always kept track of the leader, and frequently got off his mule, drove a peg in the ground to which he attached a long rope that allowed the mule some grazing range, rolled himself up in his blanket and went to sleep. Sometimes when the grass was poor the leader would wander about a great deal in search of food, the rest following and it would be necessary for the herder to be on the alert all of the night. If the grass was plentiful the herd would usually obtain a sufficient supply in the course of three or four hours and would then lie down until morning. At the first appearance of morning the night herder would round up the herd and start them for the corral. After yoking up the oxen and eating their breakfast the train would move away slowly to repeat the operations above mentioned until they had reached their destination.

After the ox teams mule teams were pressed into service. The method of handling them was much the same as that of the ox teams.

CHAPTER VIII

FORT LEAVENWORTH

SELECTED BY COL. LEAVENWORTH—BOUNDARIES—DESCRIPTION—BUILDINGS—
WATER WORKS—SCHOOL—CHAPEL AND OTHER BUILDINGS—DURING WORLD WAR—A BASE OF SUPPLIES DURING WARS—COMMANDANTS—ARMY SERVICE SCHOOL—DISCIPLINARY BARRACKS.

Leavenworth County and City derive their names from Fort Leavenworth. On March 7, 1827, Col. Henry Leavenworth of the Third United States Infantry received orders to take four companies of his regiment and ascend the Missouri River. At the time the order was given Col. Leavenworth was on duty at Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis. A portion of the order in substance was as follows: "And when he reaches a point on the left bank near the mouth of the Little Platte River, and within a range of eighty miles above its confluence, he will select such a position as in his judgment is best calculated for the site of a permanent cantonment. The spot being chosen, he will construct, with the troops of his command, comfortable though temporary quarters sufficient for the accommodation of four companies."

He proceeded as instructed, carefully explored the region and finding no desirable site on the left bank of the river wrote to the department, stating that there was a suitable location on the right bank of the river within the distance designated and that he had concluded there was no other place that would answer the purpose. Early in June before the official approval reached him Col. Leavenworth began the erection of barracks and named the post Cantonment Leavenworth. On September 19, 1827, Major General Gains, commanding the Western Department, approved the site selected by Col. Leavenworth, which is the present site of Fort Leavenworth, and it grew to be the most important military post established by the government in the West. The name was changed to Fort Leavenworth February 8, 1832, as all army posts after this date were designated as forts.

The boundaries of the fort were given as follows in the office of the adjutant general:

"It extends from six to seven miles along the Missouri River and varies from one to two miles wide, containing about 6,840 acres, on the right bank of the river."

The land was claimed by the Delaware Indians. Later on some 939 acres of land were added to the reservation on the Missouri side of the river. There still exists the old stone wall with its port holes erected for a defense against the Indians. Extensive improvements have been made at Fort Leavenworth and on the reservation. A paved road connects the city of Leavenworth with the fort as also does an electric railway.

The fort is a magnificent natural park. To the east lies the Missouri River and to the west lies a long ridge of wooded hills. The grounds are dotted here and there with fine shade trees. To the southwest of the new barracks are golf links and drilling grounds. North of the new barracks and south of the old barracks are the west end parade grounds used for drilling purposes and athletic events. The National Cemetery lies at the foot of the hills on the west. It is a beautiful place covered with blue grass and shade trees. Here many illustrious dead lie. The graves are orderly arranged and many have monuments showing who are buried there. The body of Gen. Henry Leavenworth was removed from Delhi, New York, to the cemetery on Memorial Day, 1902. A road leads northwest toward Kickapoo at the western terminus of which is found a hog ranch, cattle barns and chicken houses owned and operated by the government. A fine herd of purebred cattle is kept by the government.

Besides the west end parade grounds there is a tract east of headquarters and south of the disciplinary barracks used for drill purposes. The fort is laid off in the same manner as a city. Along the streets are located officers' residences. They are fine structures generally built for two apartments so that two officers and their families can occupy the same building. There is a large hospital facing the west end parade grounds on the east. The old barracks are on the north and the one to the south, consisting of a double row all built of brick. Just northwest of the electric depot is a magnificent Y. M. C. A. Building, the gift of Helen Gould. Standing far out on the golf links is a radio station.

The first water works consisted of a six mule team and wagon driven to the edge of the river and there barrels were filled and distributed to the fort. In 1865 a pumping station was erected on the bank of the river about a quarter of a mile north of the bridge. Water was pumped from there to a large tank situated on Scott Avenue south of Pope Hall holding 21,000 gallons. From this water was hauled to the various places in wagons. Cisterns and wells were also used. In 1883 mains were laid from Leavenworth City and Ft. Leavenworth Water Co. and since then the water supply has been obtained from this source.

Metropolitan Avenue is 100 feet wide along the entire length of the southern boundary of the reservation. Grant Avenue, commonly known as the Fort Road connects the fort with Leavenworth City at Seventh Street and Metropolitan Avenue. It formerly connected at Fifth and Metropolitan Avenue. Sheridan's Drive is along the summit of the bluffs forming the western boundary of the post and is used exclusively for pleasure. It was named after General Sheridan.

Prior to 1901 the educational facilities of the post were limited. By an act of the Kansas State Legislature all of the military reservation was organized into a school district and called District No. 81. The Board of County Commissioners compose the school board and it is under the jurisdiction of the County Superintendent of Leavenworth County. The revenue derived for defraying the expenses of the school is obtained by taxes on the corporations in the district. The burden falls principally upon the railroads and the Leavenworth Water Company. The valuation of all the taxable property is about $500,000. Tax on this amount together with the State School Fund furnishes ample funds to carry on the school. There are five teachers including the principal. There is a well equipped school building erected by the government just east of Pope Hall on the incline overlooking the Missouri River.

In 1838 Congress enacted a law authorizing the appointment of chaplains in the United States Army and provided that they serve as school teachers. The Rev. Henry Gregory was appointed chaplain at Fort Leavenworth and he established what is known as the first school for white children on Kansas soil.

St. Ignatius Chapel, a Catholic Church edifice, was erected in the fall of 1889. The Post Chapel was erected in 1878. The Y. M. C. A. building was built and completed in 1907. It is a most beautiful structure without and handsomely furnished within. Helen Gould furnished the money to erect the building and was present at the dedication. Pope Hall was dedicated in the fall of 1894 and named in honor of Capt. James W. Pope. It is an amusement hall used for entertainments. Union Hall was constructed in 1871. It was built for a Catholic Church. The Post Hospital is a magnificent structure costing about $120,000. The Post Steam Laundry was opened for business in September, 1905. The Mess Hall was established in March, 1877. The postoffice was erected in 1828.

In 1917-1918 during the World War new temporary cantonments were erected along the Fort Road leading to the post proper. Many troops were quartered here and at the regular barracks. Most of the temporary buildings are still used for troops. There are at present 960 soldiers at the post.

Fort Leavenworth has been a base of supplies and rendezvous for troops and expeditions from the time of its establishment. Gen. Kearney's expedition to Santa Fe in 1845 started from here. So also were the expeditions of Gen. Joseph Lane to Oregon in 1848; Capt. Stansbury to Utah in 1849; Col. Fremont in 1849. All through the Civil War, the Spanish-American War and the World War troops were assembled, sent out and returned to be mustered out at Fort Leavenworth. It was the seat of government for the Territory of Kansas in 1854, being the only place in the territory having buildings convenient for government purposes.

The Army Service School.—The Army Service School was organized in 1881. It is a large stone building consisting of four halls, namely: Grant, Sherman, Sheridan and Wagner. It is located near the river bank north and west of the bridge. Wagner Hall is the library over which Col. Ezra B. Fuller has charge. The other three halls are devoted to offices, recitation rooms and other purposes connected with the school. A large clock is located in the tower over Grant Hall. Among the subjects taught are: Military Organization, Field Engineering, Tactics, Solution of Problems, Combat Orders, Discussion of Problems, Map Manuevers, Strategy, Military History, Care of Troops, Care of Animals, Military Intelligence, Leadership, Laws of War, Methods of Training.

The first class was graduated in 1883 and consisted of thirty-five members. The class of 1916 consisted of thirty-two members. The Army

United States Disciplinary Barracks.—The United State Disciplinary Barracks is a post separate and distinct from Fort Leavenworth and is managed by a Commandant, an officer of the United States Army. It was formerly called the Military Prison. The first buildings were erected in 1874-1875. The walls, which inclose about seven acres of ground, are from fifteen feet to thirty feet high, five and one-half feet thick at the base and two and one-half feet at the top. There are confined within the walls 1,559 prisoners and 110 on parole. Those who are convicted of violating the military law and all who have been convicted of charges not greater than a felony by the laws of the Federal Government are confined at this prison. The prison was discontinued in 1895 and continued again in 1906, during which time the Federal Penitentiary was located here. In 1906 the Federal Penitentiary was moved to its present location as is shown elsewhere. The farm is operated by the prisoners as is also the hog ranch, dairy, chicken ranch, brick plant and many and various trades inside the prison. It was here that many conscientious objectors, slackers and alien enemies were confined during the World War. Trades and occupations of all kinds are taught the prisoners. There is a dry cleaning plant, dye house, harness shop, shoe shop, tailor shop, laundry, salvage department, building department, farm, rock quarries, saw mill, brick plant, machine and blacksmith shop, carpenter and paint shop, broom shop, plumbing shop, electric shop, tin shop, road construction, ice plant. In these various departments the men are employed. On being restored prisoners are allowed to re-enlist in the Army. Any valuables he may have had are returned to him at his discharge together with a small amount of money and transportation to his former home. About all the building work around the prison is done by the prisoners with the aid of overseers. While under strict discipline they receive manly and considerate treatment. They are drilled in the manual of arms and calisthenics. Any Friday they may be seen drilling on the parade grounds. It has been said that they are the best drilled men outside of West Point.

The Prisoners Conference Committee was in effect in 1919. This committee incited the prison body to make extraordinary demands on the Commandant on July 22, 1919. Among them were the following:

1. A general amnesty for all military prisoners and that a telegram be sent to President Wilson demanding same.
2. Better mess, that the prisoners take over the mess.
3. Better living conditions, more time for mess and two issues of tobacco per week.

There was a general mutiny following. The committee was abolished and the prisoners locked in their cell wings on bread and water diet. The prisoners set fire to the Barracks Exchange and about all the buildings were destroyed. The fire started at night and there was ample opportunity for the prisoners to escape but when morning came not one was missing.

The following have been Commandants of the Prison or Disciplinary Barracks:

CHAPTER IX

ORGANIZATION OF COUNTY.

TERRITORIAL ACT OF 1855—BOUNDARIES DEFINED—TOWNSHIPS ORGANIZED—COURT HOUSE—COUNTY OFFICERS.

The First Territorial Legislature of 1855 formed Leavenworth County. Under Section 27 of the Territorial Act the boundaries were as follows: Beginning at a point on the southern boundary of Atchison County due north of a point four miles west of Dawson's crossing of the Fort Riley road, on Stranger Creek; thence due south to the main channel of Kansas River; thence down said channel to where said channel crosses the channel of the Missouri River; thence up said channel of the Missouri, to the southeast corner of Atchison County; thence along the southern boundary to the place of beginning.

The boundaries as then defined included the present county of Wyandotte. January 29, 1859 the Territorial Legislature Wyandotte County was detached and formed into a separate county, leaving Leavenworth County essentially as it now exists.

The General Statutes of Kansas for 1915 defines the boundaries as follows: Beginning at the southeast corner of Atchison County; thence west with the south boundary of Atchison County, to the corner of sections twenty-one, twenty-two, twenty-seven and twenty-eight, of township seven south, of range twenty east; thence south with the section lines between the third and fourth tiers of sections, to the middle of the main channel of the Kansas River; thence down said Kansas River, in the middle of the main channel thereof, to the intersection with range line between ranges twenty-two and twenty-three east; thence north on said range line to the old Delaware reserve line, the same being the dividing line between the original Delaware reservation and Delaware trust lands; thence east with said reserve line, to the western boundary line of the state of Missouri; thence northerly with said boundary line of the state of Missouri, to the place of beginning.

It is bounded on the north by Atchison County; east by Missouri River and Wyandotte County; south by Wyandotte County and the Kansas River; and west by Jefferson County and Douglas County.

The Board of Supervisors of Leavenworth County met February 10, 1859, at 10 o'clock a. m. and adopted the following resolution:

Later on a strip one section wide was taken from Stranger Township and added to Fairmount Township, making the townships of Fairmount and Stranger conform to the present boundaries. With this change the various townships attained the boundaries which they have at the present time.

Court House.—After the removal of the county seat from Kickapoo to Leavenworth the county offices were located at the northwest corner of Third and Delaware streets where they remained during some time and then removed to the City Hall at the northeast corner of Fifth and Shawnee streets, remaining there for many years. April 22, 1858, Jeremiah Clark offered the county part of the present site of the court house, under the following proposal:

“To the Board of Supervisors for the County of Leavenworth K. T. Gentlemen: I have the honor to submit the following proposition for your consideration. I hereby propose to donate to the County of Leavenworth, in perpetuity, the following described tract of land, viz.: The East half of Block Thirteen (13) known as Court Square lying 300 feet on Third street by 180 feet on Central avenue, and Walnut street, exclusively for the purpose of being occupied, as the site for Court House, public offices and such buildings as the county may require.

Respectfully Your Obt. Servant,

JEREMIAH CLARK.”

On May 18, 1858, the board accepted the proposition of Jeremiah Clark in the following resolution:

“Resolved by the Board, That the proposition of Jeremiah Clark, Esq., be and is hereby accepted, and that the County Attorney be requested to draw up a title deed to the land named in said proposition.”

On June 9, 1858, John G. Haskell was appointed architect of the court house and that the building when complete to be of the dimensions of about 100 by 200 feet in three wings, surmounted by a dome or tower and to cost about $100,000, the middle wing about 60 by 100 to be built at once with accommodations for jail in the basement at a cost of about $35,000.

On Monday, October 8, 1860, deed was received from Jeremiah Clark and Florinda Clark, his wife, for the east half of block thirteen (13) 300 feet front on Third street by 180 feet deep in Clark & Reese Addition, Leavenworth City, County and Territory of Kansas. The deed was accepted, approved and filed in the Recorder's Office. The other half of the said block was purchased for $9,200 from John Halderman and deed accepted June 21, 1869.

Although bonds were voted for the court house in June, 1858, it was not till February, 1873, that the structure was completed. It was built of red brick, with stone trimmings, and consisted of three stories and a basement. It had a lofty tower in which was situated a fine clock giving forth the time to many passers by. It was one of the most attractive court house buildings in the West. It would not be far wrong to value the court house property at $200,000.00, including the building proper, clock, fixtures, furniture and the site. Its situation commands one of the grandest views to the city of Leavenworth, the Missouri River to the east and the surrounding country. It was occupied by the county offices in 1873 and continued to be used as such till March, 1911.

On the morning of March 22, 1911, the court house burned. It was reduced to ruins except the walls which remained standing. On these walls was afterwards built the present structure. Owing to the strong vaults very few of the records were destroyed. There was $81,000 insurance on the court house and $2,000 on the furniture.

Steps were immediately taken by the County Board for rebuilding the court house. On June 24th, John G. Barnes was awarded the contract for removing the debris from the ruins of the old building at the price of $1,668 less $168 for the old material.

On July 31st W. P. Feth was appointed architect for the new Leavenworth County Court House. He was instructed to immediately prepare plans for the building.

Architect W. P. Feth made his report on plans which was in substance as follows:

The building on the exterior to be faced with stone, porticoes on four sides, windows to be increased in size, and the exterior design to be as shown by the sketch. Interior, the rooms to be changed as shown on sketch with enlarged vaults, the building made fire-proof throughout, terrazzo floor in corridor and concrete floors in offices, wood doors and trim, steam heat, plumbing and electric wiring. The building as described will cost approximately $96,000.

The contract for the erection of the present court house was awarded to J. B. Betts of Topeka, Kansas, for the sum of $100,189. September 14, 1912, contract for hardware for the court house was awarded to A. J. Atwater Hardware Company for $697.00.

January 13, 1912, the county board awarded the contract for furniture to the Wollaiger Manufacturing Company for $10,500 which included marble fronts for recorder's office, county clerk, county treasurer, sheriff and clerk of the district court, also battleship linoleum for all counter tops and desks.

It is noted that the board ordered changes made in the original contract with Mr. Betts and they are as follows, being made on December 7, 1912:

Concrete columns changed to Pheniz cut stone with a difference in price of $6,608.

Where concrete floors are specified change to terrazo with added cost of $3,000.

Extra window in office of clerk of district court with added price of $40.00.

Extra marble treads and rises in toilet rooms price additional, $169.00.

Change in steel beams north and south porticos additional price of $205.00.

Extra vault doors in treasurer's and clerk's office added cost of $25.00. This made a total additional cost of the building over the original contract of $10,047.

The total cost of the court house, additional grounds, etc., was as follows:

J. A. Cranston served as chief from 1897 to 1903, from 1905 to 1908; a part of the year 1893 and for the past three years has been a patrolman; he has the longest service as chief of any one on record in the department.

Cemeteries.—There are four burial grounds in the vicinity of the city of Leavenworth, namely: Mount Muncie, Mt. Calvary, Jewish Cemetery and Greenwood Cemetery. In 1858 a burial place known as Mount Aurora was donated by W. W. Bachus. This was used for about fifteen years and then abandoned. Most of the bodies were removed to Mount Muncie and the ground has been since used by the Leavenworth Water Company.

Greenwood Cemetery is located on the Lawrence Road at the city limits. This tract was donated by Mrs. Mary A. Davis in December, 1865.

Mt. Calvary Cemetery is three and a half miles south of the city on the DeSoto Road. It is the Roman Catholic burial grounds. It consists of an eighty-acre tract of land.

Mount Muncie Cemetery is located about three and a half miles south of the court house on the old Delaware Road. It adjoins the grounds of The National Military Home on the south. It is a tract of 187 acres, extending to the Missouri River.

It is incorporated under the laws of Kansas and a portion of the charter provides that the sale of the lots and proceeds of the investment of the funds are dedicated to the purchase and improvement of the grounds for a cemetery and keeping them durably and permanently inclosed and perpetual repair throughout all future time and no part of the funds shall inure as dividends or profits to the incorporators. The grounds were opened for burial about 1865. Thirteen thousand persons have been buried in this cemetery.

The Jewish Cemetery is located about three miles west of the city on the Mt. Olive road.

Cushing Hospital and Home of the Friendless.—Cushing Hospital grew out of the Home for the Friendless. The latter institution was organized in 1868. A charter was secured in 1870. An appropriation of $10,000 was made by the State Legislature and the city of Leavenworth purchased the present site of five acres for the institution. In 1879 an additional appropriation of $6,000 was obtained from the state for the purpose of an additional building. The first building was known as the "Cottage". The building as it now stands is of brick with stone trimmings, three stores and a basement located on Marshall street. It originally cost about $16,000. The Home of the Friendless was originally founded for the following purposes: First, to temporary shelter for sick and destitute women and children; second, to aid women in securing employment in respectable families and secure Christian homes for children; third, to reform the inmates and teach them a better mode of life. The management of Cushing Hospital has been in the hands of benevolent women of the various Protestant churches of the city till 1920 when an advisory board of men were selected to aid them. It was named after Mrs. C. H. Cushing who devoted much of her time and money to the founding and maintaining of this most needed institution.

The following are the names of the presidents: Mrs. C. H. Cushing, Mrs. S. A. Lord, Mrs. H. Mills, Mrs. Florence Hopkins, Mrs. O. H. Shelly, Mrs. Carrie Huffman, Mrs. Louis C. Feller.

The Kansas Orphan Asylum was located on a beautiful five-acre tract of land on South Broadway. It was organized and incorporated as a private charitable institution for Leavenworth city and county. The original cost of the land and buildings thereon was met by the business men of the city. The organization was formed in 1866. At first the asylum had only the right to receive and dispose of children under the apprentice law. In 1867 the State Legislature gave the asylum the right "to receive and retain orphans, destitute and friendless children, and provide the same with homes for such time, not exceeding their majority, and upon such terms as the board of directors may determine."

The institution was first known as The Leavenworth Protestant Orphan Asylum and Home for Friendless Children, and changed to the name of Kansas Orphan Asylum by act of 1874. By this act the board of directors were bound to receive children from all the counties of the state. The sum of $16,000 was expended for buildings which sum was appropriated by the legislature and donated by people of Leavenworth. The state also made appropriations at various times for the support and maintenance. The report of the board of directors in 1882 stated that twenty-eight children remained in the home, sixty-four received; making a total of ninety-two; forty-eight boys and forty-four girls; placed in homes, twenty; adopted, eight; agreement, twelve; returned to friends, thirty-one; died, one; sent to Reform School, one; remaining in the asylum, thirty-eight.

About the year 1900 the Dr. Stewart McKee took over the asylum and ran it till 1914 as The Leavenworth Hospital, a private institution. May 27, 1912, the board of trustees offered a lease to Leavenworth County for a County Hospital. On March 9, 1914, was recorded a lease dated May 25, 1912, and running to May 25, 1959, to the Board of County Commissioners of Leavenworth County. The inmates of the old Poor Farm were then removed to the County Hospital and the farm was sold.

The Leavenworth Free Public Library Association was organized in 1895 under the auspices of the Whittier Club of Leavenworth and the library was opened in a room in the Ryan building with Mrs. G. W. Mickel as librarian and Miss Syrena McKee and Mrs. Mary Fitzwilliam Carney as assistants.

In the spring of 1899 the city of Leavenworth voted to levy a tax for library maintenance and in August of the same year Mayor Neely called a meeting to effect a permanent library organization. In November, 1899, the first formal meeting was held at which officers were elected and rules, regulations and by-laws adopted. Miss Syrena McKee was appointed librarian and Miss Bessie Martin assistant. The following were members of the first Board of Directors: Judge M. L. Hacker, president; James A. McGonigle, vice-president; Mrs. J. A. Lane, secretary; A. J. Tullock, Mrs. Florence Hopkins, Mrs. W. C. Hook, Miss Catherine Becker, W. C. Schott, L. P. Rothchild, Mrs. G. W. Mickel, Mrs. E. W. Snyder and Mrs. Mary Fitzwilliam Carney.

Through the efforts of A. J. Tullock a gift of $25,000 was secured from Andrew Carnegie for the erection of a permanent library building. This gift was later increased to $30,000 and in May, 1902, the library was moved to its present location at Fifth and Walnut.

In November, 1904, Miss Syrena McKee resigned her position as librarian and was succeeded by Miss Ortha Johnson as acting librarian. Miss Johnson's appointment as librarian was confirmed in March, 1905. In January, 1907, she resigned and Asa Don Dickinson was appointed to fill the vacancy. Mr. Dickinson served until September, 1909, and was succeeded by Julius Lucht who resigned in May, 1912. Irving R. Bundy, his successor, served until March, 1916, when Truman R. Temple became librarian. Mr. Temple resigned in January, 1919, and was succeeded by Miss Elsie Evans, the present incumbent. The present Board of Directors is comprised of the following members: N. H. Burt, president; Lee Todd, vice-president; Mrs. Mary Fitzwilliam Carney, secretary; Mrs. Victor Cain, Mrs. Harry DeCoursey, A. J. Schilling, C. E. Snyder, O. H. Wulfekuhler. The only member of the present board who was a member of the original board is Mrs. Mary Fitzwilliam Carney. She has served continuously since the establishment of the institution.

The total number of books in the library, January 1, 1921, was 28,679. The number of registered borrowers was 5,216, 32 per cent of the population. The circulation for the year 1920 totaled 99,786. Besides the central library, the library maintains deposit stations at the Y. W. C. A. and the Small Memorial Home and traveling libraries in twelve of the public and parochial schools of the city.

Leavenworth Public Schools.—The Board of Trustees for the common schools of Leavenworth City was organized July 3, 1858. This board consisted of four members and was responsible for the management of the public schools although it had no control over the school funds which were entrusted to the common council. In May, 1864, the Board of Education, displacing the old Board of Trustees, was organized and entered upon its duties as guardian and manager of the educational interests of the city. In October, 1859, the board adopted the graded system. In 1865 the high school was organized and has continued to grow in importance and numbers since that time.

The Board of Education is now composed of six members elected at large for a term of four years. A clerk and treasurer are appointed by the board yearly.

The personnel of the present board is as follows: S. B. Langworthy, president; William S. Albright, vice-president; F. D. Bolman, W. W. Hooper, Thomas L. Todd, S. E. Nirdlinger, Ira J. Bright, superintendent.

The following table gives the essential facts concerning the schools:

Name of School	Location.	Enrollment
		Jan., 1921.	Principal.
High School	Fourth and Walnut	512	E. R. Stevens
Morris	Fifth and Osage	376	Josephine O'Keefe
Third Avenue	Third Ave. and Congress	413	Mary M. Pfefferkorn
Oak Street	Seventh and Oak	374	Olga Gates
Maplewood	Chestnut and Grand	220	Anna Willcott
Sumner	Fifth Ave. and Chestnut	146	B. K. Bruce
Lincoln	612 Dakota	124	E. H. Lawson
Franklin	Ninth and Arthur	100	Lillian McBride
Jefferson	Eleventh and Kickapoo	95	Lillian Kunz
Wilson	Union and Vilas	43	Jane Cleavinger
Cleveland Park	Sixteenth and Vilas	34	Anna Truesdale

The larger elementary school buildings, Oak Street, Third Avenue, Morris, and Sumner, need to be replaced by modern school buildings. Oak Street was rebuilt in 1874; Third Avenue was built in 1860, and Morris was built in 1867. It is needless to say that these buildings do not meet modern educational needs.

The Board of Education is now working out a School Building Program and there is little doubt that Leavenworth will have school buildings of which she may be proud.

The efficiency and standing of the Leavenworth school system is well set forth in the report of Allen D. Albert, a "city doctor" of national renown, who made a survey of the city in the early summer of 1920. He says:

"Leavenworth has developed one of the outstanding school systems in the Middle West. There runs through the whole establishment the modern purpose to fit the school to the child, to help the child find himself, to arouse motive rather than to impose disciplinary control, to build character rather than to teach by note."

The standing of the high school is best indicated by the fact that the Leavenworth High School has been a member of the North Central Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges for fifteen years and no school in Kansas has been a member of the association for a longer period. Affiliation with this organization means that admission without examination to practically all the larger universities and colleges of the middle west is granted graduates of high schools belonging to the association.

The Leavenworth Chamber of Commerce was organized by consolidating and absorbing the Commercial Club, Greater Leavenworth Club, Merchants' League, Retail Merchants' Association and Ad Club. This was done in 1914. The organization was incorporated under the laws of the State of Kansas in 1916 and since that time has operated as a corporation organized not for profit.

The Leavenworth Chamber of Commerce has been very active in business and civic affairs. It secured the establishment in Leavenworth in 1917 of the Red Cross Sanitary Unit No. 6. This unit, in co-operation with the United States Public Health Service and the City and County Governments and Board of Education, spent approximately $50,000 in sanitary work in the city and immediately adjacent county during the years of 1917, 1918 and 1919 and after the clinic was withdrawn this work was then carried on by the city government through the organization of a public health service.

The Leavenworth Chamber of Commerce undertook the organization of Leavenworth County and Leavenworth City for war work in preparation for the Third Liberty Loan campaign and perfected an organization in the city by dividing the congested district into committees, the residence district into precincts and the county into school districts. Loyal, public spirited citizens of the city and county volunteered in this organization which, with minor changes, "put over" the Third Liberty Loan campaign, the Second Red Cross Drive, the United War Fund Drive, the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign, the Near East campaign, the Victory Liberty Loan campaign, the War Savings Stamps drive and the Welcome Home Fund for the returning soldiers. One million and twelve thousand dollars ($1,012,000) was raised in the Third Liberty Loan which was over $300,000 more than the county's quota. Approximately $53,000 was raised in the Second Red Cross War Fund, which was $17,000 more than the county's quota. One million six hundred and sixty-six thousand dollars ($1,666,000) was raised in the Fourth Liberty Loan, which was approximately $50,000 more than the county's quota. The quota of $60,000 in the United War Work Drive was exceeded. Nearly $14,000 was raised in the Near East campaign. In the Victory Liberty Loan the county exceeded its quota of $1,100,000 by nearly $50,000 and nearly $4,000 was raised in the Welcome Home Fund to afford a proper celebration and welcome for the boys from Leavenworth County who did their part in the Great War.

The Leavenworth Chamber of Commerce sponsored the organization of the Leavenworth County Council of Defense which served during the war and the secretary-manager acted as chairman of the County Council of Defense. The Farm Agent acted as Vice-Chairman. The local Food Administration was also handled by the County Council of Defense.

The Chamber of Commerce also organized the local branch of the Military Training Camp Association in the early days of our participation in the war and acted as headquarters in this work of securing personnel for the training camps.

The Chamber of Commerce also organized the Leavenworth War-Camp Community Service, which handled the Community House at Leavenworth during the war.

The Leavenworth Chamber of Commerce also organized the work of securing harvest laborers and recruited harvest armies in 1918 and 1919, furnishing the farmers of Leavenworth County with harvest help and sending the excess to the harvest fields in central and western Kansas.

The Leavenworth Chamber of Commerce helped organize the Farm Bureau of Leavenworth County, which was the first bureau organized in the State of Kansas. They paid a substantial proportion of the expenses of the Farm Bureau for the first two years of its existence and at the present time furnished an office and headquarters for the Farm Bureau.

The Leavenworth Chamber of Commerce has been very active in the promotion of good roads. It originated the Fort to Fort road but the putting over of these petitions, especially on the cross county road, was done by the good roads booster in and around Tonganoxie. These road boosters at Tonganoxie had been trying for a long time to secure a hard road connection with Kansas City and with Lawrence, and at the time the Federal Aid Law was passed, practically the only hard road sentiment in the entire county was along the line of the east and west road from Tonganoxie to the end of the parallel road in Wyandotte County.

The Leavenworth Chamber of Commerce has approximately 325 members holding about 400 memberships. Through its activities, secured the purchase by the War Department of the old North Bridge. It has cooperated with the Farm Bureau in its efforts to bring pure-bred livestock into the county and with the State Holstein Association and the County Holstein Association in the holding of pure-bred livestock sales at Leavenworth.

CHAPTER XI

SLAVERY QUESTION AND THE CIVIL WAR.

MASON AND DIXON LINE—MISSOURI COMPROMISE—PLATTE PURCHASE—WILMOT PROVISIO—DRED SCOTT DECISION—COMPROMISE OF 1850—KANSAS-NEBRASKA BILL—"SQUATTERS" SALT CREEK MEETING—PRO-SLAVERY BANDS—EASTERN IMMIGRATION—LEAVENWORTH COUNTY IN THE CIVIL WAR—MILITARY LEADERS.

In order to give the reader a clearer idea of the events directly connected with the history of Leavenworth County in the Civil war, it will be necessary to briefly state some of the events leading up to the formation of the county into a political unit. This will bring into prominence the slavery question with many of its features.

During the early history of Maryland and Pennsylvania there arose a dispute between William Penn and Lord Baltimore as to the boundaries of their respective colonies. They agreed on a compromise line run by the surveyors, Mason and Dixon, which is the present boundary between the states of Maryland and Pennsylvania. The line later became the dividing line between free and slave-holding states. As a balance between the North and South the number of slave and free states were kept equal for some time. It was equal when Louisiana was admitted as a slave state in 1812, both sections having equal representation in the Senate; Indiana, in 1816, was balanced by Mississippi in 1817; Illinois, in 1818, was followed by Alabama in 1819. The North and Northwest grew so much faster than the South that in 1820 the House of Representatives was composed of 105 free state members and 81 slave state members.

Missouri petitioned for admission in 1818. Though a western community they had slaves and wanted to keep them. The bill was lost in the Senate. In 1819, a bill was introduced to admit Maine and another to admit Missouri. Both bills finally passed the House and Senate, but containing the famous Missouri Compromise, prohibiting slavery in Louisiana Purchase, north of 36 degrees 30 minutes north latitude, except in Missouri. Maine was admitted as a free state and Missouri was a slave state, again keeping the balance between the two sections. This act excluded slavery from the territory comprising Leavenworth County.

In forming the boundaries of Missouri originally the western boundary of the state was a line drawn north and south of a point at the intersection of the Kaw and Missouri Rivers. This made Platte County and the territory north of it just across the Missouri River from Leavenworth County free territory. Later on that territory was added to the State of Missouri. This was the first violation of the Missouri Compromise.

In 1846 David Wilmot of Pennsylvania offered a proviso in the House of Representatives, "That neither slavery nor involuntary servitude shall ever exist in any part of the said territory." This had reference to territory then under consideration for purchase from Mexico. The proviso failed to pass but again set into agitation the slavery question.

Dred Scott, a slave, was taken by his owner Dr. Emerson, in 1834, from Missouri to Rock Island, Illinois, a free territory. Afterwards he was taken to Louisiana, then back to Missouri, slave territory. Dred Scott brought suit for his freedom on the grounds that being carried into free territory made him free. The case was tried in the Supreme Court of the United States under title of Dred Scott vs. Sandford, and the decision handed down held that negroes, "had no rights which the white man was bound to respect." The North was bitterly incensed at the decision and declared that they were not bound by it.

The balance of free and slave states was continued till 1849; Arkansas (slave) was admitted in 1836 and Michigan (free) in 1837; Florida and Texas, both slave, in 1845; Iowa and Wisconsin, both free, in 1846 and 1848.

By 1850 the slavery question had grown to such enormity that such eminent statesmen as John C. Calhoun advocated secession of the slave states. This year what is known as the Clay Compromise was passed and contained the following provisions briefly stated:

- (1) New Mexico to be organized and admitted with or without slavery as their constitution may prescribe.
- (2) California be admitted as a free state.
- (3) Utah bill organized Utah as a territory intended to be free.

- (4) A new fugitive slave law to try cases in a "summary manner".
- (5) Prohibited slavery in the District of Columbia.

The bill in Congress proposed the organization of two territories, one to comprise the territory lying directly west of Missouri and extending west to the crest of the Rocky Mountains to be called Kansas; the remainder of the territory lying north of Kansas and west of Iowa, to be called Nebraska. Kansas was bounded on the north by Nebraska; on the east by Missouri; on the south by the 37th degree of North Latitude, a line dividing the Cherokees and Osages; on the west by the ridge of the Rocky Mountains. The bill was passed May 27, 1854, and signed by the President on May 30. The vote in the House was 113 yeas and 100 nays. The provisions pertaining to slavery are as follows:

First. That all questions pertaining to slavery in the territories and in the new states to be formed therefrom, are to be left to the decision of the people residing therein through their appropriate representatives.

Second. That all cases involving title to slaves and questions of personal freedom are referred to the adjudication of the local tribunals, with the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Third. That the provisions of the Constitution and laws of the United States in respect to fugitives from service are to be carried into faithful execution in all the organized territories the same as in the states,

The Missouri Compromise was positively annulled by the act. Stephen A. Douglas actively supported the measure which finally brought on the great Civil War. It was designed to uphold the aggressions of slavery but finally tolled its death knell. It meant two million men in arms, one-fourth million in soldier's graves, and the freedom of four million slaves.

So under the provisions of the foregoing act Leavenworth County, along with the rest of Kansas, was to be settled, government established and its institutions begun by the settlers. Up to the passage of this act of 1854 Leavenworth County may be said to have had no civilized residents except the soldiers sent to Fort Leavenworth, and a few missionaries to the Indians, together with a few fur traders.

In 1853, previous to the Kansas-Nebraska Act, all the eastern part of what is now Kansas was covered by Indian reservations and upon this territory white settlements were forbidden. The only exception being for government agents and religious missionaries. Immediately preceding the aforesaid act, treaties were secretly made with the various Indian tribes, consisting of the Delawares, Kickapoos, Shawnees, Sacs, Foxes, Otoes and other tribes, whereby a large part of the territory adjoining Missouri on the west was opened for settlement. These purchases of Indian land by the government was well understood by the Missourians of the western border. They had for some time been organizing societies such as "Blue Lodges," "Sons of the South" and others for the purpose of taking possession of the new territory for slavery.

Immediately following the passage of the aforesaid Kansas-Nebraska Act hundreds of Missourians crossed over into Leavenworth County, staked out large areas of land and held meetings to further their purpose.

With undue haste and before the time for occupancy of the Indians had expired the border Missourians occupied the greater portion of what is now Leavenworth County. They still retained their homes in Missouri and held squatters' claims in the adjoining territory.

As early as June 10, 1854, squatters held a meeting in Salt Creek Valley and formed an organization. The following resolutions were adopted by them:

Whereas, We the citizens of Kansas Territory and many other citizens of the adjoining State of Missouri, contemplating a squatter's home on the plains of said Territory, are assembled at Salt Creek Valley for the purpose of taking such steps as will secure safety and fairness in the location and preservation of claims; therefore be it

Resolved (1) That we are in favor of a bona fide Squatter Sovereignty, and acknowledge the right of any citizen of the United States to make a claim in Kansas Territory, ultimately with the view of occupying it.

(2) That such claim, when made, shall be held inviolate so long as a bona fide intention of occupying is apparent, and for the purpose of defending and protecting such claim, we agree to act in concert, if necessary, to expel intruders.

(3) That every person of lawful age who may be at the head of a family, who shall mark out his claim of 160 acres, so that it may be apparent how the same lies, and proceed with reasonable diligence to erect thereon a cabin or tent, shall be deemed to have made a proper claim.

(5) That all persons now holding claim shall have two weeks from this day, in which to make improvements contemplated by the foregoing resolutions.

(6) No person shall be protected by the Squatter's Association who shall hold in his own right more than one claim.

(7) That a citizen of the Territory be appointed as register of claims, who shall keep a book in which he shall register the name and description of all squatters, and their claims, and the dates of making the same for which registration he shall be allowed fifty cents, to be paid by the claimant.

(8) That we recognize the institution of slavery as always existing in this Territory, and recommend that slaveholders to introduce their property as soon as possible.

(9) That we will afford protection to no Abolitionists as settlers of Kansas Territory.

(10) That a "Vigilance Committee" be appointed by the chairman to decide upon all disputes in relation to claims, and to protect the rightful party; and for that purpose shall have power to call together the entire "Squatter's Association".

(11) That all persons who wish to become members of the "Squatter's Association" shall subscribe to the foregoing preamble and resolutions.

(12) That the Secretary of this meeting be instructed to hand these proceedings to E. S. Wilkinson and S. J. Finch, or either of them, for immediate publication and reference.

J. H. R. Cundiff, Secretary.

Lewis Burns, President.

Doubtless the pro-slavery element was stimulated to make settlement of the territory by the knowledge that organizations of the free state element were being formed in New England and other parts of the North. The sentiment along the Mississippi border was intense, especially just across the river from our county. The Salt Creek Valley meeting received extensive comment and the sentiment is shown in some of the following extracts from newspapers at that time:

The Democratic Platform, Liberty, Mo., June 8, 1854:

"We learn from a gentleman from the Territory of Kansas that a great many Missourians have already settled in that country, and are making arrangements to "darken the atmosphere" with their negroes. That is right. Let every man that owns a negro go there and settle, and our Northern brethren will be compelled to hunt further north for a location."

Also under date of June 27, 1854, same source:

"We are in favor of making Kansas a "Slave State" if it should require half the citizens of Missouri, musket in hand, to emigrate there, and even sacrifice their lives in accomplishing so desirable an end."

Platte Argus, Missouri, has the following:

"The abolitionists will probably not be interrupted if they settle north of the fortieth parallel to north latitude, but south of that line, and within Kansas Territory they need not set foot. It is decreed by the people who live adjacent that their institutions are to be established, and candor compels us to advise accordingly."

The Industrial Luminary, Parksville, Mo., June 20, particularly refers to the Salt Creek Valley meeting as follows:

"We give today, in another column, the resolutions passed at the meeting held in Kansas Territory on last week. They are more temperate than the Independence and Westport resolves. The claim-makers are right in organizing themselves, but they should avoid everything that savors of sectionalism. We hope fanatico-political combinations will be kept out of the new country, especially such as we read of being formed in some of the Eastern states. American freemen are wanted—not mercenary tools of furious demagogues either from the South or North."

The Baltimore Sun, on June 28, 1854, commenting on the Salt Creek Valley meeting states:

"According to these resolutions free-soilers will do well not to stop in Kansas Territory, but keep on up the Missouri River to Nebraska Territory where they may peacefully make claims and establish their abolition and free soil notions; if they do they will be allowed one day's grace to take up their bed and baggage and walk. It is estimated 2,000 claims have already been made within fifteen miles of the military reserve, and in another week's time, double that number will be made.

Meetings were held across the river in Missouri and bands were organized for the purpose of crossing over into Kansas and taking over the polling places in behalf of slavery. Subscriptions were taken to defray the expenses of the parties. Some of them crossed over at Leavenworth. The History of Clay County, Missouri, by Col. W. H. Woodson (1920) gives the following account:

"The troubles in Kansas began in 1853, when the Kansas-Nebraska bill was being discussed in the halls of Congress; this bill was passed by Congress, and repealed the Missouri Compromise of 1820. The law left to the people of the territory to decide whether slavery should exist or be excluded therefrom. "The true intent and meaning of the act" as therein expressed, to be "not to legislate slavery into any state or territory, or exclude it therefrom," but to leave the people form and regulate their domestic relations as they pleased, subject only to the Constitution of the general government. The Free Soilers claimed that all public territories were to be admitted into the Union, as free States, and that slavery was to be excluded therefrom; on the other hand, this was denied by pro-slavery men; that under the Kansas-Nebraska bill, they had the right to vote in the territory of Kansas, there being no restrictions denying them the right. The Free State men claimed only actual settlers had the right to vote in the territory. Yet it became a notorious fact that "Emigrant Aid Societies" from New England, and parts of the North, sent hundreds of men, "armed with the Bible in one hand, and a Sharp rifle in the other," as expressed by a noted Northern preacher, for no other purpose than to vote to make Kansas a free state. This was known to the people of the Southern states, and was the cause of great excitement to Missourians, and particularly so to those living in the Western part of the state, who determined if the Free State men intended to import voters into the territory, certainly the Missourians or any other persons had the right to exercise suffrage at the same polls, to determine whether the territory should be admitted as a state, with or without slavery.

No subject for years had caused so much talk during 1854, and winter of 1855, as the Kansas question. Organizations, not only in Missouri, but the Southern States, were made to take suitable action in the premises. Western Missouri was very active. The border counties on the North side of the Missouri River, next to Kansas, held meetings and men were urged to go to Kansas, and be there by March 30, 1855, for an election was to be held to choose members of the Territorial Legislature. On the South side of the Missouri, and in counties bordering on Kansas, like meetings were held, and resolutions passed pledging the people to go to Kansas.

The people of Clay County were thoroughly aroused. A large and enthusiastic meeting assembled at the court house, and many of the best men of the country were enrolled into companies, and started for Kansas. Many who did not go in person, furnished horses, arms and provisions. Gen. David R. Atchison was the leader, chief adviser and commander of the men living in Northwest part of the state. These men crossed the river at Leavenworth, and on the day of election cast their votes at the various polling places in that section. The Missourians from the Southern and western part of the state, south of the Missouri River, were under the leadership of Congressman Samuel H. Woodson, at Tecumseh, and points in that part of Kansas, to cast their votes. The result of this, the first, election in Kansas, was that the pro-slavery candidates were elected by an overwhelming majority.

During the entire troubles in Kansas until it was admitted as a state into the Union, Clay County furnished men and means to aid the pro-slavery cause whenever called upon. On one occasion when the young men of the county were preparing to go to Kansas in aid of the pro-slavery cause the following subscriptions were obtained to pay their expenses: Col. James H. Moss, $20.00; J. T. V. Thompson, $50.00; John Purley, $10.00; A. G. Reed, $20.00; F. R. Long, $20.00; W. E. Price, $20.00; E. M. Samuel, $50.00; R. C. Thompson, $10.00; A. Eastern Emigration.—By the middle of the summer of 1854 emigrant aid companies were formed in the East and North, and the great flow of Northern emigration moved toward Kansas and especially toward the territory bordering on the west bank of the Missouri River. Up to August there were probably not more than fifty free state families in the territory of Kansas, and most of them in the present boundaries of Leavenworth County. Thenceforth this vicinity became the theater of the most momentous struggle known to the nation. It was the beginning of the final contest between freedom and slavery, and became the issue of life and death to the great Republic.

Leavenworth County in the Civil War.—Leavenworth County furnished more troops in the Civil War than any other county in the State, having the largest population. Many from the surrounding country sought refuge here and enlisted in the Union Army. Leavenworth seemed to be a vast camp for enlistment to suppress the Rebellion. A detailed account will not be attempted to be given here.

The first company mustered into service was the Steuben Guards under Capt. Gustavus Zesch and designed as Company I, First Kansas Infantry. The date given was May 27, 1861. It participated in the battle of Wilson Creek and sustained a heavy loss. It took part in many other engagements.

CHURCHES

THE FIRST METHODIST—FIRST CHRISTIAN—EVANGELICAL GERMAN LUTHERAN—EPISCOPAL—JEWISH—PRESBYTERIAN—CONGREGATIONAL—EPISCOPAL, ST.
PAUL'S—CATHOLIC—FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST

The First Methodist Episcopal Church.—The first sermon preached in Leavenworth County was delivered by Rev. W. G. Caples, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, at or near the Leavenworth Company's coal shaft October 8, 1854. Occasional services were held by Rev. W. Butt, of Indiana, during the years of 1855 and 1856. It is said that he was fairly driven out of town by the pro-slavery element and hid for a long time in the hazel brush, so fearful was he for his life.

In May, 1857, George R. Weaver organized the first Methodist Episcopal Sunday School, which has been maintained ever since. At the same time a Quarterly Meeting of the church was held.

On February 21, 1860, the church was incorporated by a special act of the Kansas Territorial Legislature, under the name of "The First Methodist Episcopal Church, Leavenworth City, Kansas," and has ever since maintained its corporate existence.

The first incorporators or board of trustees named in the charter were George H. Weaver, Elijah Hughes, Jacob Landis, William B. Waugh, James R. Lunn, William Ferguson and William Fairchild. Before that time, however, under the ministry of Rev. Hugh D. Fisher the church had acquired the property at the northwest corner of Fifth and Choctaw streets and commenced and completed the erection of a church building thereon. Here the members worshiped until the fall of 1912, when the congregation moved to the new and present edifice at the northeast corner of Fifth and Chestnut streets. The old church building on Choctaw Street, together with the grounds and the parsonage were sold to The J. C. Lysle Milling Company. The new owners soon tore down the church building proper but the parsonage still stands. The new church is built of stone and cost approximately $50,000 completed. It is a fine modern structure of striking architectural beauty. The present membership is 400. There are several organizations of the church, consisting of a Foreign Missionary Society, Epworth League, Sunday School and a Ladies Aid Society. Ira M. Benham is the present pastor. First Christian Church.—The few members who stood for the restoration of the New Testament Church in creed, ordinance and life were organized into a church in the summer of 1855. Elder William S. Yohe was the leader and the first minister of the congregation. He had been a captain in the United States Army and received honorable discharge at Fort Leavenworth in 1845. He was one of the early settlers and became one of the leading citizens of these early days. A Christian Church at Little Stranger and at Nine Mile were also organized through his ministry.

The first building was a small frame building on the south side of Shawnee between Second and Third streets, erected in 1855. This was destroyed in the big fire of Leavenworth in 1857. In 1859 the present location was secured and the brick church erected at a cost of $7,300. The first trustees were J. C. Stone, William S. Yohe, J. P. Marshall, B. S. Richards and George Fisher.

The signers of the charter secured in 1858 were Elder J. B. McCleery, Julia McCleery, Dr. E. W. Younkin, R. A. Lovitt, B. S. Richards, W. B. Halyard, Sallie L. Halyard, Dr. J. P. Marshall, J. W. Renfrow, Clara Bell, Eleanor T. Kelly, Elizabeth M. Wilson and Mary Renfrow.

The following ministers have served the church since Elder Yohe: A. A. Bartholomew, John F. Rodgers, John O'Kane, Calvin Reasoner, James J. Sloan, J. P. Bauserman, F. M. Rains, Sumner T. Martin, Elder Underwood, Leslie Drake, Benton Bowen, William H. Embry, T. L. Myers, James S. Myers, S. W. Nay, W. J. Dodge, E. L. Cunningham, H. L. Davenport, B. E. Parker, Ernest Seibenthal, Bert E. Stover.

The church building has been improved many times. The lots cornering on Sixth Street and Seneca were secured in recent years. A neat parsonage has been erected. The church building has also been improved at an expenditure of $4,000 in the past two years.

The trustees of the church elected in 1920 were A. P. Flack, O. J. Snyder, Carl Holman, W. A. Strean and G. F. W. Knuth. The Bible School superintendent is W. A. Strean.

PUBLIC LIBRARY, LEAVENWORTH, KANSAS

The present pastor, Elder Bert E. Stover, after a year in welfare work with the American Expeditionary Forces in France, began his ministry here in October, 1919.

The Evangelical German Lutheran Church was organized in 1861 with the following members: G. Elbert, Peter Schott, George Lueders, Henry Schott, Henry Steinker, F. Scheer, ——— Becker and John Ulrich. The Rev. Michael Meier was chosen pastor and he remained their leader till 1882. The Rev. C. Hoffner became the pastor in that year. The congregation first worshipped on Delaware Street and occupied the building on the present site in 1881. It is a brick building costing $3,500 and is situated on the northwest corner of Seventh and Miami streets. A parsonage is attached to the church.

The Michigan Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in February, 1888, and at the same time incorporated under the laws of Kansas. William Fairchild donated the lots on which the church building is located at the northwest corner of Michigan Avenue and Shoemaker Avenue. Mr. Fairchild was a prominent member of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Leavenworth. William Dill, also a member of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, secured the charter. So this church may be considered a child of the First Methodist Episcopal Church.

Jewish Church.—From their first arrival in the city here the Jews have always maintained a house of worship. In early days services were held in a building which stood near the northwest corner of Fifth and Seneca streets. In 1866 a synagogue was erected on the southeast corner of Sixth and Osage streets. Col. R. N. Hershfield, a resident of Kansas City, Missouri, is the only living charter member of this church today. In 1916 this synagogue was torn down and a new temple erected. This structure represents a cost of $35,000.00. Recently a new $2,500.00 pipe organ was installed.

The rabbis who have officiated in the old as well as the new temple since 1893 and the term of their rectorship is as follows: Rabbi Rosenpitz, 1893-1894; Rabbi Samuel Marks, 1894-1897; Rabbi Kornfeldt, 1897-1898; Rabbi Zelonika, 1898-1899; Rabbi S. Frey, 1899-1901; Rabbi Joseph Kahn, 1901-1904; Rabbi David Liknaitz, 1904-1914; Rabbi H. Elkins, 1915-1916; Rabbi J. J. Meyerovitz, 1918-1919; and Rabbi Emil Ellinger, who has charge at the present time.

The First Presbyterian Church was organized January 1, 1856. It was the first white Presbyterian Church organized in Kansas. With the exception of the Southern Methodist Church it was the first religious organization in the city of Leavenworth. Rev. C. D. Martin presided at the organization, and the following were among the first members: George I. Park, Sarah Park, John I. Moore, Jane Moore, R. R. Kirkpatrick, Elizabeth A. Kirkpatrick, Margaret Doyne, John D. Ross, Auley McAuley, Mary Douglas and John R. Rapp.

Rev. A. W. Pitzer, of Danville Seminary, was the first pastor, being called in May, 1857. He remained the pastor until 1861, when he resigned to take up the cause of the South. From this time on till January 1, 1863, the church was without a pastor. On this date William S. Sterrett became the pastor and remained till July, 1863. On August 6, 1863, George S. Woodward, of Parkville, Missouri, was elected pastor and remained till December 18, 1867, resigning on account of ill health. Under his charge the church became prosperous and added a large membership.

The first church building was erected on Miami Street between Sixth and Seventh and was dedicated in July, 1857, by Rev. J. G. Fackler, of Liberty, Missouri. The first Sabbath School was organized August 23, 1857, with six teachers and eighteen scholars.

The church was united with the Westminster Church February 4, 1867, and the congregations were joined on March 5, 1867. In February, 1868, the church resumed its former status in Odd Fellows Hall and Rev. William L. Green was chosen pastor May 24, 1868. He held the pastorate till October, 1869. William R. Brown became the pastor January 23, 1870, and remained till January 27, 1873.

In 1871 the church building was completed on Delaware Street between Sixth and Seventh on the north side and was dedicated on October 22. The cost including the ground was $20,000. In 1879 a large and beautiful chapel was built holding about 500 people. Col. J. L. Abernathy was the Sunday School superintendent during this time. The Rev. William Alford, of the Methodist Church, supplied the pulpit for a short time after the resignation of Rev. Brown. June 29, 1873, Dr. W. N. Page was elected pastor. This building on Delaware Street was used for church purposes till January 1, 1909, and soon afterwards sold to the Goodjohn Sash and Door Company, who at the present time are using it in their business.

The present church building at the southwest corner of Fourth and Walnut streets was dedicated January 1, 1909. It is one of the finest church buildings in the city. The cost, including the manse and grounds, is about $80,000. The pipe organ cost $7,000 and was donated by E. P. Willson and family.

Doctor Page continued to be the pastor till 1905, a continuous service of thirty-two years. The pastors since then are as follows: R. A. Elwood, 1905-1908; A. H. Morrison (supply), 1908-1910; R. B. A. McBride, 1910-1915; A. B. Miller, 1915-1921, and William R. Dodd, February, 1921.

The First Congregational Church was established in the city of Leavenworth in 1857. Prior to this and in the year 1855 Rev. J. N. Byrd had settled in Kansas Territory and in the vicinity of Leavenworth. Rev. Byrd was an ardent Free State man and early came into disrepute with the pro-slavery factions, who did not hesitate to threaten his life because of his opposition to them.

In November, 1857, Rev. R. D. Parker, one of the Kansas Yale Band of Volunteers, was commissioned by the Home Missionary Society to hold services in the city of Leavenworth. On March 6, 1853, articles of faith and a church covenant were adopted by the following twenty-seven persons, who constituted the original charter members of the church: James Taylor, Maria Taylor, C. B. Brace, Harriet N. Brace, Caroline Williams, Samuel Norton, Elizabeth Norton, M. S. Adams, Lizzie C. Adams, G. Mortimer Lee, J. A. Bullen, Anna M. Bullen, Anna C. Hastings, S. L. North, Maria J. In the autumn of 1860 two lots were purchased on the northwest corner of Fifth and Delaware streets and the first house of worship of this congregation was erected. It was a brick edifice 42x60 feet and cost $5,000. Its location was that now occupied by the Wulfekuhler Bank Building. In 1863 a pipe organ was purchased for the church and installed and is to this day in use by the church. The old building was sold in the year 1887 and a location at the northeast corner of Fifth and Walnut streets was selected, where the congregation caused to be erected the present church building at a cost of $30,000.

The following is a list of the ministers of the First Congregational Church from its establishment in the city until the present day and the periods of time which they served in that capacity: Rev. Butcher, the present rector of the church, has served since 1914 to this date.

St. Paul's Episcopal Church.—The first effort to establish a parish of the Episcopal Church in the city of Leavenworth occurred in November, 1856, when Rev. Hiram Store commenced his missionary work in the city. Later and on December 10, 1856, Rev. Store organized the St. Paul's Church of this city. It was the first organized Episcopal parish in the territory of Kansas. He remained as pastor of the church from 1856 until 1859. This, the first church of this congregation, was consecrated on November 1, 1858, by Bishop Kemper. The consecration of this church was also the first consecration of any Episcopal Church in the Territory of Kansas.

The location chosen for this church was or at least proved to be unfortunate and impeded in a way the growth of the parish. In October, 1859, the Rev. Store resigned the rectorship to accept a chaplaincy at Fort Leavenworth.

On March 6, 1863, the Church of St. Paul was reorganized by the adoption of a constitution and the election of wardens and a vestry. The Rev. John H. Egal, D. D., was called to the rectorship. Steps were at once taken to erect a new church building. Three lots were purchased on the corner of Seventh and Seneca streets and plans for the erection of a building that would seat about 500 people were approved.

The building of this church was commenced in June, 1863, and on Sunday, July 10, 1864, the first services were held there. At that time the number of communicants reported was fifty-three. At this date there are 252 active members.

The following is a list of the rectors: Rev. Hiram Store, 1856-1859; Rev. John H. Egal, 1863-1868; Rev. John M. Kendrick, 1868-1874; Rev. Charles S. Daniel, 1876-1877; Rev. Thomas W. Barry, 1878-1883; Rev. Charles T. Stout, 1884-1885; Rev. T. C. Tapper, 1886-1891; Rev. S. B. Pond, 1891-1893; Rev. N. S. Thomas, 1894-1897; Rev. F. N. Atkins, 1898-1907; Rev. James C. Cameron, 1908-1910, and Rev. R. K. Pooley, from 1911 until this date.

Cathedral of Immaculate Conception and Catholicity in Leavenworth.

—Catholicity in Leavenworth County was practically born with the visit of Rev. Joseph Anton Lutz to Cantonment Leavenworth, September 18, 1828. Father Lutz had been sent by Bishop Rosati, first bishop of St. Louis at that time, to open a mission among the Kansas Indians. His visit to the northwestward thirty-seven miles from the Kaw's mouth was merely an incident of his labors among the Kansas. A few years later Father Roux was sent by Bishop Rosati to the mouth of the Kansas River as a missionary to the Kansas Indians. During his stay there he made numerous visits to the Kickapoo Indians, then living to the northwest of the present government reservation and near and about the little village of Kickapoo. In a letter under date of January 20, 1834, Father Roux wrote Bishop Rosati relative to the Kickapoos as follows:

"The Kickapoo prophet has two very docile sons, who, like their father, show themselves very favorably inclined toward religion. Concerning that nation I could tell you very many fine things which I have heard with my own ears and seen with my own eyes. They pray every day, morning and night and before meals; they sanctify Sunday as we do and spend it entirely in prayer. They do not swear or wage war, nor lie, nor have more than one wife; they believe in Heaven, Purgatory and Hell, honor the Blessed Virgin and the Saints, etc. I should never finish were I to tell you all the edifying things I saw among them."

In 1836 a Catholic Mission was opened among the Kickapoo Indians at Kickapoo by Rev. Charles Van Quickenborne. Through Father Van Quickenborne's solicitations at Washington the sum of $500 a year had been allowed for the maintenance of the mission. Funds for the erection of the various buildings had been solicited by the reverend father in different eastern cities. With these funds a building was erected and a chapel, which was dedicated to St. Francis Xavier. This was the first Catholic place of worship in the Missouri Valley. It was not until 1920 that the last of the old mission building was completely torn down. The land where it formerly stood now belongs to O. M. Spencer.

In 1837 Father Van Quickenborne was summoned from the mission and the next priest to become Father Superior was Rev. Christian Hoecken, S. J. On June 21, 1851, Father Hoecken died while aboard a river steamboat near Council Bluffs, Iowa, from cholera, which he had contracted from a passenger to whom he had ministered. Rev. Anthony Eysbogels then became Father Superior of the Kickapoo Mission.

Up to 1850 the Indian missions of the Missouri Valley were subject to the See of St. Louis, when the Holy See erected the Vicariate Apostolic of the Indian Territory East of the Rocky Mountains and appointed the Rt. Rev. J. B. Miede Vicar Apostolic. The Vicariate Apostolic over which Bishop Miede ruled as spiritual adviser extended from the Kansas River at its mouth to the British possessions on the north and from the Missouri River west to the Rocky Mountains. Bishop Miede made Pottowatomie Mission, which later developed into St. Mary's College, his place of residence.

In 1853 Bishop Miede visited Rome. Upon his return he found that Kansas had been opened to white settlers and that several promising towns had sprung up in the territory, the most promising of which he believed to be Leavenworth. On May 15, 1855, he visited here and celebrated mass and on the same day fixed this city as his permanent residence.

Shortly after this Bishop Miede purchased some ground near the present site of the Cathedral and a temporary frame building 24x40 feet was erected to be used for church purposes. Two years later Bishop Miede had a larger building 40x100 feet erected, dedicating it to the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

In 1864 Bishop Miede projected the erection of a cathedral. The corner stone for the cathedral as it stands today was laid in September, 1864. December 8, 1868, the cathedral was ready for dedication.

The dedication ceremonial was attended by many distinguished prelates. Among them was the Most Rev. R. P. Kendrick, Archbishop of St. Louis; the Rt. Rev. John Hennessey, Bishop of Duquesne; the Rt. Rev. James O'Gorman, Vicar Apostolic of Nebraska, and the Rt. Rev. J. J. Hogan, of St. Joseph. The sermon in the morning was delivered by Rt.

Rev. John Hennessey, while that in the evening was delivered by Rev. P. J. Ryan, later Archbishop of Philadelphia.

There is a conflict of opinion among historians as to when, where and by whom the first mass was celebrated within the city of Leavenworth. Andreas in his "History of Kansas" states that it was celebrated by Bishop Miede in the house of a Mrs. Quinn in 1854. The late H. Miles Moore in his "Early History of Leavenworth City and County" holds that the first Catholic mass was celebrated in the early summer of 1855 by the Rev. Father Fish, of Weston, Missouri, at the home of Andy Quinn on the south side of Shawnee Street between Second and Third streets, where a bureau was pressed into service as an altar.

The first pastor of the Cathedral parish was Father Heiman. He officiated until 1864, being assisted by Rev. James DeFouri and the Jesuit Fathers. After that time the following ministers have held the pastorate of the parish: Rev. Paul Ponsiglioni, S. J.; Rev. Father Coghlan, S. J.; Rev. Father Corbett, S. J.; Rev. Father Schultz, S. J.; Rev. Father Panken, S. J.; Rev. Ambrose Butler, S. J.; Rev. William Fitzgerald; Rev. James DeFouri, V. G.; Rev. James O'Reilly; Rev. John B. McCune; Rev. John Cunningham; Rev. Father Ward, and Rev. B. S. Kelly, who is at present rector and dean of the Cathedral Parish.

Easton Catholic Church.—The pioneer Catholic family of Leavenworth County was that of Pensoneau, who dwelt on Stranger Creek. The name of Lawrence Pensoneau appears in the letters of the first missionaries to this region. He was an agent for the American Fur Company, which was largely controlled by the Catholic Chouteau family, one member of which founded St. Louis and another of which was largely instrumental in the founding of Kansas City. The records as far back as the early thirties of the last century found in the "Kickapoo Register," which is now kept at St. Mary's, Kansas, among the first marriages and baptisms the name of Pensoneau.

After Bishop Miede was constituted Vicar Apostolic of all Indian missionary work east of the Rocky Mountains, he sent the Rev. Ambrose T. Butler to the settlers on Stranger Creek in the vicinity of Easton in the year 1854. Among the other priests that were later sent there were the Rev. Bernard Hayden, and Rev. Sylvester Meehan. The latter is now at Everest, Kansas. Father Hayden has been dead for a number of years.

In 1889 the Rev. Francis Taton was appointed to Easton and outlying missions then comprising Springdale and St. Joseph's at Mount Olivet.

Father Taton completed a beautiful stone church at Springdale in 1893. He built the present St. Joseph's Church at Mount Olivet also. The present pastor at the Mount Olivet Church is Rev. A. Grootaers, who having built the present parish house adjoining the church moved there from Easton to become the first resident pastor of the St. Joseph's of the Valley Church. He was succeeded at Easton by Rev. Father Fisher, now at Tonganoxie, Kansas. The next pastor at Easton to follow Father Fisher was Father Lercke, who was forced to leave on account of ill health and died later in California. His successor was Rev. J. A. Laczniak, who is now pastor at the St. Casimer's Catholic Church of Leavenworth. Father Laczniak's predecessor at St. Casimer's was sent to Easton, where he built the present beautiful brick church of Roman style. He also furnished the church with a beautiful altar and stations and a large bell.

The Rev. Stephen F. Healy, who is at the present time pastor of the St. Lawrence Church at Easton, is a zealous young priest who is well pleased with the generous co-operation of his parishoners in religious work. He is contemplating the erection of a new rectory in the near future.

The Kickapoo Catholic Church, known as the Sacred Heart Church of Kickapoo, has an interesting history. The settlers of Kickapoo and vicinity were among the very first in the county of Leavenworth as well as the territory of Kansas. Among them were a number of devout Catholics. Bishop Miede, after establishing his residence in the city of Leavenworth, furnished the parish and vicinity with the services of a priest who at first was required to say mass in private residences in the neighborhood, the Catholic mission houses at the place having been abandoned. For a number of years the Catholic families of the vicinity were forced to do without a church, owing to the bigotry of the Kickapoo Town Company, who blocked every effort on the part of the Catholics to get ground on which to build a church. At length a tract of land was donated to the Catholics to be used for church purposes by Theodore Meyers, an early day resident of the city and community and a church was built.

The priests of St. Joseph's Church were among the first to go to Kickapoo. Among the pastors of the church were Rev. M. Huhn, Rev. J. Hurley, Rev. James O'Reilly, Rev. T. H. Kinsella, Rev. J. A. Shorter, Rev. A. Jennings, Rev. T. J. McCaul and Rev. J. M. Dougherty. It was during Father Kinsella's pastorate that the old frame church originally built was remodeled. A vestibule was added to it during Father Shorter's term as pastor.

When Father Dougherty was in charge he found it necessary to build a larger and better church. It was during his term as pastor that the beautiful brick church was erected that stands there today. After Father Dougherty considered that all his time should be taken up with the church at the fort, the Rt. Rev. Bishop Ward placed the care of the Kickapoo Church under that of the cathedral clergy. Rev. B. S. Kelly being rector there, the Rev. Thomas McNamara, assistant at the cathedral, usually held divine services at the Kickapoo Church. He built there a modern two-story brick rectory and was appointed resident pastor. Upon Rev. Father McNamara's being transferred to Blaine, Kansas, the Rev. R. B. Groener was appointed resident pastor at Kickapoo. Father Groener at the present time has complete charge of the Kickapoo parish.

The Catholic Church at Hoge.—The priests stationed in Leavenworth did not neglect any of the Catholic families even though they lived miles away during the early days. There being a number of Catholic families living in the community now known as Hoge during the early days of statehood, a congregation was organized there by Rev. Aloysius Laigneil, S. J., who resided at the cathedral in 1866, and a church was built and placed under the invocation of the Holy Angels. One year following this, Rev. Laigneil was succeeded in the pastorate by Rev. Ambrose Butler, who before the end of the year 1867 was replaced by Rev. Joseph Perrier, who remained four years.

The rectors of the Holy Angels' Church at Hoge from 1871 to 1874 were the following: Rev. John Murphy, Rev. M. J. Dougherty and Rev. P. J. Tuit. In 1874 Rev. Ambrose Butler returned and remained until 1875. His successor at Hoge was the Rev. John Leary. He remained there as rector until 1879.

The next rectors at Hoge in the succession in which they held the pastorate were as follows: Rev. Michael Browne, Rev. Bernard Hayden, Rev. Michael Harrigan, Rev. Peter Bishop, Rev. James McNamee, Rev. Patrick Shields, Rev. M. D. Cavanaugh, Rev. P. J. Kennedy, Rev. Sylvester Meehan, Rev. Eugene Dekat and Rev. Thomas J. McCaul. The Revs. James McNamee and Thomas J. McCaul died while at Hoge in charge of the prison there.

The present pastor, Father Twomey, has replaced the old stone church with a handsome brick edifice in the Roman style and dedicated the new church to St. Patrick. The altar and other interior furnishings are very beautiful and are in keeping with the architecture. A Catholic Cemetery adjoins the church in which many of the pioneer Catholics of this community have long since been laid to rest. A beautiful monument has been erected in the cemetery by the members of the parish in honor of the Rev. James McNamee, who died at Hoge attending his parish.

The Catholic Church at Lansing was originally located at the city of Old Delaware, which stood about two miles east of the present site of Lansing. It was dedicated, when built, which was at an early date when Delaware was making a strong bid for city supremacy in Leavenworth County, to St. Francis de Sales.

Father Downey, who was succeeded at the fort parish and also in the mission in Delaware Township by Rev. John Hurley, had made numerous attempts to secure a site for a church in the city of Lansing without avail. Father Kinsella, who succeeded Rev. John Hurley at the Delaware Mission, bought the ground in Lansing on which the Catholic Church of that place now stands and had the small church building which was standing on the present site of old Delaware moved to the new location.

In 1888 Father Kinsella was succeeded as rector of the Lansing Church by the Rev. E. Coolen, who is now in the Wichita Diocese. In 1890 the Rev. H. Eummellen had charge of the Delaware Mission for a period of about five months. During their rectorship there Fathers Coolen and Eummellen visited the Kansas Penitentiary and said mass each month. They also had charge of the Holy Epiphany Church while there. Father Shorter succeeded them, having in addition the Kickapoo Mission and the St. John's Hospital.

Following Father Shorter the Rev. J. Heuberger was appointed chaplain of the St. Vincent's Home and was also given charge of the St. Francis de Sales parish at Lansing. When he received an appointment in Miami County, Father Shorter was succeeded by Rev. J. W. Gormley, who was in turn succeeded by Rev. Patrick Smith. It was during the rectorship of Father Smith that a building fund was collected. Father Smith's successor increased this fund and during the rectorship of Father McManus, who succeeded Father Smith, and the Rev. F. A. Geinitz, who in turn succeeded him, this fund had reached such proportions that Father Geinitz decided that instead of erecting a new building the addition of a transept with other changes would answer the immediate needs of the parish. Alterations and improvements were accordingly made. Stained glass windows, new pews and a furnace were installed. During this time

Father R. B. Groener, who had been away on account of ill health, returned from Wyoming. He was shortly after his return appointed by Bishop Ward, chaplain of St. Vincent's Home and rector of St. Francis de Sales Church at Lansing. When Father Groener was transferred to the Sacred Heart Church at Kickapoo he was succeeded at Lansing by Father O'Farrell. The Rev. Father Malloy succeeded Father O'Farrell at St. Francis de Sales and is in charge there at the present time.

Tonganoxie Catholic Church.—The Catholics in the Tonganoxie community were visited in the early days of the county by Rev. Louis Guenther, O. C. C., and other priests of the neighboring missions.

When St. Patrick's Church at Hoge received a resident priest in Father McCaul, he and his successors there attended Tonganoxie as a mission.

The Rev. O. E. Degan, Rev. J. A. Budrean and Rev. E. Fischer, who is now pastor at Holy Family Church at Tonganoxie, have succeeded one another as resident priests of the church at Tonganoxie.

The Sisters of Charity, of Nazareth, was founded by a priest by the name of John Baptist Mary David, who came to America from France with the future Bishop Flaget, whose coadjutor he became in Bardstown, Kentucky. Their first school was opened there in 1819. Their rule was founded after that of St. Vincent de Paul.

In 1841 the nucleus of a new community went to Nashville, Tennessee for educational and charitable work. In 1858 the Nashville community was invited to Leavenworth by Bishop Miede, who afterward always considered this one of the greatest things he had done for Kansas. The first Sister Superior here for the Sisters was Mother Francis Xavier. Around this most amiable personage there is woven a wealth of history and romance that essences of the most beautiful thought. She was born November 13, 1813, in Cincinnati, Ohio, of Protestant parentage, her father being a Methodist minister. On her first entering the Novitiate at Nazareth, her father came after her and forced her to return home. There was no objection on the part of her mother to her taking up her chosen work, and shortly afterward she escaped from home and again returned to the Sisters of Nazareth. The mother of Sister Xavier wrote kindly and frequently to the convert daughter, but the father remained bitter toward the daughter to the end of his life. After finishing her novitiate Sister Xavier was sent to Louisville, Kentucky, where she had charge of an orphanage for a time. In 1853 she was sent to Nashville, Tennessee, from which place she came to Leavenworth in 1858. Sister Xavier died April 2, 1895, being at the time of her death over eighty-one years of age.

Soon after their arrival in Leavenworth the Sisters began teaching in two small frame buildings. In 1860 a boarding school was opened in a rented building, but shortly after this Bishop Miege erected an academy, to which girls were sent from neighboring territories. A novitiate was approved by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Miege and the Sisters began receiving candidates for the Sisterhood. In 1868 St. Mary's Female Academy, conducted by the Sisters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul of Leavenworth, Kansas, was incorporated under the state laws of the State of Kansas, and thereafter conferred diplomas of graduation on those who had finished satisfactorily the academy's course of studies.

Mount St. Mary's Academy.—In 1868 it was found necessary to plan a larger building than the Sisters then had for a mother-house of the Leavenworth Sisters. On April 30, 1868, the foundation of the present Mount St. Mary's Academy south of the city of Leavenworth was commenced. In a short time the sisters obtained thirty-five acres of ground which has been increased by later purchases. James A. McGonigale received the contract for building the academy. The architecture is of the Italian order and the academy as it now stands is one of the finest educational institutions in the country.

The completed building was occupied by the sisters in 1870. Before it was completed the sisters found themselves short of funds. A loan of $25,000.00 was secured through a St. Louis bank, which enabled them to properly equip and furnish the building.

With the exception of three terms of office held by Mother Vincent, Mother Xavier was Superior of the Leavenworth Sisters until 1877, when Mother Josephine Cantwell was elected. Mother Cantwell was very efficient in paying off the debt of the property. In 1886 she was succeeded in the office of Mother Superior by Sr. Josepha Sullivan, who secured a second state charter for the community in 1892. In 1890 the erection of a handsome addition conformable in style to the original building was begun. The addition comprises the spacious chapel of the Annunciation. It was dedicated by the Rt. Rev. L. M. Fink, O. S. B. D. D., December 6, 1894. Buildings equal to those described have since been added. Xavier Hall has a seating capacity of 500. The new Annunciation Chapel is a fine specimen of the Basilica style. Its fine marble altars and its paintings including the stations are works of art. The teaching staff is well equipped to give the students a thorough academic education. At the present time there are over 100 students enrolled.

The Sisters of Charity also conduct the parochial schools in the cathedral parish, Sacred Heart parish, and St. Joseph's parish. The pupils in these three schools number about 600. They also act as teachers in the Leavenworth Catholic High School, which has over 100 pupils enrolled.

St. Vincent's Home.—It was the desire of Bishop Miede, once the Sisters of Charity were located in Leavenworth, to establish an Orphan's Home or Asylum. Accordingly a fair was held under the direction of Bishop Miede in 1862 and from the proceeds, which amounted to $7,000.00, a neat two-story brick building was erected before the end of the year. It was located on Kickapoo Street and it was here that the orphans of Leavenworth received a home under the charge of the Leavenworth Sisters of Charity.

The Orphanage was later removed to its present location by Bishop Fink. The building erected by Bishop Fink was improved and enlarged by Bishop Lillis and more land was added. At the present time accommodations can be furnished 100 children.

St. John's Hospital.—Another and one of the most valuable of institutions which was built and conducted by the Sisters of Charity in the city of Leavenworth was St. John's Hospital. This was opened by the Sisters March 15, 1864. At that time it was the only hospital in Kansas.

The first Sister Superior of the hospital was Sister Joanna. Several times the old building was improved and remodeled and in 1911 the hospital was entirely reconstructed and modernized so as to make its equipment equal to the best. At the present time it has a capacity of seventy-five beds. It has a training school and a maternity department. The hospital affords every facility for diagnosis and for medical and surgical operations, including an operating room with every modern improvement.

St. John's has an "open staff" of physicians, so that any reputable physician can attend his patients that may be there. It has done a great deal of charity work and is now well patronized. Its doors are open to all colors and creeds.

St. Joseph's Church, Leavenworth.—When the Rt. Rev. Louis Mary Fink was consecrated Bishop of Eucarpia as coadjutor to Bishop Miede his first public function in Kansas was the consecration of St. Joseph's Church at Leavenworth on June 16, 1871. Bishop Miege himself celebrated the solemn high mass.

In the year 1858 Rev. Casimer Seitz, O. B., who was the first priest ordained by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Miege in Leavenworth, erected a frame building two stories in height to answer the parochial requirements of a new parish in Leavenworth for the Catholic Germans. A Catholic school was also instituted shortly afterward. Father Casimer Seitz was succeeded by the Rev. Father Fisch, who said the first mass there on June 13, 1855. Father Aloys Mayer had charge of the parish in 1859. In 1863 Rev. Anthony Kuhls, who is now Monsignore, and who after leaving Leavenworth was pastor at St. Mary's, Kansas City, Kansas, for forty-four years, assisted Father Fisch and when the latter was forced through ill health to retire Father Kuhls took charge of the parish until October, 1864.

Father Kuhls was succeeded at this parish by the Revs. Cyril Knoll and Xavier Huber, two Carmelite Fathers, who had come during the early part of the year 1864 from Germany. The Rev. Father Heimann, who was the first secular priest in the vicariate and who was the first priest with Bishop Miege in Leavenworth, with the exception of Father Fisch, joined the Carmelites in 1865, as well as did Rev. Father Louis Guenther. Subsequent to his joining this order Father Heimann was known as Father Albert, O. C. C. It was Father Albert that built the beautiful St. Joseph's Church which was consecrated by Bishop Fink on Corpus Christi, 1871. Father Louis, O. C. C., succeeded Father Albert as rector of this parish and during his incumbency built the three story parish house.

In 1882 the Rev. Father Bernard Fink, O. C. C., became rector of the parish. He remained until 1887, when he was succeeded by the Rev. Otto Wiedeman, who added the transepts to the church and had the interiors decorated. In 1890 Father Leo Vanden Heuvel took charge of the pastorate. During his pastoral administration the new stations in bas relief were donated in memory of the Mergen de Leglise families. The "Sorrowful Mother" of "Pieta" in heroic size was also added for the devotion of the congregation. Chime bells were also hung in the tower, which were blessed by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Fink.

In 1895 the Rev. Father Louis Guenther returned and a little later the corner stone for a new school building was laid. The dedication took place on the Feast of the Patronage of St. Joseph, April 26, 1896, the Rev. Father Aloysius Bradley, O. S. B., preaching the dedication sermon. In May, 1896, the new brick building two stories in height was ready for occupancy and 200 children find ample accommodation there. The Rev. Father Ferdinand Vander Stay, who had been assisting Father Louis Guenther, was placed in charge of the pastorate when ill health forced Father Louis to retire. During the latter part of the year 1903 he died here and was buried from the St. Joseph's Church, the Rt. Rev. Bishop Fink officiating at his funeral and Father Beck, of Argentine, preaching an interesting sermon.

In 1903 Father Sebastian Urnauer, O. C. C., became pastor of St. Joseph's parish. He made many valuable improvements in the church and schools. He was succeeded in 1906 by Father Ferdinand, who had been his predecessor. Father Ferdinand had the church refrescoed and repaired in many ways in preparation of the parish's Golden Jubilee, which was held May the 10th to 12th, 1908. Pontifical High Mass was celebrated on the first day by Bishop T. F. Lillis, of Leavenworth; on the second day by Bishop Cunningham, of Concordia, and on the third day by Rt. Rev. Abbot Innocent Wolf, Abbot of St. Benedict's, Atchison, Kansas. Shortly after this Father Ferdinand was called east and Father Sebastian was again placed in charge. Father Sebastian was succeeded by Father Peter, O. C. C., who served two terms of three years each, and he was succeeded by Father Angela Lager, the present pastor, who is assisted by Rev. Xavier Tynan, O. C. C.

St. Joseph's Benevolent Society was organized in this parish in October, 1859. On October 20, 1879, P. C. Becker instituted the first branch of the Catholic Mutual Benevolent Association in Kansas at this parish. A Young Ladies Sodality of the Blessed Virgin was organized in the parish in 1871 by Rev. Father Albert Heimann. The Society of Christian Mothers, The Young Men's Casino and the L. C. B. A. are also flourishing organizations of the St. Joseph's parish.

On December 10, 1903, Bishop Fink dedicated the new chapel under the title of Our Lady of Lourdes. In the city Father Shorter has built a school west of the Holy Epiphany Church at a cost of $5,000.00 and a roomy two-story building to the east of the church as a home for the Oblate Sisters and dependent colored girls, where they are given needed care and attention.

Father Shorter is still in charge of the colored mission work in Leavenworth and of the prisoners in the penitentiary here after a period of more than thirty years. In 1909 Rev. Thomas F. Lillis appointed Father Shorter Vicar General of Leavenworth.

Holy Epiphany Church owes its origin to the zeal of Rev. M. Huhn, who, encouraged by Bishop Fink, collected in the diocese the sum necessary for the building of the church. The cornerstone of the structure was laid September 29, 1878, and it was dedicated August 20, 1879. It was the first Catholic Church west of St. Louis built for a colored congregation and the first confirmation services were conducted there by Bishop Fink November 15, 1878.

It was through Father Huhn's efforts that a Guardian Angel's Home, one of the very first institutions in the country for the care of homeless colored boys, was begun. In 1887 he transferred this institution to Texas. In 1889, however, the Colored Orphan's Home was reorganized by the Oblate Sisters of Baltimore.

Before the arrival of Father Shorter in 1890, Rev. E. Coolen and the Rev. H. Eummellen held services at regular intervals at Holy Epiphany Church. Upon Father Shorter's taking charge he pressed the church basement into service for school purposes and mass was celebrated at this church more frequently. When the number of orphans cared for in the school and home increased more sisters came from Baltimore to assist, and Bishop Fink authorized the purchase of the Whitaker homestead with forty acres of ground. The orphans were subsequent to this moved from the city to their new home, where in charge of the Oblate Sisters of Providence they continued under the direction of Father Shorter.

The buildings of the home as they exist today were added from time to time. Forty acres more of land was added to the grounds during Lillis' administration.

Sacred Heart Church.—The Sacred Heart parish was organized by the Rev. Thomas Downey, who also built the present Sacred Heart Church, a two-story brick structure with a tower. The building as originally built still serves for church and school purposes. It was during the pastoral administration of Father Burke that the parish house was erected.

Rev. Father Burke was succeeded as pastor of the Sacred Heart parish by Rev. R. B. Groener, who at the present time is pastor of the Sacred Heart Church of Kickapoo. Rev. Patrick Smith, who is at the present time pastor of the Sacred Heart parish of Leavenworth, succeeded Father Groener. He is a native of Kansas and an alumnus of St. Benedict's at Atchison. Shortly after his ordination he was appointed chaplain of St. Vincent's Home and pastor of St. Francis de Sales Church at Lansing, where he was transferred to Blaine and Wheaton, from which places he received his appointment to the Sacred Heart Church. The school at the Sacred Heart Church is taught by the Sisters of Charity.

St. Casimer's Church.—St. Casimer's parish and church is among the younger of the Catholic Churches organized and built in Leavenworth City and County. The parish was organized and the present church built by Rev. A. Smietana in 1896. One year later Rev. John Grudzinski was ordained and in 1897 he was appointed as successor to Father Smietana. He arrived to take charge of his pastorate on Thanksgiving Day and found a debt of over $3,000 hanging over the parish. Father Grudzinski being a zealous worker soon liquidated this debt and set out to make additional improvements. He enlarged and decorated the church with side altars and purchased a suitable bell and also built a beautiful parish house at a cost of $5,500.00 and a fine school building that cost more than twice as much. This school is conducted by the Felician Sisters, who have quarters in the school building.

Father Grudzinski was succeeded at the St. Casimer's parish by Rev. Frank Kozlowski. When Fther Kozlowski was transferred to the parish at Easton, Kansas, he was succeeded by Rev. Joseph Laczniaik at St. Casimer's, who is rector there at the present time.

Catholic Church at Fort Leavenworth.—When the building of a Catholic Church at Fort Leavenworth was first undertaken there was at the fort many civilian employees whose number was greatly reduced a short time afterward, making it a very difficult task to pay off the indebtedness incurred in the initial erection of a church. General Morgan and Ordinance Sergeant Cornelius Kelly were among the most ardent early day workers in this parish. When the work of building a Catholic Church there was begun they had collected a sum amounting to $3,000.00. which was used to defray initial and immediate expenses.

The cornerstone of the first Catholic Church at the fort was laid in the fall of 1871 and the work was rushed forward with considerable help from the Quartermaster's Department. The church upon its completion was dedicated under the title of St. Ignatius Chapel in honor of the founder of the Society of Jesus. Father Ambrose Butler was one of the early day pastors of the parish. He was succeeded by Rev. James O'Reilly, who remained pastor for about five years. During his administration he succeeded in relieving the parish of all its indebtedness and having the church handsomely furnished.

The first resident priest of the Fort Leavenworth parish was Rev. T. F. Kinsella, who about a month after his ordination at the cathedral, July 17, 1884, was assigned to the Fort Leavenworth parish. At that time his duties included that of being chaplain at the United States Military Prison. In 1885 Father Kinsella, who had made a request to the War Department for permission to build a rectory, was notified by that body that his request had been denied and that the government desired to purchase or remove the Catholic Church at the fort, together with the building that was used for school purposes. The government subsequent to this purchased the Catholic Church building and authorized the selection of a new site for the church by the church authorities. It was not until June 27, 1889, that Bishop Fink and the government officials finally agreed upon the terms and conditions that the church was to be built at the fort and on August 18, 1889, Bishop Fink laid the cornerstone for the present church at the fort which was dedicated December 22, 1889. The new edifice was of Gothic design and was erected at a total cost of $15,233.85.

In January, 1892, Father Kinsella was succeeded at the fort parish by Rev. Alexander Jennings, who remained in charge there until April 18, 1895, when the Rev. Thomas McCaul took charge and continued as pastor until November 12, 1905. The Military Prison, which has been transferred into the Federal Prison, was attended by Father McCaul. He was the first clergyman here to receive an annual salary of $300.00 for his services at the prison. When Father McCaul was sent to the parish at Hoge, Rev. William Ospital, O. S. B., a father of the Sacred Heart Abbey, Oklahoma, succeeded him. He was in turn succeeded by a priest of the same Abbey, Rev. J. M. Dougherty, on August 27, 1908. Father Dougherty has remained in charge of the fort parish from the last mentioned date until the present time.

The Catholic Church at the Soldiers Home.—When the western branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers was established, the need of a Catholic chaplain to minister to the needs of the Catholic veterans was early recognized. The Rev. Peter Flannagan, who was at that time pastor of St. Francis de Sales at Lansing for a short time, supplied this want and then was succeeded by Rev. M. A. Finn, who was also chaplain of St. Vincent's Home.

Father Finn was succeeded by Rev. T. F. Kinsella, who held the chaplaincy of the home for a period of seventeen years. When Rev.

Father Kinsella was sent to Paola as chaplain of the Ursuline Academy, he was succeeded at the Soldiers Home by Rev. Francis Pottgieser, who remained until March 1, 1918, when he was succeeded by the Rev. Owen Degan. Father Degan died during the month of December, 1918, and the Rev. Francis Taton was appointed chaplain at the Soldiers Home parish. Father Taton at the present time is chaplain at this parish and church.

First Church of Christ, Scientist.—The introduction of Christian Science in the city of Leavenworth was brought about in the year 1885 through the mediumship of two students who began holding services in their own homes. Some seven years later and on the 27th day of December, 1892, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, was organized with fourteen members. Several years later a charter was obtained. A reading room was established February 26, 1899, and lectures have been given yearly since 1898.

For years services were held in various down-town buildings. In 1903 the building now owned by this congregation was purchased from the English Lutheran Church. The growth of this organization has been gradual until at the present time there is a large and prosperous congregation.

Kansas Federation of Women's Clubs.—To Mrs. C. H. Cushing, of Leavenworth, and Mrs. May Tenny Gray, of Wyandotte, Kansas, is due the honor of founding of the Kansas Federation of Women's Clubs.

On May 19, 1881, by invitation of Mrs. C. H. Cushing, of Leavenworth, a meeting was held. Ladies from Topeka, Atchison, Lawrence, Wyandotte, and Kansas City, Kansas, were in attendance. In all over one hundred ladies responded to Mrs. Cushing's invitations and all met in the parlors of the "Home of the Friendless". Mrs. Cushing acted as chairman of the meeting. Brace, Leavenworth; Committee of Constitution and By-Laws, Mesdames Cushing, Hopkins, Scott, Brace, Leeper and Monroe. This organization was known as the Social Science Club. It was known for twelve years by this name. On May 3, 1895, the name of the organization was changed to that of the Kansas State Social Science Federation. It was not until 1903 that the name was changed to that of the Kansas Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. R. R. Bittman, of Independence, Kansas, is at the present time president of the Federation. Mrs. Sherman Medill, of Leavenworth, is president of the First District of the Federation.

Through the efforts of the organization industrial training was introduced in the Beloit School for Girls and Manual Training in the public schools. A traveling arm gallery was started which was a success from the first. A Scholarship Loan Fund feature has been added to the Federation by which girls finishing high school may borrow three hundred dollars with which to finish their education, paying the money back after they have secured positions and are earning money. A continuous campaign in the interest of education in general has ever been waged by the Federation.

At the present time the following Leavenworth County Clubs have been federated: Leavenworth Art League, Catholic Literary Club, Lowell Club, Glenwood Community Club, Lansing Community Club, Leavenworth County Rural Life, Easton Improvement Club, Basehor Merry Matrons, Kickapoo Woman's Club, Boling Community Club, Tonganoxie Civic League, and Tonganoxie Reading Club.

Feeling the need of a better organization the citizens of Leavenworth City and County obtained a charter in 1917 with eighty stockholders. A set of by-laws were drawn up making the first Monday in October every year the date of the regular meeting. The corporation is not one for profit but for the purpose of securing a high class of educational entertainments for the community. The programs were first given in the grand stand of the old fair grounds, now the Shrine Park. The place was later changed to the Court House Grounds just north of the building, in a large tent. The program for the year 1921 will be given in the Sales Pavilion at Seventh and Delaware. The programs have been given under the auspices of Redpath-Horner Chautauqua and the contract calls for $1,500 for the year 1921.

CHAPTER XIV

NATIONAL AND STATE INSTITUTIONS

NATIONAL MILITARY HOME—UNITED STATES PENITENTIARY—STATE PENITENTIARY.

The National Military Home.—By Act of Congress March 3, 1865, the National Military and Naval Asylum for disabled officers and men of voluntary forces was established. It was located at Dayton, Ohio. Since then branches have been established at various places over the country. A movement was started in Leavenworth to secure a branch of the home. S. F. Neely, ex-Gov. George T. Anthony, Gen. Chas. W. Blair and Hon. Alexander Caldwell were the prime movers. A meeting was called at which the following committee was chosen: J. B. Johnson, Maj. W. B. Shockley, Thomas Ryan, Charles W. Blair, George T. Anthony and S. F. Neely. This committee met with the Congressional representative at the various places viewed and examined. Five states were after the prize. Iowa offered $50,000 and Kansas delegation $50,000 and a section of land. After careful deliberation the present site overlooking the Missouri River was chosen. The Leavenworth branch was established by Act of Congress March 7, 1877. The first disabled soldier was admitted September 1, 1885. Fifteen years later there were 4,000 veterans in the home. Nearly all of these were Civil War veterans but in the early '90s there were some from the Mexican War. Beginning a few years after the Spanish-American War a few veterans from this war began to enter the home. At present a large number of the World War soldiers are entering. So that the members now enrolled may be classified as follows: Civil War, 1,811; Spanish-American War, 354; World War, 133; Mexican Border War, 1; total number enrolled April 15, 1921, 2,299; total enrolled since beginning of the home till June 30, 1920, 40,080.

There are some sixteen or more barracks, a large hospital, a hospital for epileptics, a general mess hall, a library, administration building, a theatre, a chapel, greenhouse, power plant, several fine residences for the officials and other buildings. There is a fine lake to the south of the hospital, at the east edge of which stands a band stand. Here the Soldiers Home band plays during the summer months on Sunday afternoons. A band stand also is located in front of the mess hall. A cannon is placed near by and is fired every evening at sundown and during the lowering of the flag. A more beautiful place for a soldiers' home probably could not be found in this section of the United States. The governors of the home to the present time are as follows: Col. Andrew J. Smith, Col. J. G. Rowland, Col. S. G. Cooke.

United States Penitentiary.—June 10, 1898, Congress set aside 700 acres adjoining Leavenworth City for a site for a prison. Work was begun on the present penitentiary during this year. Prison labor was used in the construction of the walls and buildings. From 1895 to 1906 the penitentiary occupied the military prison at the fort. In 1906 the United States Penitentiary was moved to the present site. It is inclosed by a wall about thirty feet high, built of stone. The west wing cell house is under construction at the present time. The entrance to the prison is on the south. A fine lawn extends to Metropolitan Avenue, and is planted in shade trees and sodded in blue grass. The warden's residence is located on the east side of the east driveway and the deputy warden's residence is located on the west side of the west driveway. Band concerts are held on the lawn in the summer time and the music is furnished by a band composed of prisoners. A small railway leads from the prison to the hills on the west, over which stone is hauled from the quarry.

The prisoners are employed at various occupations inside, such as carpentering, blacksmithing, stone cutting, brick making, building and many other trades. Strict discipline is maintained within, although the inmates are allowed many privileges at stated times. Baseball games are played within the inclosure. When the Federal League had a team in Kansas City an exhibition game was played between the Kansas City team and a picked team from the prison and it proved to be an interesting game, although the Kansas City team won by a handsome score. Many amusements are provided for the inmates. Picture shows are given in the chapel at times. The writer recently attended an entertainment in the chapel given by members of the prison. Among the numbers on the program was a boxing exhibition between Jack Johnson, a former heavy-weight champion pugilist, and three other members.

A school is maintained and is in charge of the chaplain. The Rev. Harmon Allen is the present chaplain.

A prison cemetery is located to the west of the institution at the foot of the hills and here are buried those who died while in prison and not taken in charge by relatives.

The penitentiary was first in charge of Warden French. In 1895 R. W. McLaughery became the warden and held this position till 1913, when Thomas W. Morgan became the warden. In 1919 A. B. Anderson was chosen warden and holds the position at the present time.

State Penitentiary.—The first move toward establishing a penitentiary was February 11, 1858. A commission was appointed and the next year John Ritchey, E. B. Prentiss and Fielding Johnson were selected commissioners to erect and maintain a prison for Kansas. They were given power to select a tract of land on which were good building stone and erect temporary buildings for prisoners and officers. Twenty thousand dollars was appropriated for the purpose of a prison building adequate for twenty years. No action was taken immediately and the prisoners were kept in an inclosure at Lecompton and at the various county jails. Later they were kept in the Leavenworth County jail.

In 1861 the Legislature passed an act authorizing the state prison to be located in Leavenworth County. Governor Robinson appointed M. S. Adams, C. S. Lambdin and Charles Starne commissioners as required by law. In the fall of 1861 the commissioners selected the present site for the prison. The land was purchased from Mr. Whitney for $600 and the deed was executed November 25, 1861. No appropriation had been made for locating the prison so the total sum to be met by the Legislature was given by the commissioners in their report as follows:

Expenses of the penitentiary for 1862	$4,271.29
Land for site with one year's interest	660.00
Expenses of locating same and service of commissioners	305.75
Total	$5,237.04

The commissioners also recommended the employment of convicts in the construction of the prison and pointed out that the judgment of the courts was that they should be employed at hard labor and that there was no labor they could perform while confined in a jail.

In 1863 the Legislature passed an act for the regulation of the penitentiary and made an appropriation therefor. Under this act William Dunlap, John Wilson and S. S. Ludlum were appointed directors of the penitentiary, the term "commissioners" having been dropped. The directors visited the state prisons in New York, Michigan and Illinois, for the purpose of obtaining views to be embodied in a penitentiary. They found that Joliet, Illinois, the best and this one was followed as a model. The Illinois prison was just nearing completion at the time. Erasmus E. Carr was chosen architect May 22, 1863. He prepared plans on the order of the Joliet prison and they were accepted.

The contract for the construction of the prison was awarded to John McCarthy and Calvin Adams. They began work in the summer of 1864 and put in the foundation of the first wing, known as the north wing. Owing to the conditions in Kansas growing out of the Civil War, work was then stopped for two years.

In 1866 the contract was awarded to Flory and Caldwell for building the penitentiary. The buildings were to be completed on or before October 1, 1867.

Before the building of the Federal Penitentiary, military and Federal prisoners were kept at the State Prison. The Oklahoma prisoners were also kept there for a number of years. The last of these were removed to Oklahoma on January 31, 1909. Until 1909 contracts had been made to furnish convict labor to private employers, but since then no more contracts have been let.

The north wing cell house burned down on election day in November, 1917. It is now being rebuilt and the east wall of the wing is being moved farther east so that more room is added. It is being rebuilt in the most modern style with all the conveniences of up to date cells. The dining hall was built in 1872. Over the dining hall is the chapel, where services are held and entertainments furnished for the prisoners.

Amusements of various kinds are furnished. In summer there is baseball and in winter are picture shows, boxing and wrestling. There is a band which furnishes music inside and also plays at times during good weather in front of the administration building.

There are four departments of industry. The coal mine, twine plant, brick plant and the farm. The state owns a part of Stigers Island in the Missouri River and on this a large amount of farm products are raised.

The State Industrial Farm is located on the prison farm overlooking the Missouri River. It was established in 1918.

The records show that there are confined at the prison and at the industrial farm on February 9, 1921, 1,026 prisoners.

The following wardens have served: J. L. Philbrick, Maj. Henry Hopkins, W. C. Jones, John H. Smith, George H. Case, S. W. Chase, J. B. Lynch, H. S. Landis, J. B. Tomlinson, E. B. Jewett, W. H. Haskell, J. K. Coddling, J. D. Botkin, J. K. Coddling.

CHAPTER XV

THE PRESS

"THE KANSAS HERALD"—"TERRITORIAL REGISTER"—"THE JOURNAL"—"YOUNG AMERICA"—OTHER PIONEER NEWSPAPERS—LATER PUBLICATIONS—THE LEAVENWORTH TIMES—THE LEAVENWORTH POST.

From the very inception of the city of Leavenworth as a city, the newspaper industry has been one of the leading industries. Even before there was a house in the city to shield the presses from the elements, a paper was being published. An account of the publication of this first paper in the city, "The Kansas Herald," will be found elsewhere in this volume in more complete detail. The first publication was under the management of Adams and Osborne and the paper was printed under the shade of a large elm tree that stood near the foot of Cherokee Street and Levee or Water Street. The date of this publication was September 15, 1856. This paper eventually passed into the hands of R. C. Satterlee and several others. When Satterlee was shot and killed by Col. D. R. Anthony, the paper suspended publication. It was later merged with "The Inquirer," a publication of this city in those days but was totally destroyed by a mob in October, 1861.

The next early day newspaper to begin publication in the city was published under the name of the "Territorial Register." It was strongly Free State and came quite early into disrepute in the eyes of the pro-slavery element of the city and territory. It was owned and published by a partnership known as Severe & Delahay. After a few months of existence the office was raided by Kickapoo Rangers and the presses and type were thrown in the Missouri River.

Another early day paper was published under the name of "The Journal." Col. S. S. Goode was the first editor of this publication. It was an evening paper and owing to the bitterness displayed toward its publication by the "Herald" interests, it was forced to quit publication within a short time.

A paper named "Young America" was published for a short time by George W. McLane. It had a tendency to be Free State and consequently met with considerable resistance at the time of its publication. McLane was registered on the attorney roll of the city of Leavenworth but there is no record of his ever practicing law here. He was the auctioneer at the sale of the first town lots sold in the city of Leavenworth, October 9, 1854. McLane left the city during the middle '60s and never afterward returned. His paper, "Young America," was published but a short time and was finally merged with the "Daily Ledger."

The "Daily Ledger" was the first daily paper to begin publication in the city of Leavenworth, in fact it was the first daily paper published west of the Mississippi River at the time of its beginning publication, September 1, 1857. Conditions at that time were not favorable to the publication of a daily paper and the "Ledger" was forced to suspend publication in 1859.

"The Weekly Times," one of the foremost of the early day publications, began publication in the summer of 1857. The first editor of this paper was Judge Robert Crozier, who for years held the position of judge of the District Court here. The "Times" was at first owned by a stock company. Eventually this paper began a daily publication, the first daily being issued February 15, 1858. The ownership finally passed into the hands of the late Col. D. R. Anthony, who published it until his death, when it passed into the hands of D. R. Anthony, Jr., his son, the present owner. For years this paper has ranked among the foremost of its kind, occupying one of the strongest positions in the newspaper business in the Middle West. The paper since it came in the hands of the Anthonys has always been strongly Republican in policy and politics.

A paper named the "Kansas Zeitung" was started in the city of Leavenworth during the year 1858 by Dr. Koppf. This was the first German paper to be published in this city. In 1869 another German paper was published by Major Haberlein under the name of the "Frie Presse." This paper was published by Major Haberlein for a number of years until his death, when the publication of it was taken up by his son.

"The Conservative," one of the foremost of early day Leavenworth papers, was started by D. W. Wilder, who was also editor of the publication. Wilder continued the publication of the "Conservative" for some time, eventually selling out his interests to Col. D. R. Anthony. About this time Anthony also bought out a stock company's interests in the publication known as the "Evening Bulletin," a Republican organ as well as "The Conservative." Another publication known as the "Leavenworth Commercial," which was published about this time by Prescott and Hume, also passed into the hands of Col. Anthony. A paper that had been published for a short time by J. C. Clark & Co., known as the "Evening Call," suspended publication when the owners became interested in the publication of the "Leavenworth Commercial," which as aforementioned later passed into the hands of Col. D. R. Anthony.

Another early day paper that lived but a short time was published by Emory & Co. and was known as the "Daily Appeal."

Among other papers that began publication in this city and met with indifferent success were the "Home Record," "The Daily Public Press," "The Evening Commercial," "The Kansas Farmer," "The Cosmopolitan," "The Evening Ledger," "The Daily Standard," "The Daily Evening Press," "The Chronicle," "The Labor Review," "The Kansas Churchman," "The Advertiser," "Western Life," "Leavenworth Post" and "Leavenworth Times."

The "Home Record" was a small publication published in the city here for a number of years in the interest of the "Home of the Friendless." It was a monthly journal and has long since suspended publication.

"The Daily Public Press" was a daily publication under the management of F. J. Wendell and under the editorship of Dr. H. B. Horn. It was published but a short time when it suspended publication.

H. Miles Moore, one of the pioneer citizens of the city Leavenworth, was the editor of a publication for a short time known as the "Evening Commercial." The publication was Democratic in politics and was forced after a short time to suspend publication due to the lack of financial success.

On October 17, 1877, Frank Hall and J. W. Remington began the publication of an evening paper known as the "Evening Ledger," Being Democratic in politics it soon went the route of all early day Democratic papers.

The "Kansas Farmer" was published here but a short time. It was under the editorship of George T. Anthony, who afterward was elected governor of the State of Kansas.

One of the strongest adventures in the way of a Democratic newspaper in the city of Leavenworth was began here in 1870, when a publication known as the "Daily Standard" was begun. This publication was under the managership of Frank T. Lynch and the editorship of ex-Senator Ross. It was owned by a syndicate of leading Democrats of this city. After fighting the fight of a Democratic paper against heavy odds for about twelve years it was finally consolidated with the "Daily Evening Press" and was issued as a morning paper. After this consolidation Lynch became part owner and editor. Upon his death the paper was gotten control of by Col. Anthony, who published it for a time as an evening paper. Not succeeding in this, the publication was suspended.

"The Chronicle" was another Leavenworth paper owned and controlled by a syndicate of Leavenworth men. It was under the editorship of R. M. Ruggles and quickly became one of the leading publications of this city. The majority of the stock in the concern, however, eventually found its way into Col. Anthony's hands and when the publication became involved to some extent, publication was suspended.

"The German Tribune" was a weekly publication for years published in this city. It was originally owned and published by Capt. Metcham and enjoyed a very successful business under the captain and Sig Kuraner, into whose hands it eventually passed. Publication was suspended several years ago.

In 1902 George Davis started a publication known as the "Labor Review." For a number of years it was under the editorship of J. F. O'Conner. It was and still is devoted exclusively to the cause of labor.

"The Advertiser" was another newspaper adventure entered into by Capt. Metcham, the first editor of the "German Tribune." Shortly after its publication began it was purchased by Fred Jameson, who changed its name to the "Western Life." Under the editorship of Jameson the "Western Life" grew rapidly in favor with the people of this city and county. The outgrowth of this publication was the "Leavenworth Post," a publication originally owned and controlled by Fred Jameson and Albert T. Reid. The "Leavenworth Post," Leavenworth's evening paper at this time, is owned and controlled by a stock company. Wallace F. Hovey is at the present time editor and manager of the publication. It enjoys a large circulation and stands well in rank with other evening papers in the state.

"The Leavenworth Times," Leavenworth's morning paper of today, ranks among the leading morning papers of the state. It is owned and controlled by Congressman D. R. Anthony, Jr., and is one of the oldest and most stable of local publications. It enjoys a very large circulation and in politics has always been found to be one hundred per cent Republican. James M. Mickey has for a number of years past been associated with the publication of "The Times" in the capacity of associate editor, while W. I. Biddle has acted as city editor of the publication.

A paper that should have been classified with the early day publications of Leavenworth County, that while it was only published for a short length of time contributed materially to the keeping of all things pertaining to the slavery question in an uproar, was the "Kansas Pioneer."

The "Pioneer" was published at Kickapoo, Kansas, one of the bitterest rivals of the city of Leavenworth as well as Fort Leavenworth. The first edition of the paper came out during the month of November, 1854. A. B. Hazzard was for a while the sole owner, manager and editor of the publication, which was radically pro-slavery. For a while a party named Sexton associated himself with Sexton in the publication of the "Pioneer." When it became evident to the editors that the fight of Kickapoo for the county seat of Leavenworth was hopelessly lost and that Kickapoo City was destined to a certain death, the publication of the "Pioneer" was abandoned.

Among other papers now published in the county of Leavenworth is the "Easton Transcript" and the "Tonganoxie Mirror." Both are weeklies and enjoy a large circulation as well as remunerative patronage in the way of advertising. The "Easton Transcript" is published in the city of Easton, in Easton Township, Leavenworth County, Kansas. At the present time Robert Stafford is the owner and editor. The "Transcript" is practically the outgrowth of an early day Easton publication known as the "Light of Liberty" and later as the "Easton Light." The first publication of the "Light" was dated July 26, 1895, and the original owners and editors were M. L. and K. Lockwood.

CHAPTER XVI

MEDICAL PROFESSION

FIRST PHYSICIANS CAME WITH THE ARMY—FIRST ON THE TOWNSITE—EARLY PHYSICIANS—KICKAPOO—OTHER SMALL TOWNS—PROMINENT DOCTORS—SANITARY COMMISSION ESTABLISHED—U. S. MILITARY HOSPITAL—OTHER HOSPITALS—"MEDICAL HERALD"—PRESENT DAY PHYSICIANS.

The medical profession of Leavenworth County has a longer span of activity than any other of the learned professions. The physician came with the troops located at Cantonment Leavenworth, now Fort Leavenworth, in 1827. The first medical officer there was Assistant Surgeon Clement A. Finlay, according to the information given by Maj. Howard McC. Snyder, Medical Corps, United States Army, now post surgeon of Fort Leavenworth. The physician has been active at the post in an unbroken line of succession from 1827 to the present day. In 1854, when Leavenworth City and Kickapoo were founded, Dr. G. Magruder and Dr. Samuel Phillips were on duty at Fort Leavenworth. The first physician of the new townsite of Leavenworth was Dr. Charles Leib, who had an office in the "Big Tent" north of the elm tree at Levee and Cherokee Street. Five physicians were included in the original Town Company. Among them were Drs. Magruder, Samuel Philips and S. F. Few. The latter was for a long time city physician in after years. Other early physicians in Leavenworth were Drs. Dyer, W. S. Catterson, Levi Houston, John Harvey Day, S. F. Norton, James Davis, J. M. Bodine and Tiffin Sinks.

Dr. H. B. Callahan located here in 1856, and after a temporary absence in Platte City, relocated in 1866. He died in his office in 1896. The wonderful growth of Leavenworth spread afar and attracted the following physicians, who permanently settled here in the years mentioned: Drs. M. S. Thomas, 1856; T. J. Weed, 1857; J. L. Weaver, 1859;

S. W. Jones, 1859; Margaret Burdell, 1861; John McCormick, 1862; A. C. Van Duyn, 1865; J. W. Brock, 1865; W. B. Carpenter, 1866; J. J. Edic, 1869, and S. F. Neely, 1869.

The activity of these physicians is still remembered by many of the present adult population of Leavenworth. When they became older their work was continued by such men as Drs. D. W. Thomas, B. E. Fryer, L. K. Hunter, W. J. Van Eman, J. A. Lane, W. W. Walter, W. R. Van Tuyl, D. R. Phillips and R. F. Slaughter. From the foregoing, who have long since ceased their labors, the present medical profession of Leavenworth County has inherited a reputation of eminent skill and ability. They are grateful to them for their heritage. They hold them aloft in their own esteem, respect and veneration. In cherishing the memory of their success, sacrifices and arduous work for humanity, the Medical Association of today is sensible of its duties to them and are resolved to uphold their high ideals in promoting the progress of medical and surgical science.

Kickapoo, while it was contending with Leavenworth for supremacy, numbered among its population Drs. D. A. Crane, H. B. C. Harris, Brownfield and Hathaway. Dr. T. H. Hathaway came in 1878. As the rural portion of the county was settled by the pioneers smaller towns also grew up. Dr. T. G. V. Boling located in High Prairie Township in 1865. He was a member of the Legislature for a number of years. He was joined later in 1876 by Dr. James Hutchison. Dr. William B. Wood came to the Springdale settlement in 1855 as a youth, and after graduation in 1875 practiced there. Dr. J. W. Warring has been in active practice at Linwood since 1873. Dr. W. J. Van Eman started his professional career at Tonganoxie in 1879 and moved to Leavenworth in 1881. He died an untimely death from blood poison in 1901. Dr. R. F. Slaughter, of Tonganoxie, who died in March, 1921, dated back to 1873. Dr. T. C. Craig has been at Easton since 1866 and is now retired. CHAPTER XVII

THE LEAVENWORTH COUNTY BAR

TERRITORIAL CODE OF PROCEDURE—JUDGES APPOINTED—JUDICIAL DISTRICTS—FIRST TERRITORIAL COURT AT LEAVENWORTH—ATTORNEYS ADMITTED

It is no more than fitting that in a history of Leavenworth City and County mention should be made of the various members of the county bar. The major portion of these members once famed for their handling of early day legal matters have long since died or removed to other cities. When the Territory of Kansas was established and the Territorial Legislature had met and passed a code of procedure a system of courts was established. Three judges were appointed and each had a certain district over which they presided. The first judge to preside over the district of which Leavenworth County was a part was Samuel D. LeCompte.

The clerk of the court was furnished with an attorney's roll book which each practicing attorney having business before the court was required to sign. Not all of the attorneys who signed the roll were necessarily residents of the city of Leavenworth, as there were some who from time to time came before the local court to transact business who consequently signed.

The first territorial court ever organized in the Territory of Kansas, as well as in the county of Leavenworth, was organized in Leavenworth City, April 16, 1855, and this court met in a room on the south side of Delaware Street between Second and Third streets. S. D. LeCompte presided as judge. His district at that time comprised all of the territory north of the Kansas River and east of the Blue River in the Territory of Kansas.

The names of the attorneys as they appear on the attorney roll in the office of the clerk of the District Court, together with data relative to their enrollment as well as a short sketch of each is as follows:

John A. Halderman, April 19, 1855. One of the first county commissioners of the county of Leavenworth, having been appointed probate judge by the territorial governor of Kansas and ex-officio county commissioner. Mr. Halderman was for a number of years associated in the practice of law with W. S. Stanley under the firm name of Halderman & Stanley. Volunteered his services during the Civil War and was commissioned major. Afterward promoted to rank of brigadier-general. Subsequent to war was appointed United States minister to Siam.

Richard R. Rees is the second name found on the attorney's roll. Mr. Rees came to Leavenworth during the early '50s. He was a member of one of the oldest and most highly respected families of the city. He was elected in 1855 as one of the members of the territorial council. Judge Rees was associated in early days quite strongly with the pro-slavery element of the city and county. After serving in the Legislature he was elected probate judge of Leavenworth County and later as justice of the peace, which offices he held for a number of years successively. Subsequent to this Judge Rees practiced his profession in the city successfully for a number of years.

The name of D. J. Johnson is third found upon the attorney roll. Col. Johnson, as he was sometimes referred to, was a native Georgian. He came to the city of Leavenworth in the fall of the year 1854 and established himself in the practice of law, building up a very lucrative practice. For a time he was associated with James M. Lysle in his practice.

Aulay McCauley, the fourth attorney to be entered on the roll, is reported not to have engaged in the practice of law so much as that of speculating in real estate in those early days. He laid out and had platted several additions to the city and took an active interest in the civic development in every way.

James M. Lysle, the fifth attorney registered, was a southerner and took an active interest in early day politics, always aligning himself with the pro-slavery interests. His feelings ran very bitter against all Free-State men and his utterances and demeanor generally kept him in trouble. He was killed, being stabbed to death, in an election fight in 1855, by William Haller, an election clerk, after Lysle and a number of others had tried to break up the polling place in the Second Ward. Haller was never tried for the crime, it being evident that he acted in self-defense.

D. A. N. Grover appears to have been the sixth to register as an attorney in the county. Grover resided with his father near the city of Kickapoo, where his father was an Indian missionary. When the squatters of the territory held their meeting at Rively's store in Salt Creek Valley, June 10, 1854, Grover was selected as recorder of claims on the Kickapoo and Delaware lands.

David Dodge is registered as the seventh attorney.

The eighth lawyer registered on the local attorney roll was B. H. Twombly, who resided on a farm near the city of Old Delaware.

The ninth name to appear on the attorney roll is that of Cole McCrea. In his valued work, "Early History of Leavenworth City and County," H. Miles Moore intimates that there was no real reason ever became apparent for the name being placed there. On April 30, 1855, McCrea and Malcolm Clark, then marshal of the county, engaged in an altercation at a squatter's meeting, which resulted in the killing of Clark at the hands of McCrea.

The name of Charles H. Grover appears tenth on the attorney roll. Mr. Grover was a brother of D. A. N. Grover heretofore mentioned. Mr. Grover, too, lived in Salt Creek Valley. Among other distinctions Mr. Grover had the honor of being elected the first county attorney.

Amos Rees was for a number of years an attorney in Platte City, Missouri. He was a member of the Leavenworth Town Company and took an active part in politics in the city's early days. For a number of years Mr. Rees was one of the city's and county's foremost attorneys.

Peter J. Abell, the twelfth name to appear on the roll of attorneys, was a resident of Weston, Missouri.

John Doniphan, the thirteenth attorney, also practiced law in Weston, Missouri, before coming here. Later he moved to St. Joseph, Missouri, where he was for years one of the most successful and prosperous attorneys. He was a nephew of Col. Doniphan.

William Wier, Jr., practiced successfully for several years. He raised a regiment of volunteers during the Civil War and was commissioned colonel.

William Phillips, the twenty-first name on the list, came to Leavenworth in 1854 from Ohio. He was a very active Free State man and was soon classified as a bitter enemy of the pro-slavery classes. The pro-slavery element several times ordered him to leave the city. On September 1, 1856, he was shot and killed by a mob of pro-slavery fanatics.

C. F. Barnard, the twenty-second attorney to appear on the roll, never practiced much before the local courts.

Benjamin F. Simmons, the twenty-third attorney, came here from Virginia. He was an ardent pro-slavery man and shortly after it became apparent that the territory was destined to be Free State he moved away.

Samuel Formly appears to have been the twenty-fourth to sign the roll.

Jeremiah Clark was the twenty-sixth party to register. He had been appointed deputy marshal of the court by Judge Samuel D. LeCompte.

H. P. Johnson came from Ohio. He was an ardent pro-slavery advocate and he with others, interested parties of pro-slavery inclination in the building of the old Planters' Hotel. When the Civil War broke out Johnson joined the Union Army and was commissioned a colonel by Gov. Robinson. He was killed in the battle of Morristown.

M. W. Delahay came in 1854 from Illinois. He was an ardent Free State man and very early began the publication of a Free State paper known as the "Kansas Territorial Register," which came into much disfavor in the sight of the pro-slavery element. During Delahay's absence from the city on one occasion a number of Kickapoo Rangers came to the city and raided the "Register's" place of business, confiscating all type and printing machines which they threw into the Missouri River. After this the paper was never re-established or published. Upon Lincoln's taking his office of President he appointed Delahay to the office of judge of the United States District Court for the District of Kansas.

Thomas Shanklin came to Leavenworth in 1855.

Mr. Moore was a Free State man and took an active part in early day politics in the territory. He was admitted to the bar in New York and later removed to Weston. He took an active part in the organization of the Leavenworth Town Company and was a member and officer in the same. The first squatter trial ever held in the territory of Kansas was held at Salt Creek Valley and Judge Moore was one of the attorneys in the same. During the latter years of his life he wrote a very authentic work in the way of a history of the early days of Leavenworth City and County.

He ranked as one of the ablest attorneys at the bar in these days and while a man of pro-slavery tendencies and belief he was broad minded enough to take no offense with those who differed with him in his political belief. He after several years' successful practice in this city removed to Denver, Colorado.

CHAPTER XVIII

WORLD WAR.

ENTRANCE OF THE UNITED STATES IN THE WORLD WAR—PRESIDENT WILSON'S ADDRESS TO CONGRESS—WAR ACTIVITY IN LEAVENWORTH COUNTY—ARMISTICE SIGNED—"IN FLANDERS FIELDS"—THOSE WHO SERVED—CASUALTIES.

It is not in the province of this history or within the purview of this short chapter to attempt a history of the great World War which threatened the very foundation of civilization and affecting every nation in the world.

President Wilson, in his speech before Congress, April 6, 1918, used the following eloquent and forceful words which found a spontaneous response throughout all America:

"Let everything that we say, my fellow countrymen, everything that we henceforth plan and accomplish, ring true to this response till the majesty and might of our concerted power shall fill the thought and utterly defeat the force of those who flout and misprize what we honor and hold dear.

"Germany has once more said that force, and force alone, shall decide whether justice and peace shall reign in the affairs of men, whether right as America conceives it, and dominion, as she conceives, shall determine the destinies of mankind.

"There is, therefore, but one response for us; force, force to the utmost, force without stint or limit, the righteous and triumphant force which will make the law of the world, and cast selfish dominion down in the dust."

Leavenworth County generously and nobly did her part in the great World War in both men and money. Her citizenship is made up from people or descendants from almost every nation of the Eastern Hemisphere. Like other localities in this country we form a melting pot for the nations of the globe. She has a large number of German birth or parentage. As a class they are frugal, saving, prosperous, honest and loyal to America.

Before our entrance into the great war most of them were in sympathy with Germany, and as such were not neutral. But with our entrance their hearts beat true, and they at once sprang to action, and responded as a class to every call. If there were reservations in the minds of a few, the number was indeed small and existed to a large extent in the minds of the suspicious. By reason of the variety of nationalities blended into our citizenship the editors are called upon to say that they can conceive of no war with a foreign foe that would not in some way involve some of our citizens in a conflict with their ancestors. But with all we are Americans, regardless of the route each has traveled to become one. We are one in life of home and country. Those who toiled, suffered, bled and died in Flanders fields are confined to no special nationality.

Early Monday morning, November 11, 1918, the news was flashed across the country that the armistice was signed. A great demonstration was held in Leavenworth City. Bands played and demonstrations of all kinds were carried on in celebration of the occasion and in jubilation of the end of the most stupendous tragedy in the history of the world.

The treaty of peace with Germany has not yet been signed and some of our brave boys are yet on German soil. One by one most of them have returned. We are not able to give the promotions or special deeds of valor of our boys with the meager information at hand. Nor are we able to give the names of all of those boys who left their homes to give their services to their country. For the following list we are indebted to the draft board, consisting of W. H. Courtney, sheriff; H. V. Reilly, county treasurer; and Loretta Quinn, secretary of the board. J. E. Voorhees, county clerk, was a member of the draft board but was commisioned a lieutenant and gave his services overseas.

IN FLANDERS FIELDS.

In Flanders fields, the poppies grow
Between the crosses, row by row,
That mark our places; and in the sky,
The lark, still bravely singing fly,
Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe.
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who died
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields.

(Written by Lieut. Col. John McCrea during the battle of Ypres, April, 1915. He now sleeps in Flanders fields.)

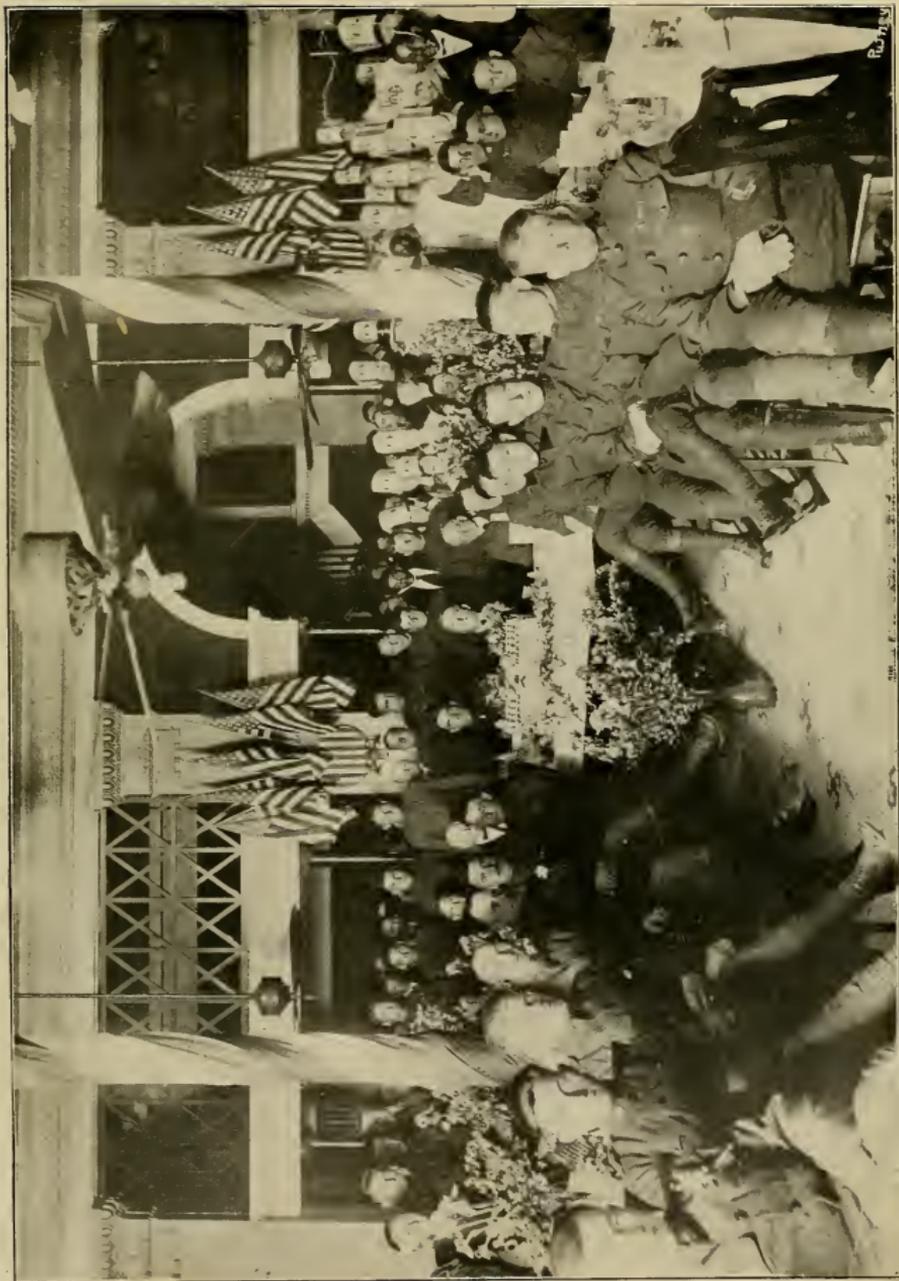

AN ANSWER.

In Flanders fields the cannon boom
While up above, like eagles fly
The fierce destroyers of the sky;
With stains the earth wherein you lie
Is redder than the poppy bloom,
In Flanders fields.

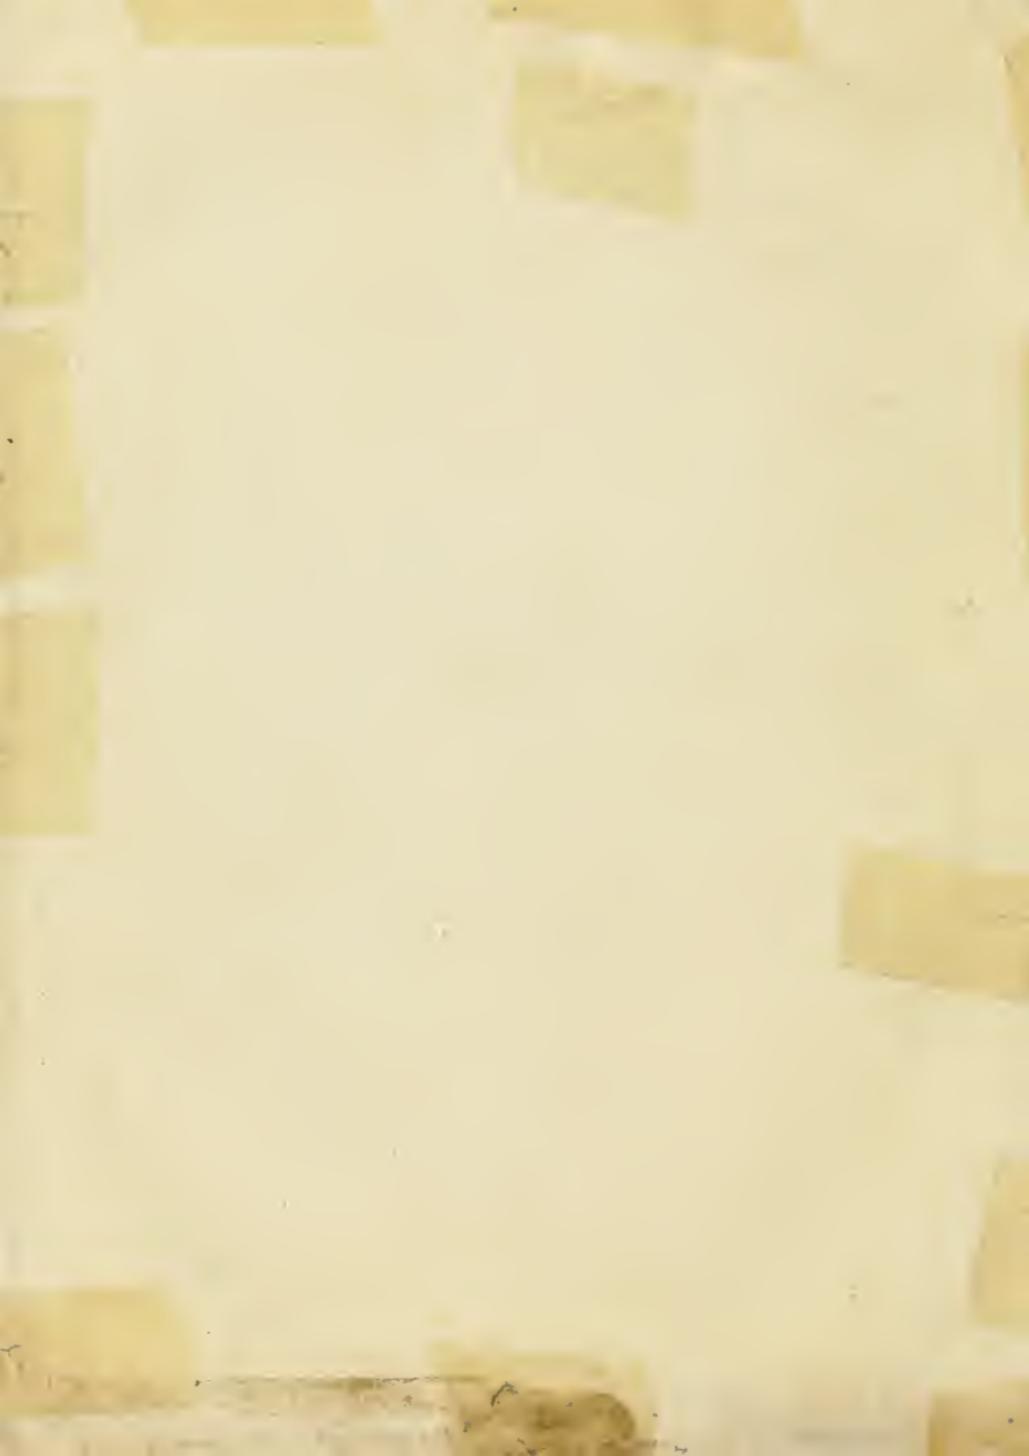

Sleep on, ye brave. The shrieking shell,
The quaking trench, the startled yell,
The fury of the battle hell
Shall wake you not, for all is well.
Sleep peacefully, for all is well.

Your flaming torch aloft we bear,
With burning heart an oath we swear
To keep the faith, to fight it through,
To crush the foe or sleep with you
In Flanders fields.

Summary of the War with Germany.—The following is taken from report of Col. Leonard P. Ayers, authorized by the War Department:

Five out of every 100 Americans took up arms in the defense of the country.

During the Civil War ten out of every 100 inhabitants of the Northern States served as soldiers or sailors; 2,400,000 served in the Northern Army and Navy.

Between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, when the armistice went into effect, 4,800,000 men constituted our land and naval forces.

The British sent forth in her first year of the war more men than did the United States during her first year of the war. On the other hand it took England three years to reach a strength of 2,000,000 men in France, while the United States was able to place this number in the field and across the seas in half the time.

Organization and equipment and transportation of an immense army as that of the United States across the ocean has never been equaled in the history of the world.

Two out of every three American soldiers who reached France took part in battle; 2,084,000 reached France and 1,300,000 took part at the front.

American divisions were in battle for 200 days and engaged in thirteen major operations from the middle of August till the armistice.

American divisions held during the greater part of the time a front longer than that held by the British in October. They held 101 miles of the line or twenty-three per cent of the entire western front.

In the battle of Saint Mihiel 550,000 Americans were engaged as compared to 100,000 on the north side in the battle of Gettysburg.

The artillery fired more than 1,000,000 shells in four hours, which is the most intense artillery fire recorded in the history of the world.

The Meuse-Argonne battle lasted forty-seven days, during which 1,200,000 Americans were engaged.

For every man killed in battle seven were wounded.

Five out of every six men sent to hospitals on account of wounds were cured and returned to duty.

In the expeditionary forces battle deaths were twice as many as deaths from disease.

The number of American lives lost was 122,500, of which 10,000 were in the navy and the rest in the army and marines attached to it.

The war cost America $21,850,000,000, or approximately $1,000,000 per hour.

The greatest number of men sent over seas in a single month was 306,000 and the largest number returned in any one month was 333,000.

The supplies shipped from the United States to France was 7,500,000 tons in nineteen months.

The registration of men for the draft was 24,234,021 and of these 2,810,296 were inducted into service. The largest number inducted into service in a single month was 400,000.

CHAPTER XIX

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR

COMPANY C, TWENTIETH KANSAS REGIMENT U. S. V. IN THE SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR.

During the Spanish-American War Leavenworth was called upon to furnish a company of volunteers for active service in our war against Spain. So it was that this company was organized and afterward became C Company of the famous Fighting Twentieth Kansas Regiment.

C Company was organized principally through the efforts of William S. Albright, who afterward became its captain, and Reverend Bright, pastor of the Methodist Church. Both of the above gentlemen organized companies. These two companies were consolidated and finally became C Company of the Twentieth Kansas Regiment.

Of the services of the Twentieth Kansas Regiment in the Philippine Islands, Elihu Root, Secretary of War, makes the following comment: "The records of the War Department show that the Twentieth Regiment of Kansas Volunteers sailed from San Francisco on the steamship "Indiana" on the 27th of October, 1898, and on the steamship "Newport" on the 9th of November, 1898, arriving at Manilla on the first and sixth days of December following; that the regiment was engaged in actual battle, sustaining losses by death or wounds, on each of the following days, viz.: The 4th, 5th, 7th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 17th, 23d, 24th, 26th and 28th of February, 1899; the 11th, 12th, 13th, 23d, 24th, 25th, 26th, 27th, 29th and 31st of March; the 25th and 26th of April; the 4th and 24th of May, and the 16th and 22d of June. Their participation in engagements is specially mentioned in cablegrams from General Otis on the 8th of February, the 28th of April and the 25th of May, 1899."

The greater part of the engagements above mentioned were fought, and most of the losses of life were incurred, at a time when there was no obligation for further service resting upon the members of the regiment, except that which was self-imposed upon them by their own love of country and their determination to maintain the rightful sovereignty of the United States and the honor of its flag.

The officers and enlisted men of the regiment exhibited high quality of bravery and efficiency.

I beg to join with the people of Kansas in welcoming to their homes these citizen soldiers, so worthy of the heroic origin and patriotic history of their state."

C Company took part in every engagement participated in by the Twentieth Kansas Regiment. Two members of the company, Private Raymond B. Dawes and Private Charles Graves, contracted and died of typhoid fever at Honolulu, Hawaii. The following is a list of officers and enlisted men who were wounded in action: Captain William S. "KICKAPOO CANNON"—KICKAPOO RANGERS—TARRING AND FEATHERING OF WILLIAM PHILLIPS—FLOOD OF 1903—KILLING OF MALCOM CLARK—LANSING, SKELETON—BIG STRANGER, ITS MILLS AND BRIDGES—ABRAHAM LINCOLN—SUICIDE OF JAMES H. LANE—MILWOOD RAID.

Kickapoo Cannon.—This famous old bit of artillery occupied no little niche in the early day history of the territory of Kansas as well as Leavenworth County. It was a relic that had been taken into the Mexican War by General Kearney. It has been said that at one time this cannon was given by the military authorities at Santa Fe, New Mexico, to some traders who were to make a trip eastward over the Santa Fe Trail to serve them against any possible attacking parties and that they had to abandon the cannon near where the Santa Fe Trail crossed the Arkansas River; that it was subsequently brought to Weston, Missouri, by some citizens that happened to be returning to the eastward over the trail, and was later turned over to the military authorities at Fort Leavenworth, who refused to accept same. Subsequent to this it was again taken to Weston, Missouri, where it remained for a number of years. During its stay at Weston it was often pressed into service to salute steamboats upon their arrival.

It is definitely known that during the year 1856 when the "Kickapoo Rangers" were planning their raid on Lawrence that the old cannon was stolen from Weston and taken across the river to Kickapoo. After the raid on Lawrence the cannon was returned to Kickapoo, where it remained until a party of Free State men from Leavenworth went out to Kickapoo one night and stole it. At one time it was pressed into use by pro-slavery men to threaten the owners of the old Planters Hotel into turning over a runaway slave under penalty of having the hotel blown down by it. After it was stolen from Kickapoo by Leavenworth Free State men it was concealed for a time but was later exhibited openly as sentiment became more and more Free State. It is now a part of the collection of curios at the Kansas State Historical Society at Topeka.

"Kickapoo Rangers."—The term "Kickapoo Rangers" was a name quite early applied to the northern division of the territorial militia of the Territory of Kansas. They numbered all the way from two to three hundred men. The majority of these men were of pro-slavery inclination and their leaders were all pro-slavery leaders. A great many of the ruffian acts of territorial days were committed by parties of these men under the guidance and leadership of their radical leaders. David R. Atchison, at one time Senator from Missouri, was a leader and advisor among them and urged them on to commit many of their atrocities. In Blackmar's History of Kansas we find the following account of a speech made by Atchison, the occasion being immediately after the entering of Lawrence by this body May 21st, 1856:

"Boys, this day I am a Kickapoo Ranger. This day we have entered Lawrence with Southern rights inscribed on our banner, and not one Abolitionist dared to fire a gun. And now, boys, we will go in again with our highly honorable Jones, and test the strength of that Free-State hotel and teach the Emigrant Aid Company that Kansas shall be ours. Boys, ladies should, and I hope will, be respected by every gentleman. But, when a woman takes upon herself the garb of a soldier by carrying a Sharp's rifle, she is no longer worthy of respect. Trample her under your feet as you would a snake. If one man or woman dare stand before you, blow them to hell with a chunk of cold lead."

Both Jones and Atchison above referred to were never citizens of the territory or state of Kansas but merely operated out of Missouri, coming here only when there was an election which they desired to carry or some other bit of work to be done toward the furtherance of the cause of slavery in the territory.

One of the most diabolical acts committed by the Rangers in this county was that committed January 18th, 1856, by a number of the "Rangers" under the leadership of Capts. Martin and Dunn, when they murdered Capt. Reese P. Brown at Easton following an election quarrel in which pro-slavery forces had attempted to take by force the ballot boxes from the home of T. A. Minard, at whose place the voting had been done the day before.

Tarring and Feathering of William Phillips.—Another early day atrocity catalogued by H. Miles Moore in his "Early History of Leavenworth City and County" was the tarring and feathering of William Phillips. This took place May 17, 1855.

William Phillips was an early day attorney of the city of Leavenworth. He was an ardent Free State man and his hasty utterances and decisive stand on the burning question of those times brought him into disrepute with the pro-slavery elements of the city. He led a fight against this element over several election matters and when the killing of Malcolm Clark occurred a story was started to the effect that it was Phillips who handed McCrea the pistol with which he shot Clark.

Shortly after this killing an indignation meeting was held in the city and resolutions were drawn up requesting and ordering Phillips to leave the territory. A copy of the notice which was given Phillips is here set out as it appears in Mr. Moore's "Early History of Leavenworth City and County:"

"Leavenworth City, April 30, 1855.

"To William Phillips:

"Sir:—At a meeting of the citizens of Leavenworth and vicinity, we, the undersigned, were appointed a committee to inform you that they have unanimously determined that you must leave this territory by two o'clock of Thursday next. Take due notice thereof and act accordingly.

"Signed: Jarrett Todd, John E. Posey, N. B. Brooks, William E. Berry, H. Rives Polard, Jno. H. McBride, James M. Lysle, A. Payne, Thomas C. Hughes, William Blair."

Upon the day appointed for Phillip's departure a committee called at his house and were informed that he had left the city. Later he was found in the city and arrested and threatened. It is said that he promised to leave as soon as he could get his business affairs straightened up. However, time passed and when Phillips did not take any definite steps toward leaving the pro-slavery element decided to take drastic action. Mr. Moore in his "Early History of Leavenworth City and County" tells of the incident which followed in the following way:

"Thursday, 17th of May, 1855. The most disgraceful outrage took place here this P. M. that I ever witnessed. About a dozen men from Leavenworth took a man by the name of Phillips, a lawyer there, whom they had before ordered to leave town on account of his being an Abolitionist, as they charged, but he had returned again. They took him today and brought him across the river, just below Weston, and in a warehouse stripped him to the waist, tarred and feathered him and brought him up into town, mounted him on a rail and had a number of niggers and boys to drum on old pans and ring bells around. After marching through town they put him on a block opposite the St. George Hotel, and Dr. Ransom's old darky, Joe, auctioned him off and bid him in at one cent. They then took him down from the block, and after marching him about town a little longer, our people beginning to show signs and mutterings of disapproval and disgust of the proceedings, they soon started for home again with him.

"He still stuck to his integrity to the last. Thank God it was mostly drunken rowdies from Leavenworth. I recognized one or two men whom I was surprised to see in the crowd, tugging at the rail on their shoulders, on which was seated Phillips, the victim of this vile outrage. * * * Among the crowd who brought Phillips over to Weston and took an active and leading part in the outrage upon him, I saw the following whom I knew personally, Thos. C. Hughes, and Eli Moore * * * John E. Posey, deputy United States Court clerk; H. Rives Pollard, assistant editor and W. H. Adams, then one of the proprietors and founder of the "Herald;" J. L. McAleer, engineer and surveyor; James M. Lysle, attorney and partner of D. J. Johnson; Wm. L. Blair, clerk in store; D. Scott Boyle, clerk of United States Court; Bennett Burnham, then a young gentleman of leisure, and some four or five others."

It was not so long after this that a pro-slavery mob again attacked Phillips and shot and killed him.

Flood of 1903.—During the latter part of May and the first of June, 1903, incessant rains, for a period of about ten days, throughout the Kaw River basin and the basins of the Solomon and Smoky Hill rivers, tributaries of the Kaw and flowing into the Kaw in central Kansas, caused a congestion of water in the Kaw River between Topeka, Kansas, and Kansas City where the Kaw flows into the Missouri River such as had never before been witnessed even by the oldest settlers. The "June Rise" of the Missouri River was also at its highest point at the time and there had been constant rains along the basin of the Missouri River, for several days, for hundreds of miles toward the north. The fact that the Missouri River was "out of its banks" made it impossible for the water from the Kaw to quickly flow into the Missouri at its mouth in Kansas City, and consequently this checking of the flow of water from the Kaw to the Missouri contributed toward a much greater congestion of water than would otherwise have occurred.

The farmers in the valley of the Kaw from Topeka, Kansas, to Kansas City had planted an unusual number of acres of potatoes in the spring and the prospects for a "bumper" potato crop were unusually encouraging. Many of these farmers lived in the southern part of Leavenworth County where some of the richest potato land in the world was, at that time, and is yet to be found. Linwood, Kansas, in the southern part of the county suffered the most serious damage as a result of this "flood of 1903." This little city of about 600 people at the time was situated in the southern part of the county where Big Stranger flows into the Kaw. Big Stranger had been noted, locally, for occasional floods prior to that time and the general rains had swollen this stream to an unusual size. The huge volume of water in the Kaw "backed up" by the Missouri made it impossible for the water from Big Stranger to quickly and uninterruptedly flow onward into the Kaw. Linwood was situated mostly on the west side of Big Stranger and a little to the north of the north bank of the Kaw.

During the month of May the Kaw reached a point when it was almost out of its banks. Big Stranger, likewise, was about ready to overflow its banks. Linwood at that time was on low ground and the city was generally below the level of the tops of the east and west banks of Big Stranger. This was due to the fact that the citizens, when former floods threatened, had from time to time built up the banks in order to keep the water from flowing over the banks and into the streets and over the entire city. In this they had been successful for many years.

On the evening of May 29, 1903, the word was passed around to all the people of the little city that it seemed probable that it would be necessary that they all get out and work most any time to again build up the Big Stranger banks in order to keep the water out. It was not long until the population of the city was generally busy in throwing up the embankments on the east and west sides of Big Stranger. However, at about 4 o'clock on the morning of May 30, the water broke through and began gradually to back into the city. At the time also the water seemed to be rising rapidly. When the water began to "back in" from Big Stranger there did not seem to be much alarm over the possibility of its "backing in" so as to do much damage to buildings and property. The general consensus of opinion was: "It can't get much higher, because it never was this high before." However, about 8 o'clock A. M. of the same day word suddenly came to the people of the little city that the Kaw had broken through on Mr. Tudhope's farm just west of Linwood about one-half mile. Hardly had this word been received when on came the rushing water of the Kaw overflowed from its banks in an endeavor to make a new channel right through Linwood itself. People, however, were not yet alarmed over the safety of their property and household effects and only a very few yet began to move to higher ground. The Kaw kept rising all that day and on until the next day. Some were fortunate enough to get their household effects on higher ground near the Linwood High School building and in the school yard before it was too late, but there were many who saw their household furniture and personal belongings, the accumulation of years, swept away in the whirling torrent and flood. Many frame houses were swept away in the newly made channel of the Kaw. Some were upturned and were not swept away. Water in places was 20 feet deep over what had been Linwood. The postoffice was completely submerged. The Linwood State Bank and all business buildings were nearly all completely submerged by the water. Lumber from the Linwood Lumber Yard was caught in the channel and swept onward toward the Missouri never to be recovered. The whole city was caught in the main channel of the flood and ruin and devastation was inevitable.

There was sadness and destruction on all sides. Families were rendered homeless in a day. Their personal effects were all destroyed in the same time. However, there were many humorous incidents. Many buildings from up the river came by in the rapidly flowing channel. In some buildings were pigs, calves, dogs, cats, chickens, geese and ducks. Occasionally one would see dogs on top of the buildings.

There is no cloud so dark, however, that it does not have a silver lining. While the Kaw Valley potato crop for the fall of 1903 was ruined and many families were left homeless, nevertheless the rich deposits of alluvial soil greatly benefited the farmers of the valley by enriching their soil so that a larger yield per acre of potatoes is now obtained than ever was known before the flood.

Killing of Malcolm Clark.—Among the more important incidents of early day Leavenworth County and City history recited by the late H.

Miles Moore in his "Early History of Leavenworth City and County" was the shooting and killing of Malcolm Clark.

Malcolm Clark was one of the earliest and most prominent settlers of the county. He was one of the members of the original town company and took an active interest in the welfare of the city. When the "Squatters" of the territory held their first meeting at the Riveley store in Salt Creek Valley, Clark was selected by them as marshal of Leavenworth city and territory thereabout. On April 30, 1855, a meeting was held in the city of Leavenworth for the purpose of arriving at some definite policy with reference to "Squatters," who were flocking into the territory and taking up claims in bad faith. The meeting was held in the open air under the "old elm tree" which stood near the corner of Cherokee and Front or Water street. The killing of Clark took place in the following manner as described by H. Miles Moore in his "Early History of Leavenworth City and County:"

"Several speeches had been made and resolutions were being discussed. The excitement was pretty high. Mr. Clark, who as I before stated was a member of the town association, a little passionate when his Scotch blood was aroused, was taking rather an active part in the meeting, as one deeply interested. Mr. McCrea, who was then residing in the country, lately an inmate of the Soldiers' Home, as many of our readers are aware, was reported to have interrupted the speaker once or twice, and it was suggested to Clark that McCrea was not a "Delaware Squatter," as his claim was on the cutoff back of Fort Leavenworth reserve, near the Salt Creek bridge (not far from where the D. W. Powers brick house now stands) and that he (McCrea) was not interested in the matter. Clark went to him and stated that he understood about his claim, and asked him to not again interfere in the meeting, explaining that it was a Delaware squatter meeting. Clark returned and stated that McCrea had not understood it before, but would not again interrupt or say anything. Shortly after the chairman was putting to a vote a resolution before the meeting, and as it was difficult to ascertain the result by sound a division was called for and it was upon this vote that McCrea took part and when the chair announced that the resolution was carried he (McCrea) pronounced the division a fraud.

"To this Clark took exception, and the lie passed between him and McCrea. Clark advanced upon McCrea and stooped down to pick up a piece of board or scantling, and raised it to strike McCrea, who rushed toward Clark and the blow missed him. He then retreated and Clark pursued him and McCrea turned and shot him. He spoke but a word or two and died in five minutes. McCrea ran and jumped down the bank at the edge of the river. Several shots were fired at him while standing there without apparent effect. The excitement was intense, a rope was soon produced and he would doubtless have been hung by the excited crowd had it not been for the cool bravery of Samuel D. Pitcher, an old citizen of the territory at Fort Leavenworth and afterwards here, who suddenly appeared, mounted on horseback and another man with him, both heavily armed and ordered the driver of a government hack or ambulance, I think, to drive into the crowd, and then approaching McCrea, who was seated on a block near the tree, told him to get into the hack, which he did speedily with the assistance of some friends, and then ordered the driver to push for Fort Leavenworth as rapidly as possible while he and the man with drawn revolvers followed, their movements being so rapid that the crowd was completely thrown off its guard."

McCrea was held in custody at Fort Leavenworth for several months and finally escaped. He did not come back to Kansas until after the Civil War. He was never prosecuted for the killing of Clark, although an indictment was found against him. He spent the latter part of his days at the Soldiers' Home south of the city, where he died.

Lansing Skeleton.—Two brothers, Joseph and Michael Concannon, were digging a trench on their farm near Lansing and on March 23, 1902, they unearthed a human skeleton. It was deeply imbedded under a stratum of earth and rock. During the summer Michael Concannon took the skull to Kansas City and gave the particulars of the find to a newspaper reporter. An article was written at the time and aroused the interests of the scientists all over the United States. From all parts of the country they came to the Concannon farm to look over the find. Some advanced the theory that the probable age was all the way from 10,000 to 35,000 years. The residents of the neighborhood were somewhat skeptical and gave it as their opinion that it was the remains of a convict from the State Penitentiary, who had been buried there, as the place had at one time been used as a cemetery and long since had been abandoned. However the discovery was of such importance that the skull now rests in the national museum at Washington, District of Columbia, and the most of the remainder of the skeleton is in the museum at the University of Kansas.

Big Stranger, Its Mills and Bridges.—Big Stranger enters Leavenworth County just south of the town of Potter in Atchison County and runs thence in a southerly direction through Easton, Alexander, High Prairie, Stranger and Sherman townships and empties into the Kaw River just below Linwood. It was known far and wide as a good fishing stream. Along the valley are found some of the finest farms in the county. The valley early attracted settlers on account of timber along its banks and the rich soil adjoining. There are some twenty-two bridges spanning the stream. There are three covered bridges, one at Easton, one at Springdale and the other at Jarbalo. They were constructed about the year 1870 and have proven substantial structures. They are in fine condition to this day. The county has long since ceased building wooden structures but it is doubtful if the steel structures of the present day will give as good service as the old covered bridges still in use on Big Stranger.

There were several mills located on this stream that were widely known and patronized. In 1869 John J. Rapp built what was known as "The Stranger Valley Mills" at Milwood. This mill was built under the direction of Mike Lackner, who afterwards ran the Lackner saloon at the same place. It was a three story building of stone with three runs of burrs. It was operated by both water and steam power. A mill race was cut north of the mill to the banks of Stranger at the Collyer farm. Through this channel water flowed to run the mill and when there was not sufficient power this way then the mill was run by steam. A dam was erected across the creek just below where the steel bridge now stands east of the village of Milwood. For miles around people brought in their corn and wheat to have it ground while they waited. Usually the miller took his pay by means of toll and the farmer took the remainder and hauled it in a wagon or carried it on horseback. Mr. Rapp died in 1877 but the mill was run for many years afterwards by his widow and sons. One of the sons, George Rapp, still lives in the vicinity of Easton. The old stone building is all that is left of the once famous mill.

John Wright owned a saw and grist mill just north of the covered bridge on Stranger east of Jarbalo between the years of 1856 and 1861. It was one of the busiest places in that section of the country. People for miles around brought in their corn to be ground and their logs to be sawed into planks for their cabins. The mill was located on the farm of Solomon Buxton, the father of Mrs. Sam Hastings, who now lives at 218 Fourth Avenue, Leavenworth, Kansas.

The engine boiler exploded February 1, 1861, and killed eight people. A number of other people were wounded and the mill completely wrecked. John Wright, the owner, had just completed fixing a belt and was in the act of placing it in position when the explosion occurred. He was thrown about ten feet and landed among some logs but was not seriously hurt. Harrison Waymire and R. B. Richards were caught in the main belt and hurled quite a distance against a tree and seriously injured. The lifeless body of one man was almost completely stripped of its clothing. Others were torn into fragments, and pieces of skulls and brains, fragments of human flesh and parts of machinery were scattered for nearly half a mile around. The miller and engineer were killed and several prominent citizens. It was a ghastly sight to behold. It is believed that water was allowed to freeze in the boiler and loosen some of the flues, and when steam was raised the explosion occurred.

Those killed were. A. W. Mason, Andred Calhoun, Henry Broderick, William Trackwell, James K. Black, Peter McKinney, Jesse Richards and George Ecton. Relatives of some of these men still live in the vicinity of Jarbalo. Years afterwards while woodmen were cutting down trees within a quarter of a mile of the place of the explosion a large piece of boiler plate fell down out of a tree. John Brune now owns the farm on which the tragedy happened.

In the winter of 1879-1880 Thomas Ashby built a mill in Big Stranger two miles due east of Springdale. It was run by steam power. It was a saw and grist mill. It was well and favorably known. It was built in the midst of what was perhaps the finest white oak forest in Kansas. So thick were the trees that it was necessary to clear out some 15,000 feet of the timber before the mill could be erected. Mr. Ashby and his sons continued to run the mill till 1893, when he moved to Leavenworth, where he continued in the milling business at a location between Tenth and Eleventh on Shawnee street. He moved his mill to the present location between Fifth and Sixth on Oak street in 1898 and is operating the grist mill there at the present time. The old mill on Stranger was taken over by E. J. Evans and run till 1912, when it was abandoned. A fire destroyed it in 1920.

Henry Ready also owned and operated a mill on Big Stranger in Alexandria Township. It did a thriving business as a grist and saw mill.

Mrs. E. Davis and Sons owned and operated a flouring mill on Big Stranger four miles southeast of Tonganoxie. It was run by water power and did a good business. They had an original capital of $10,00.

Abraham Lincoln arrived in Leavenworth December 3, 1859. He made two speeches here, one on the third and one on the fifth. The largest political gathering that had ever assembled in Kansas up to that time heard the Great Emancipator. His speech was substantially the same as that delivered at Cooper Institute, New York City, and is recognized as one of the ablest productions of any American statesman. On the 30th of January, 1861, Kansas was admitted as a free state and Abraham Lincoln took part in raising the flag over Independence Hall with the added star of Kansas in the field. On this occasion Mr. Lincoln said: "I am invited and called before you to participate in raising above Independence Hall the flag of our country with an additional star upon it. I wish to call your attention to the fact that, under the blessing of God, each additional star added to the flag has given additional prosperity and happiness to this country." While in Leavenworth Mr. Lincoln was a guest at the Planters Hotel.

Suicide of James H. Lane.—The suicide of Gen. James H. Lane July 11, 1866, at Fort Leavenworth stirred the State of Kansas. It is conceded that General Lane had his faults but without his vigorous arm and bold heart Kansas would have stood little chance of becoming a free state. He was United States Senator from Kansas at the time of his tragic death. He had secured a leave of absence from his arduous duties in Washington and returned to Kansas. He was in poor health and appeared greatly depressed in spirits but started to return to Washington. On reaching St. Louis his physicians expressed fear of his recovery and were of the opinion that he was threatened with softening of the brain. He returned to Fort Leavenworth and stopped with his brother-in-law, Captain McCall, on the government farm adjoining Leavenworth. Symptoms of insanity grew worse. On Sunday, July 1st, he expressed a desire to ride out and Captain McCall and Captain Adams accompanied him in a carriage. They stopped to open one of the farm gates and Lane jumped out and exclaimed "Goodbye, gentlemen," and discharged a revolver in his mouth, the ball passing upward through his brain. He was carried to a farm house and remained in an unconscious condition till July 11th, when he died. At one time he seemed to recover sufficiently to recognize friends and called them in a whisper.

The aberration of mind was attributed to various causes, but little is definitely known. He supported the president's veto of the civil rights bill and for this his friends had deserted him. Threats had been made to expose his conduct in regard to government contracts in which he is alleged to have had a personal interest.

Millwood Raid.—One of the most sensational armed raids to take place in the county after the passing of the days of border warfare occurred at the little village of Millwood, which is situated in the north central part of Easton Township, February 19, 1901. On that night the Lackner saloon at Millwood was raided by citizens who are said to have marched from Easton, a small village which is situated a short distance south of the scene of the tragedy. Two parties by the name of John Wilburn and Joe Turner are said to have entered the saloon first and ordered a round of drinks. The other members of the raiding party remained outside. After finishing his drink Wilburn is alleged to have rapped three times upon the bar with his glass. This was apparently a signal to the members of the party outside, as they immediately crowded in. Two of the parties who entered the saloon first were carrying shotguns. One of the members of the Lackner family immediately seized the shotguns and in the scuffle that followed either one or both of the guns were discharged. Rose Hudson, one of the members of the Lackner family, happened at the instant to be entering the room a short distance away and the entire charge of shot from the gun struck her in the head, killing her instantly. With the discharge of the shotgun, the concussion extinguished all lights within the room. A fusilade of shots from the attacking party followed and was answered by members of the Lackner family and friends who happened to be there. William Webb, one of the members of the defending party, was wounded twice in the affray. A number of the members of the raiding parties was wounded. It is reported that at least one of the raiding members never recovered from his wounds, but died some time later. It is an established fact that several of the most prominent citizens of the Easton community left shortly after this and never returned.

The real purpose of the raid has for years been a matter of more or less speculation on the part of citizens living in those above mentioned communities. It occurred at a time when Carrie Nation was very active in the State of Kansas and some believe that the motive which animated the movement was that of suppressing the saloon evil. Others have contended that it was for the purpose of putting the owners in fear—possibly in flight and then plundering the stock of liquors on hand. The Lackner saloon, like many others, had been operating in violation of the Kansas prohibitory law for a number of years and was in bad repute. When four of the members of the raiding party were tried in the Leavenworth District Court for the murder of Rose Lackner they were acquitted.

CHAPTER XXI

BIOGRAPHICAL HISTORY

Capt. John T. Taylor, who is recorder of the Military Order of Loyal Legion with office in Room 4, Wulfekuhler Building, and who is one of the best known men in Leavenworth, was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, August 7, 1841. He is the son of Col. W. H. H. Taylor, a native of Richmond, Virginia, and who, when young, located in Cincinnati, Ohio, where he afterward married Anna T. H. Harrison, a daughter of William Henry Harrison, who later became the President of the United States. Colonel Taylor was state librarian of Minnesota for eighteen years, and died in office at St. Paul at the age of eighty years. He is buried in Minneapolis and his wife is buried in the home burying ground at North Bend, Ohio. She was fifty years of age at the time of her death.

Colonel Taylor commanded the Fifth Regiment, Ohio Cavalry, during the Civil War. The regiment was organized at Camp Dick Corwin, September, 1861. On March 1, 1861, the regiment left for Paducah, Kentucky, reporting to Brigadier General W. T. Sherman. The regiment was considered one of the best cavalry regiments in the service from start to finish, as a partial list of the battles in which it bore a conspicuous part will show. They were as follows: Black Jack, Tennessee, sometimes referred to as Black Jack Forest; Pittsburgh Landing; Crumps Landing; Shiloh; all in Tennessee; Metamora, Mississippi; Little Bear Creek, Mississippi, Lexington, Tennessee and Davis Mills, Mississippi; Moscow, Tennessee; Hernando, Mississippi; Coldwater, Mississippi; Rocky Crossing, Mississippi; Hernando, Mississippi; Clear Creek, Alabama; Guntown, Alabama; Reenzi, Mississippi; Lebanon, Alabama; Red Oak, Georgia; Jonesboro, Georgia; Rocky Creek Church, Georgia; Fayetteville, North Carolina and Averysboro, North Carolina.

While stationed in Memphis, Tennessee, General Sherman appointed

CAPT. JOHN T. TAYLOR

Colonel Taylor president of a military commission to try the traitors who were charged with offenses against the rules of civilized war, and while the colonel was fair and just in all his rulings, he had no sympathy or patience with the treacherous and disloyal who came before him.

Colonel Taylor's oldest son, W. H. H., Jr., responded to the first call of President Lincoln for three month troops, and he went immediately with his regiment to Washington. Shortly afterwards he was given a commission in the Eighteenth United States Regulars, in which he served, reaching the rank of captain.

Capt. John T. Taylor was married to Amelia M. Wilson of Bloomington, Illinois, December 21, 1880. She is a daughter of Samuel and Margaret Wilson, natives of Illinois. Captain Taylor and wife reside at 710 South Seventh Street, Leavenworth.

During the Civil War, Captain Taylor was in the Battle of Shiloh and was within four feet of Major Anderson when he restored the flag staff to Ft. Sumter in 1865, which was restored by order of President Lincoln with elaborate ceremonies. When the flag rose above the parapet, hundreds of cannons roared a salute from Morris Island, Castle Pinckney and other forts. Thousands of people attended the ceremony. Captain Taylor served four years in the army. He has a sword which General William T. Sherman presented to him on September 15, 1862, at Memphis, Tennessee.

Benjamin Harrison, great grandfather of Captain Taylor, was a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and ex-President William Henry Harrison was the father of the mother of Captain John Taylor and ex-President Benjamin Harrison was a son of the brother of Anna T. H. Taylor, the mother of Captain Taylor, so it can readily be seen that Captain Taylor comes from an illustrious family.

The Military Order of the Loyal Legion, of which Captain Taylor is recorder, is confined to the commissioned officers of the Civil War, their sons and grandsons. The commandery of the state of Kansas was organized in 1886 at Ft. Leavenworth. The present headquarters are in Philadelphia and Col. John P. Nicholson has been its recorded in chief since the organization. Only one commandery in a state is permitted. in 1851 in Buchanan County, Missouri, and in 1856 came to Kansas with his parents. They settled in Walnut Township, Atchison County. His wife Fannie (Faulconer) Potter was born in Missouri the daughter of John M. and Lorinda Faulconer. They came to Atchison County, Kansas, when their daughter was three years old. They were among the early settlers and farmers of that locality. Tinsley Potter died April 15, 1921. The following is from a local newspaper at the time of his death: "The late Tinsley Potter, of Potter, was one of the most widely known cattlemen of this section. He began buying cattle in the early days when this county was an unfenced range and continued in the business until recently. It is doubtful if any man in Atchison County has handled more cattle than Tinsley Potter. He was in the saddle most of his life and in point of service he might be termed Atchison County's oldest 'cowboy.' He preferred horseback riding to any other method of travel, even after the automobile came in use, and made most of his buying trips on horseback. Of course, in rounding up and driving in the herd, the horse was essential, and Mr. Potter was as expert in horsemanship and herding as any cowboy on the job. In his big cattle deals he has ridden over much of the territory in northeastern Kansas, and on many of his trips would be away from home for several days at a time, often exposing himself to the severe weather. As a cattleman Mr. Potter was very successful. Several years ago he retired, and moved to the city, but his long years as a cattle buyer had so inured him in the love of the great outdoors, that it was no time until it was back to the farm and in the saddle for him. Tinsley Potter was descended from a long line of pioneers who helped to conquer the wilderness and build an empire on the western continent, and he was imbued with the same sturdy qualities that characterized his ancestors. He did much for the development of the community in which he lived for sixty-five years. He was a good, substantial citizen and will be missed by a wide circle of friends."

F. M. Potter was educated in the public schools and the Campbell College at Holton, Kansas. After leaving school he taught two years in the rural schools. He then associated himself with his father, Tinsley Potter, in the stock buying business until he accepted the position as cashier of the State Savings Bank in 1920.

In 1912 F. M. Potter and Miss Alice Ingles were united in marriage. She is a daughter of J. K. and Lina (Dooley) Ingles, the former deceased and the latter living at Atchison, Kansas. J. K. Ingles was an early settler and farmer of Brown County, Kansas, and spent his latter days in Atchison County. His death occurred in December, 1919, at the advanced age of seventy years. Mrs. Alice (Ingles) Potter was born in Atchison County, Kansas.

F. M. Potter was only nine years old when he first helped to drive cattle into the Broadway Stock Yards at Leavenworth. His father, Tinsley Potter, was an extensive stockbuyer and his trips on "Old Roaney," his favorite riding horse, would take him as far west as Concordia, Kansas. This horse was as well known as its rider to the farmers of the prairie. Tinsley Potter and his son, F. M., have the reputation of having driven more cattle in the Broadway Stock Yards of Leavenworth than any other firm of buyers in this part of the country. They would drive large herds in each week for months at a time. These buying trips were extended over many months, requiring many days and weeks in the saddle constantly.

Before bank checks were used, Tinsley Potter would carry his money in the saddle bags in large rolls, often going long distances with a large sum of money, with never a fear of being robbed.

The members of the Board of Education are: Dr. S. B. Langworthy, William S. Albright, Fred S. Bolman, M. Toppler, Lee Todd, W. W. Hooper. Mary M. Pferferkorn is director of tests and measurements.

The high standard which the Leavenworth schools have attained is due largely to the expert knowledge of Superintendent Bright.

Mr. Bright was married August 26, 1908, to Mary Elizabeth Lawson, of Hutchinson, Kansas, a daughter of J. H. Lawson, a pioneer of that city. Mr. and Mrs. Bright reside at 326 Pine street, Leavenworth.

Franklin Wuerth, of the firm of Wuerth & Son, jewelers, is the senior member of one of Leavenworth's best jewelry firms. He was born in Cleveland, Ohio, February 6, 1865, the son of J. H. and Catherine (Rockert) Wuerth, both natives of Germany, but who came to the United States when small. They were married at Cleveland, Ohio.

J. H. Wuerth came to Leavenworth in 1859 to visit his brother, Gottlieb Wuerth, who was a clerk for John F. Richards, a pioneer hardware man of Leavenworth. In 1869 he left Cleveland and settled on a farm three miles west of Millwood, and for five years lived there, suffering many misfortunes, in the way of drouths, grasshoppers, losing hogs with cholera, and, in the panic of 1873, he lost practically all he had. He then moved to Leavenworth and was in the wholesale flour, feed and commission business for several years, and also operated a transfer line. In 1886 he and his son, Franklin, the subject of this sketch, started in the retail jewelry business, which he conducted until his death, about the year 1896, at the age of sixty-five years. He is buried at Mt. Muncie cemetery. His wife died three months previous to his passing. Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wuerth were the parents of the following children: Charles, who is engaged in the cigar business in Kansas City, Missouri; H. E., who has been a jeweler in Kansas City since 1886; John, deceased, who was in business in Leavenworth until the time of his death at the age of fifty-four; Bertha, the wife of J. K. Roller, a retired real estate dealer of San Diego, California; William J., who operates a fruit ranch at Fresno, California; and Franklin.

Franklin Wuerth was educated in the public schools of Leavenworth and also attended the old Morris school and the Oak school. He was his father's partner, and since his father's death, he bought out the other heirs, and the firm remains the same—"Wuerth & Son," the son now being Floyd E. Wuerth. This firm is one of the oldest and most reliable in the city. Mr. Wuerth carries only high class goods, the same lines that are carried by jewelers in the largest cities, and he represents lines made by the oldest and best manufacturers in the country, continuing to do business with firms with whom he started thirty-six years ago.

Franklin Wuerth's brother, H. E. Wuerth, of Kansas City, was foreman for R. N. Hershfield, of Leavenworth, when Hershfield was perhaps the largest jeweler in the United States, having thirty-five men employed. When Hershfield went to Kansas, H. E. Wuerth went with him, later going into business for himself. Franklin Wuerth learned diamond setting from his brother, and watch making from J. A. Schmidt, and he also worked with a Swiss watchmaker and a Frenchman by the name of Herman Huber, both expert watchmakers. While in the latter's shop, Mr. Wuerth made a complete watch before he was eighteen years old. He started in business with his father when twenty years of age and sold his first watch to Rev. R. B. Broener, formerly of Sacred Heart Parish, and who was introduced to him by Rev. Bishop Fink. The watch is still running and in good shape.

On July 13, 1892, Franklin Wuerth was married to Miss Lenora O'Brien, a daughter of P. and Mary O'Brien, early settlers of Leavenworth. Both are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien had the following children: Mrs. William P. Gilbert; Joseph, of Leavenworth; Mrs. J. W. Melvin, of Leavenworth; Mrs. Thomas Jones, of Kansas City, Kansas, and Mrs. Franklin Wuerth.

Mr. and Mrs. Wuerth have a son, Floyd, twenty-six years of age, who is an assistant in the store. He is a graduate of the Catholic High School. He served during the World War for sixteen months and was first sergeant, having enlisted in 1917. He attended the officers' training school at Camp Hancock, going first to Camp Funston, then to Camp Pike, Arkansas. He was in a machine gun company, and made a fine record.

Franklin Wuerth is a Scottish Rite Mason and a member of the Shrine at Leavenworth. He is also a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, Knights of Pythias, Modern Woodmen of America and the Country Club. Mr. Wuerth is a progressive citizen in every sense of the word. He and his family reside at 413 Chestnut street.

Francis J. McAuliffe, secretary and treasurer of the Mehl and Schott Drug Company, is one of Leavenworth's wide awake and progressive citizens. He was born in Leavenworth County, Kansas, April 5, 1883, the son of James and Anna (Sullivan) McAuliffe, both natives of Ireland, the former from Beaufort, Ireland, and Mrs. McAuliffe from County Kerry. The father came to America when a young man and attended school in St. Joseph, Missouri. She came to Leavenworth when eleven years of age and lived with her aunt, Mrs. Mack Brennan, now deceased. James and Anna McAuliffe now live at 600 Kiowa street, Leavenworth. They have the following children: May, of Denver, Colorado, who is employed by the Western Union Telegraph Company; James, of Santa Rosa, California; Francis J., the subject of this sketch; William, of South St. Joseph, Missouri; Genevieve, a Sister of Charity, now of Denver, Colorado; and George, of Glenn's Ferry, Idaho.

Francis J. McAuliffe received his education in the Leavenworth, Kansas, public schools, and also learned pharmacy here. He is the efficient secretary and treasurer of the firm of Mehl & Schott. He began working in 1910, and upon the death of W. S. Schott, was taken into the firm as secretary, and since the death of H. W. Mehl in 1919 he was also made treasurer. Mehl and Schott were pioneer druggists, having been in business here thirty-five years.

Mr. McAuliffe also takes an interest in local affairs and holds the office of commissioner of parks and public property, having been elected to this position in 1918.

Mr. McAuliffe is a member of the Knights of Columbus.

E. D. Lysle, president of the Lysle Milling Company, has been identified with the industrial development of Leavenworth all his life and stands at the head of and is the principal owner of this great manufacturing concern which is one of the leading milling institutions of the country. E. D. Lysle is a son of James C. and Letitia S. (Dickey) Lysle, both of whom are now deceased.

James C. Lysle was a native of Pennsylvania, born in Chester County, December 2, 1828. He spent his early life in his native state and served an apprenticeship in a paper mill where he learned the paper making trade. He came to Leavenworth, Kansas, in 1867. In 1868, in partnership with Mr. Dilworth, he started a hub and spoke factory which was a thriving business during the days of overland transportation by wagon. As the railroads were built in the West there was a decrease in the demand for wagons for transportation purposes and the Lysle-Dilworth plant was converted into a furniture factory. Later the firm began the manufacture of flour and Mr. Lysle continued in the milling business here during the remainder of his active career. He retired from active business pursuits in 1909 and died in Leavenworth in 1911. He was a capable business man and was notably one of the successful men of Leavenworth and Kansas. James C. Lysle married Miss Letitia S. Dickey who was born in Pennsylvania in 1837 and died in Leavenworth, Kansas, in 1918. She and her husband are buried in Mount Muncie Cemetery at Leavenworth.

To James C. and Letitia S. (Dickey) Lysle were born the following children: May, married C. W. Chase, Leavenworth, Kansas; Carrie, married W. A. Jeffries, Leavenworth, Kansas; and E. D., the subject of this sketch.

E. D. Lysle was reared in Leavenworth and completed his education in 1890. He then entered the employ of the Kelley & Lysle Milling Company of which his father was the principal owner. He served in various capacities of responsibility with this company until 1898 when he became manager and in 1909, when his father retired, he succeeded to the presidency of the company and still holds that position.

E. D. Lysle was united in marriage November 15, 1894 with Miss Grace Phillips and to this union has been born one son, James C., who is sales manager for the Lysle Milling Company and resides in Leavenworth. He was graduated from Yale in the class of 1916 and when the United States entered the World War he was commissioned second lieutenant in the regular army. He was a member of the Twelfth Field Artillery of the famous Second Division and participated in much of the severe fighting in which the American troops were engaged. During the course of his military career he was promoted to the rank of captain. In the operations at Chateau Thierry he was wounded and gassed. At the close of the war he returned to Leavenworth and resumed his position as sales manager of the Lysle Milling Company. He was married February 7, 1921, to Miss Frances Fennelly of Kansas City, Missouri.

E. D. Lysle is one of the progressive business men of Leavenworth and the Lysle family have for many years been prominent in this section of the country.

The Lysle Milling Company, of Leavenworth, Kansas, is one of the leading commercial institutions, not only of Leavenworth County but of the state. From a small beginning it has gone on in its development until the Lysle Milling Company is recognized as one of the leading manufacturers of high-grade flour in the entire country. This business was founded in 1872 by James C. Lysle and James Dilworth who were also at that time engaged in the manufacture of furniture. This partnership arrangement continued until 1880 when John Kelley bought Dillworth's interest, and in 1889 Mr. Lysle bought Mr. Kelley's interest, becoming the sole owner and proprietor. In 1909, the name of the company was changed to The J. C. Lysle Milling Company.

In 1889 the original mill was destroyed by fire and at that time a mill with a capacity of 500 barrels per day was built, which was considered a large mill at that time, the old mill having had a 250 barrel daily capacity. The capacity of the mill has been gradually increased from time to time and at present the mill is capable of manufacturing 1,800 barrels of flour per day, and the mill and elevators have a storage capacity of 350,000 bushels of wheat. In addition to their Leavenworth plant, the Lysle Milling Company erected a large modern flouring mill at North Kansas City in 1920. This is a concrete structure equipped with the most modern milling machinery and has a capacity of 3,000 barrels daily, and is one of the important manufacturing institutions of North Kansas City, Missouri.

The Lysle Milling Company has always been conducted on progressive lines. This mill introduced Kansas hard wheat flour on the European markets and began to export flour in 1890. However, flour from the mills of Minnesota had been exported prior to that time.

The company gives employment to over one hundred people, twenty-five of whom are connected with the offices and sales department. The Lysle Milling Company has long since been recognized as one of the important factors in the making of industrial Leavenworth and stands as a monument to its principal founder, James C. Lysle.

The Victor Manufacturing Company is one of Leavenworth's important industries, and is located at Pennsylvania and Lawrence avenues. It was organized by F. J. Tallant and E. V. Allen, and began business in Hiawatha, Kansas, in 1905, in a very modest way, but soon realizing the need of better shipping facilities the business was moved to Leavenworth in the fall of 1906 and the present plant, including nearly two acres of ground, was purchased. It has since been improved in many ways and the addition of much labor-saving machinery thus increasing production greatly, making it one of the leading businesses in the industry.

The principle business is the manufacture of the wonderful Wonder Washer, a machine of great effectiveness, yet of simple mechanisms. It is adapted for use by hand, or water power, also gas or gasoline and electricity, and readily produces clean clothes in one-third of the time required by its nearest competitors. Its process combines the special features of suction; stirring; squeezing and a slight rubbing. In other makes of washing machines only one of these processes can be used but the Wonder Washer uses all at the same time.

The product of The Victor Manufacturing Company is shipped to all parts of the United States and to many foreign countries indicating the importance and popularity of this machine. The machines are sold to dealers through salesmen and they have employed as many as eighteen salesmen on the road at one time. The name of Leavenworth is thus carried into all points of the compass by a wide distribution.

The present company was incorporated under the laws of Kansas in 1908 and again in 1917 when the capital was increased to $100,000.00. Mr. F. J. Tallant is president. Mr. John M. Topper is secretary and treasurer. The directors are principally members of these two families and the stock is principally owned by them. The business has developed gradually but constantly from the earnings of the business until it has reached its present stage. The buildings of the company are brick, four stories in height and are surrounded by spacious lawns.

Mr. F. J. Tallant takes a great interest in all the welfare of the city, was for a number of years president of the Leavenworth Y. M. C. A. and is still a director of that organization, and is ever ready to devote his time and money to the advancement of this institution. In 1857, a church was built at Springdale, where the church is now located. An academy was conducted in the new church at Springdale in 1860, and this academy was attended by Quakers from all over the territory. The school was maintained and kept up until the public schools were established in Kansas. The school was taught by Prof. Mahlon Oliphant. Prior to the advent of railroads in the county, Springdale was a prosperous village, with three stores, blacksmith shops, hotel, mill, etc.

There were about sixty or seventy men from Alexandria Township who served in different Kansas regiments during the Civil War, and James W. Powell, the subject of this sketch, is the only one known to be living. Mr. Brune is a member of the Yeoman Lodge, the Modern Woodmen of America Lodge, and of the Farmer's Grange. He receives his mail at Jarbalo, Kansas, Route Number One.

John Schmidt, well known and popular Buick taxi service man, was born in Germany November 25, 1870, the son of Charles and Mary Schmidt, both now deceased.

John Schmidt came to America when a boy, in 1884, and joined the United States Army in New York City. During the year 1890 and 1891 he was in the Sioux campaign in Montana. In 1894 he came to Fort Leavenworth with the Twentieth United States Infantry, and was discharged from the army in 1896. During the Cuban war, in 1898, he reenlisted with Company H, Twentieth Infantry, and was in service in Cuba. He participated in the battles of El Caney and San Juan Hill. He returned to Fort Leavenworth the second time and was discharged, but joined the Sixth United States Cavalry and went to the Philippine Islands, and was in the campaign there with Generals Funston, Bell, Weedon and Otis. Mr. Schmidt served eleven years in the United States Army in all, and made an excellent record. His discharges show the clean, efficient work he did in all the different places where he served.

In 1906 Mr. Schmidt came to Leavenworth and settled on a farm in Kickapoo Township which he had purchased in 1898. He still owns this place of ten acres and makes it his home. In 1916 Mr. Schmidt opened the Buick taxi service and operates four cars. He has made a success of this business. Mr. Schmidt also takes an interest in the affairs of his township and has served on the school board in his district for three years.

In 1893 Mr. Schmidt was married to Mary Boedettes of Leavenworth, Kansas. They have one son, Harry, born May 11, 1897, who assists his father in the taxi business.

Robert B. and Walter C. Yoakum, leading contractors of Leavenworth, came from a pioneer family. They are grandsons of Washington C. Yoakum, who was born in Tazewell, Tennessee, near Cumberland Gap, and was reared in eastern Tennessee. When a young man he went to Alabama and learned the contracting business. He was married in Alabama to Elizabeth (Tunstall). From that state he went to Atlanta, Georgia, where he spent several years. In 1857 he located in Leavenworth, Kansas, at Broadway and Ottawa streets. He died in this county about 1870 and is buried near Fairmont, Kansas, of this county.

William T. Yoakum, a son of Washington Yoakum and the father of the subject of this sketch, was born at Huntsville, Alabama, in 1840 and came with his father to Leavenworth in 1857. He followed contracting and building until his death in November, 1918. He was a member of the Kansas State Militia.

Robert B. Yoakum was born in Leavenworth June 19, 1869 and Walter C. Yoakum was born October 10, 1875. Both were educated at Leavenworth, and Robert Yoakum was graduated from the Michigan Military Academy, near Detroit. The two comprise the firm known as "R. B. Yoakum, Contractor." This firm has been under this name since 1894. They are experts in their line of work and do a large business in the city, but the majority of their work is confined to Fort Leavenworth. They own their building at 515 Delaware street. Among the buildings they have erected are: New Leavenworth High School building; Presbyterian Church adjoining the high school; St. John's Hospital, Lutheran Church; the main building of the Great Western Stove Company, also their building at Oklahoma City; the library building at Fort Leavenworth, and many of the fine residences of the city, including those of E. D. Lyle, Hiram R. Wilson and Samuel Wilson. The Yoakum Brothers are live business men and have an extensive acquaintance throughout the county.

R. B. Yoakum was married October 28, 1909 to Alice M. Forrester of Leavenworth, a daughter of P. E. and Mary Forrester, both deceased. They had a daughter Florence, who died at the age of six years. They reside at 220 Second avenue.

Walter C. Yoakum was married June 26, 1911, to Wilma P. McCreary of Leavenworth, a daughter of M. B. and Clara McCreary. They have three children: Ruth Vickery, Wilma Caroline and Clara Elizabeth. The family reside at 932 South Broadway. Mr. Yoakum is a member of the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons.

The Yoakum family have been identified with the Presbyterian Church for a number of years, Washington C. Yoakum building the first Presbyterian Church here in 1858, which was a frame building on Seneca street. William Yoakum built the second church in 1870 on Delaware street, between Sixth and Seventh streets, and the two sons now in business built the third Presbyterian Church on Fourth and Walnut streets in 1907.

Miller B. McCreary, who for more than thirty-five years has been a leading business man of Leavenworth, was born in Wabash County, Indiana November 20, 1850, the son of Rev. Lewis and Martha Ann (Shackelford) McCreary. His father was born in Knox County, Ohio, in 1829, and was a pioneer Baptist minister for more than fifty years in Indiana, Illinois and Kansas. He came to Leavenworth in 1886 and died in 1893 and is buried at Mt. Muncie Cemetery. His wife died in 1865 and is buried in Rensselaer, Indiana.

Rev. and Mrs. McCreary had the following children: Miller B., of this sketch; Rev. Davis L., a Methodist minister at Kansas City, Missouri; William L., agent for Monon railroad at Rossville, Indiana, and Mrs. Gussie McCreary of Vancouver, Washington.

Miller B. McCreary was educated in the public schools of Indiana and came to Kansas in 1872, where he engaged in farming for a few years. He then learned the bridge building trade and was in Utah during the summers of 1874 and 1875. He came to Leavenworth in May, 1883 and in 1885 became an ice dealer, and for fourteen years secured natural ice from the Missouri River and surrounding lakes or ponds in this vicinity. When ice manufacturing machines came into use, he sold their products exclusively. When he first began business he had an office on the site of the Axa building. His plant is now located at Fifth and Oak streets. Twenty-two years ago Mr. McCreary began handling coal, and he now is a dealer for both ice and coal, and is considered a reliable and dependable business man.

In May, 1883, Mr. McCreary was married to Clarissa H. Mann, a daughter of Aaron and Mary E. Mann, the latter now eighty-seven years of age, and who resides with her daughter, Mrs. McCreary. Aaron Mann was formerly a shoe merchant of Kansas City, Missouri. He is now deceased.

Mr. and Mrs. McCreary have two children living: Miller A., an estimating engineer for the Hadley Refining Company of Danville, Illinois, and Wilma Pearl, the wife of Walter Yoakum of Leavenworth, Kansas, the latter being a contractor of the firm of Yoakum Brothers of this city. One daughter Ruth, deceased, was the wife of Lieut. Glenn E. Wood of Kansas City, Missouri. She died June 30, 1918 and is buried in Leavenworth. Her husband, Glenn E. Wood, was in the aviation service of the United States during the war and stationed in Michigan. He was one of the 1,500 volunteers to answer to Pershing's call for volunteers, and was commissioned to go overseas two days before the armistice was signed. He was mustered out in December, 1920. Mr. and Mrs. McCreary have five grandchildren: Ruth V. Yoakum, Wilma Caroline, Clarissa Elizabeth, Mary E. McCreary and Robert McCreary.

The McCreary family is recognized as one of the substantial ones of the city, well liked and highly respected.

William Henderson, deceased, was a well known pioneer of Alexandria Township, and a native of Virginia, born in 1834. His parents first settled in Missouri, but came to Leavenworth County before the Civil War and homesteaded land in Alexandria Township, two miles northwest of Jarbalo. The Henderson farm was one of the first settled in Alexandria Township, and a cabin is still standing that was used for a tenant house. The cabin, which was built by John Henderson, the father of William Henderson, is forty-eight by thirty-two feet, and was the best house in this vicinity at the time it was built. Hewed walnut logs forty-eight feet long were used in the construction. A hand made loom used by Mrs. John Henderson is in the old building. John Henderson was a member of the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons. He died at the age of seventy-five years and is buried at Fall Creek Cemetery.

William Henderson was married in Platte County, Missouri, in 1864 to Sarah Lutes, a native of Georgia, and the same year they moved to Kansas and located on the farm where Mrs. Henderson now lives. William Henderson owned 204 acres at the time of his death, and did general farming and stock raising and was very successful. He was a member of the school board of this district, his father having helped organize the district. William Henderson was one of the fifty-four men who enlisted in the State Militia from Alexandria Township during the Civil War.

Mr. and Mrs. William Henderson were the parents of three children: William, who lives on the home place; Sarah, the wife of Ralph Hutchinson of Boling, Kansas; and May, at home. The parents of Mrs. Henderson, Joseph and Sarah (Steele) Lutes, were of English descent. The Henderson children were all educated at Star school house in District No. 62.

William Henderson, Jr., together with his mother and sister, lives on the home place. He left home when thirty years of age and was a carpenter for fifteen years, returning home in 1919. He is now in charge of the farm. For the past three years he has made a specialty of raising pure bred Duroc Jersey hogs, and has about fifty head on hands. His sister is interested in Buff Orpington poultry and has a nice flock.

William M. Brune is the energetic proprietor of a large stock and grain farm near Jarbalo, Kansas, in Alexandria Township, and was born December 25, 1872 in Indiana, the son of Fred and Catherine (Meinken) Brune, the former deceased and the latter living on the home farm. Fred Brune was a stockman and farmed and owned 410 acres of land, formerly owned by C. P. Dewey of Chicago. Mrs. Brune was born in Germany November 21, 1843, and still leads an active life. She does the house work and last year made more than 1,000 pounds of butter, using the old fashioned dash churn.

William Brune attended the Star school in District No. 62 and has lived in Alexandria Township all of his life. He has many friends here. He farms the home place of 480 acres, besides farming 270 acres elsewhere. He has 100 acres in meadow, twenty acres in alfalfa, having four cuttings last year, and 280 acres in wheat. He has forty Shorthorn cattle on the place and seventy head of Poland-China hogs. The farm is mostly second bottom land and the remainder is upland. Mr. Brune has two tenant houses on the place and usually has three farm hands employed. The farm is situated one mile north and one and one-half miles west of Jarbalo, Kansas, and is one of the most excellent stock and grain farms in the township.

Mr. Brune is one of the substantial and progressive citizens of the county who has done his part in stock and grain production of this section.

John S. Campbell, deceased, was an enterprising and progressive farmer of Alexandria Township for many years. He was born in Warren County, Missouri, in 1833 and reared there, coming to Kansas in 1859 and settling in Leavenworth County, Alexandria Township. In 1860 he was married to Sarah F. Henderson, a native of Virginia, who was born October 16, 1843, and who now lives on the home farm two and one-half miles northwest of Jarbalo. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell moved to this farm in 1862. Mr. Campbell owned 278 acres at the time of his death, November 15, 1893, which had heavy timber on most of it at the time he purchased the place. He improved the land and did general farming. He was a very progressive citizen, and was a charter member of the first grange organized in this township. He also served on the school board a number of years.

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Campbell enjoyed the pioneer home life, the wide prairies and the winding Indian trails. The Indian reservation was one and one-half miles from their home, and the Delaware Indian women came to their home peddling baskets, shells and bead ornaments, carrying their papooses on their backs. Mrs. Campbell relates many interesting experiences of those days. She is still active, has good eyesight and does her own house work.

The Fall Creek Cemetery adjoins the Campbell farm. Jesse Henderson, a brother of Mrs. Campbell, was buried there in 1856, the first burial in this cemetery. It was first used as a private cemetery, but in 1885 was made a public burying ground.

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Campbell had the following children: Anna, the wife of William O. Bell, of Alexandria Township; Addie, who lives at home and was formerly a teacher of the county; Eugene, of Kansas City, Missouri, who married Viola Banner; James H., who lives at home and manages the home place, a carpenter by trade; and John T. Campbell, who for nine years has been in government service at Yellowstone Park and at present is a guide at Geyser Basin. John T. went to Dakota in 1912, and from there to Montana and the same year to Yellowstone Park with A. W. Miles, a nephew of General Miles. He worked as barnkeeper for five years, and, when automobiles took the place of horses, Mr. Campbell was made night watchman to look after the tourists, locating and registering them and overseeing the park in general. The trip through the park from north or west entrance takes four days, and from east entrance takes five days. There are about 400 buffalo in the tame herd.

Twenty-five of these are kept in the pasture or corral. Other animals in the park are elk, deer, antelope, bear, moose, mountain sheep, mountain lions, coyotes, and many fur bearing animals such as beaver, mink, fox and martin. Mr. Campbell spends from two to three months each winter season at his home in Alexandria Township, but he is very fond of the West and one of his favorite poems is, "Out Where the West Begins."

John N. Bollin, deceased, was a well-to-do and prominent farmer and stockman of Leavenworth County, Kansas, and a descendant from a well known pioneer family, was born in Kickapoo Township, December 29, 1862. He was a son of Jerome and Jacobine (Schulthies) Bollin, both natives of Germany, but who settled in Leavenworth County, Kansas in pioneer days. They reared one son and three daughters, two daughters now living: Mrs. Michael Malloy and Mrs. Joe Klasinski, of Leavenworth County.

John N. Bollin was a farmer all of his life. He owned 660 acres of land, 360 acres in Kickapoo Township. He specialized in the breeding of Poland-China hogs and was a successful exhibitor at county fairs. He was a very enterprising farmer, and made quite a success in his field of work. In politics, Mr. Bollin was a Democrat, and for four years was county commissioner, and he also served as township trustee of Kickapoo Township. He was a member of the Catholic Church, the Modern Woodmen of America, Knights and Ladies of Security, of the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association and the Knights of Columbus.

Mr. Bollin was twice married, his first wife being Clara Arron, who was born in Pennsylvania, the daughter of John and Mary Arron. Mrs. Clara Bollin died in 1903. To that union, ten children were born, seven now living, as follows: John J., of Kickapoo Township; Aloysius R., Frank J., Clara H., George A., Florence M., Walter J., all of Kickapoo Township.

In 1905, Mr. Bollin was married to Elizabeth Hoberg, a native of Kickapoo Township, Leavenworth County, a daughter of Frederick and Elizabeth (Litch) Hoberg, natives of Germany and Indiana, respectively. They came to Leavenworth County in the fifties, where Mr. Hoberg engaged in farming. Mrs. Elizabeth Bollin was educated in the district schools, and, in 1894, entered the Cushing Hospital at Leavenworth, Kansas, and became a nurse, which occupation she followed until her marriage in 1905. To Mr. Bollin's second wife was born one child, Mary J., who now lives at home. Mr. Bollin died February 10, 1918.

J. N. BOLLIN

Mrs. Bollin owns 200 acres, which she rents. In 1920, she erected a thoroughly modern, two story residence, with hot and cold water, and with Delco lighting system. She also built a barn and other necessary improvements. Mrs. Bollin is a member of the Eastern Star, her father having been a Mason. He was a prominent man in Kickapoo Township. Mrs. Bollin is a capable woman, and is well known throughout the county, where she has many friends. She is a member of the Baptist Church.

Martin L. Stigleman, a respected citizen of Alexandria Township for many years, is now proprietor of Variety Grove Farm, near McLouth, Kansas. He was born June 30, 1840, six miles northwest of Richmond, Indiana. He served in the Civil War, enlisting in Company K, Fifty-seventh Indiana Volunteer Infantry. He served in the war for two years, and on September 24, 1868, he and his wife started with a team of two year old mules hitched to a spring wagon for Kansas, reaching Springdale November 3, 1868, where they stopped.

Mr. Stigleman rented land here for a few years, and bought his first eighty acres about the year 1870 from the railroad company, paying $4.00 per acre. He then bought forty acres where his residence stands, and later purchased another forty acres and an additional eighty acres, making a total of 240 acres in section 2, township 10, range 20. All of the improvements were put on the place by Mr. Stigleman. He has a good residence, barn, seventy by forty-two feet; tool shed, thirty-six by forty feet for his farm implements; cribs and granaries. Mr. Stigleman has been an extensive stock raiser and feeder. He has handled the O. I. C. hogs for several years, and raised the Shire horses and Shorthorn cattle. The place is well watered, there being a fine well at the house and stock water in all the fields. The farm name is derived from a grove of trees on the farm of many varieties, which are not native here, one especially unusual tree that Mr. Stigleman has set out being the Balming Gilead.

Mr. Stigleman served as clerk of the school board for twenty years in his district. Jesse Hall, one of the editors of this volume, got his first and second schools when Mr. Stigleman was on the board.

Mr. Stigleman has made a success in life by hard work. He learned to write on a slab in a log school house in Indiana. He now writes a plain, legible hand, far better than the average person, though he is eighty-one years old. He remembers many interesting events of early days, and recalls the struggles he had to undergo. He lived here when he had to drive to Leavenworth, a distance of eighteen miles, for provisions, and when he hauled hay to Leavenworth for $2.00 per ton. Galvanized barb wire sold for fourteen cents per pound and corn for fourteen cents per bushel, and he had to pay twenty-five cents for weighing on the city scales. One hundred bushels of corn, after weighing four loads, as twenty-five bushels was a load at that time, netted only $13.00, not sufficient money to pay for a spool of barb wire. It was slow progress in those days with interest at twelve per cent, but Mr. Stigleman by his thrift and industry was able to overcome all obstacles.

June 8, 1868, Mr. Stigleman was married to Catherine Byers, who died July 19, 1869. He was married the second time January 25, 1875 to Mary Robinson, a native of Canada, and daughter of Mrs. Lizzie Robinson, a widow who lived at Hoge Station. Mr. and Mrs. Stigleman have had six children: Elizabeth, Viola and Mabel, all deceased; Bertie, the wife of Daniel Jeffries of Tonganoxie Township, has five children, as follows: Ray, Lottie, Homer, Elsie and Lucille; and John, who farms the home place, and is a progressive stockman and farmer, also clerk of the school board of his district. He raises hogs, cattle, horses and mules. He is a member of the Farmers' Union at Brown school house. Mr. and Mrs. Stigleman's daughter Mabel, who is deceased, married Henry Murr. They had two children: William and Ida.

Frank Uhlrich, a progressive and enterprising farmer of Alexandria Township, proprietor of Summit Home Farm, was born in Stranger Township October 21, 1876, the son of Theobald and Mary Magdalene (Roth) Uhlrich. Mr. and Mrs. Theobald Uhlrich were married in Germany and came to America, first settling in Missouri and later moving to Pottawatomie County, Kansas, where they lived a few years, and finally locating in Leavenworth County on the farm now owned by Frank Uhlrich, formerly known as the McCoy farm, and which contained 160 acres. Theobald Uhlrich later added sixty acres. He was a prosperous farmer and stockman and died in April, 1899 at the age of sixty-five years. His wife died June 16, 1920 at the age of seventy-nine years. Both are buried at St. Thomas Church in Springdale, Kansas.

Mr. and Mrs. Theobald Uhlrich were the parents of the following children: Anthony and John, of Alexandria Township; Frank, of this sketch; and Leo, of Washington County, Kansas.

Frank Uhlrich attended the school of District No. 76 and helped his father on the farm until the latter's death, when he took charge of the place and continues farming and stock raising. The farm is well improved and has a splendid spring. A creek also runs through the farm.

Mr. Uhlrich was married August 6, 1907 to Lena Boillat of Alexandria Township, a daughter of August and Mary (Meyer) Boillet. The former died in 1906 and is buried at Friends Church Cemetery and the latter lives with her children.

Mr. and Mrs. Uhlrich have five children: Joseph John, Nellie Mary, Rose Loretta, Bernard Francis and Lawrence Leo. The Uhlrich family are well known in the township and are highly regarded among their many friends and acquaintances.

Fred Burre is a leading and scientific horticulturist of High Prairie Township, and proprietor of Burre Fruit Farm of sixty-nine acres. He is a native of this township, born January 12, 1875, the son of John and Kate Burre, who were both natives of Switzerland. John Burre came to America in 1870 and settled in Ohio, where he lived for one year, when he came to Leavenworth County. His wife came here in 1872. She died in 1912 and he died in 1917. Both are buried in Mt. Muncie Cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. John Burre had three children: Fred, the subject of this sketch; Mrs. G. Rozendal, the proprietor of the green house on Washington and Ohio avenue; Mrs. J. H. Mayer, who runs a small fruit farm and garden on the home place west of Leavenworth.

Fred Burre received his education in the public schools of Leavenworth, and also attended the commercial school there. He was formerly in the truck business, but since 1916 has specialized in the growing of apples, but also raises other fruits and berries. Mr. Burre is ably assisted in operating the farm by his two sons, John and Fred, Jr. They have twenty-four acres of bearing age apple trees, thirty-three acres of one, two and three year old trees; four acres of strawberries among the young trees. Mr. Burre has sprayed his trees for the past eight years, and follows the plan outlined by the State Agricultural College, which school John Burre attended, taking special training in this line of work.

Mr. Burre had the largest crop of apples he ever raised last year, his principal fruits being Jonathan, Winesaps, Black Twigs, Delicious and Grimes Golden. He packs his fruit scientifically, and gets the highest price on the market. The home people patronize his orchard when ordering first class fruit. The crop of 1920 amounted to more than $6,000.00, which shows the success Mr. Burre has made of his business.

Mr. Burre has a high pressure sprayer which he uses. He buys his berry boxes, with other growers, in car lots. His apples are sold under the name of "Sunflower Brand." Mr. Burre has a storehouse of concrete, which holds about one and one-half car loads.

Mr. Burre has been treasurer of the Leavenworth Fruit and Truck Growers' Association since its organization in 1914; has been a member of the Farm Bureau since its organization in 1901 and is also a member of the Lutheran Church at Leavenworth.

March 7, 1901, Mr. Burre was married to Ida Maase of High Prairie Township. She is a native of Germany, but came to America with her parents when she was one year of age. Her father and mother, Anton and Bertha Maase, are both deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Burre have seven children, all at home: John and Fred, Jr., who assist their father; Helen, Anton, Louis, Edward and Arthur. Mr. Burre has recently erected a colonial style, modern, $10,000 home.

The family are splendid citizens of the township, and have many friends.

Dennis A. Hassett, a well known farmer, is a native of Alexandria Township, and a descendant of an early settler here. He was born September 1, 1860, the son of David and Margaret (Dwyer) Hassett. His father was a native of County Cork, Ireland, and his mother came from County Kerry, Ireland. They were married in New York about the year 1855, and came to Galena, Illinois, in 1856, and in 1859 they came to Leavenworth, Kansas. David Hassett worked in Leavenworth for a while and then bought eighty acres of land, now part of the home place of Dennis A. Hassett, and lived there until his death, March 25, 1884, and his wife died in April, 1904. Both are buried at St. Thomas Cemetery in Springdale, Kansas.

Mr. and Mrs. David Hassett were the parents of the following children: David, of Oak Mills, Missouri; Mollie, who died at the age of eight years; Dennis, the subject of this sketch; Frank, who died in January, 1918, at the age of fifty-three years, and who left a widow, Mary J. (Moses) Hassett, who lives in Alexandria Township; James, who is a farmer near Springdale; Nellie, the wife of John Milet, who is a railroad man in St. Joseph, Missouri; and Eliza, who died in infancy.

Dennis A. Hassett was educated in the Kerr school district, and has been engaged in farming since early manhood, and has lived on his present farm all of his life. He bought the home place of eighty acres in 1905 and has since bought an additional eighty acres. All of the improvements were put on the farm by him and his father. He has a wind mill that pumps water one-fourth of a mile to tanks in his feed lot and his barn. This wind mill has been in service for twenty-two years. Mr. Hassett does general farming, and stock raising and is meeting with success. The residence is seven and one-half miles from McLouth and one and three-fourths miles from Springdale, and he receives his mail on Route Three out of McLouth. Mr. Hassett is a member of the St. Thomas Catholic Church and belongs to the Holy Name Society at Springdale, where Father Healy conducts services.

Dennis A. Hassett was married in 1901 to Alice Milet, a daughter of James and Johanna (Orchard) Milet, both of whom are deceased. James Milet and his wife came to Kansas from Ireland, he being a native of Kilkenny and she of County Wexford. They were married in Ireland in 1863 and then came to Kansas and purchased a five acre tract of land at Fairmont, and, while there, Mr. Milet engaged in railroad work. John W. Wright, a native of Roanoke County, Virginia, was born July 6, 1858, the son of E. A. Wright, who was accidentally killed in Virginia in 1876 by a run-away horse. He was a Union soldier during the Civil War, enlisting from Virginia. He was a miller by trade and was furloughed home to work for the government and, while there, was captured by the Confederates, but escaped shortly after and joined the Melton's Reserves just prior to the close of the war. Mr. Wright came to Kansas in 1886 and died here about November, 1900 and is buried at White Church in High Prairie Township.

John W. Wright came to Leavenworth June 18, 1883 from Virginia and for a number of years worked by the day. About thirty years ago, he began contracting and building, doing work mostly for the government, in which work he is still actively engaged. He built the last one-half of the Fort Logan H. Roots Post in Arkansas in 1906 and has done a large amount of work at Fort Leavenworth. He has also built a number of buildings in this city, including the Elks Building, the Crancer hardware buildings, the Hesse sales room building and many others. Among the buildings he constructed at Fort Leavenworth are the artillery stables, quartermaster stables, employes quarters, engineers' storage shed, and the General Funston residence.

Mr. Wright was elected commissioner of streets and public improvements at the April election 1919 and made an excellent official. Substantial improvements have been made under his direction, and a good bridge of concrete and stone at Twentieth and Dakota streets is now under construction. Mr. Wright is not in favor of wasting money on temporary repairs, but believes that public improvements should always be permanently built. Mr. Wright has just overseen the paving of Delaware, Fourth avenue and North Esplanade with asphalt concrete, and these streets are now evidences of the kind of work in which he believes. He has just completed the remodeling of the offices in the city hall with no cost to the city except the actual labor and material. Mr. Wright superintended this job without charge, and these offices are now in fine shape and excellent condition. He has done his utmost in every way to get full value for all public money spent.

In 1878, Mr. Wright was married to Alice M. Hall, a native of Roanoke County, a daughter of William and Eliza Hall. Mr. and Mrs Wright have three sons: Frank W., who married Clara Powell of Leavenworth; Luther M., who married Minnie Weavis of Tennessee, and Charles R., who married

Pearl Roberson of Leavenworth. All of the sons are with their father in the contracting business.

A. A. Unmessig, a substantial farmer and stock man of High Prairie Township, and proprietor of Clover Ridge Stock Farm, was born in Platte County, Missouri, in 1878, the son of R. A. and Rosalie (Myers) Unmessig; the former died in Platte County in October, 1917, at the age of seventy-two years. For eight years R. A. Unmessig lived in High Prairie Township. His wife now lives at Weston, Missouri and is sixty-eight years of age.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Unmessig had the following children: Mrs. Anna L. Woods of near Weston, Missouri; Mrs. Elizabeth Fulk of Beverly, Missouri; Mrs. Dollie Spinner of Weston, Missouri; W. H., of High Prairie Township; Mary Unmessig of Weston, Missouri; Minnie Unmessig of Weston, Missouri; Mrs. Dora Brill of Weston, Missouri, and A. A., of this sketch.

A. A. Unmessig spent his boyhood on his father's farm in Platte County, Missouri, and was educated in this county, first coming to Leavenworth County, Kansas in 1901 with his father. In 1909 he went to Texas and engaged in raising potatoes at Simonton. He and his brother W. H. Unmessig bought land at this place, which they sold when they returned to Leavenworth in 1918, and he bought his present farm of O. G. Ballard. This farm is four and one-half miles southwest of Leavenworth and consists of 195 acres. The farm has good improvements. The barn is ninety-eight by forty-two by twenty-four feet to the eaves and was used by Mr. Ballard for a tobacco barn, for which purpose it was built. The residence is a good two-story building, and the other improvements consist of different buildings necessary for farm use. The land is well watered. Mr. Unmessig farms the entire place, using a tractor, with which he does most of his plowing. He has fifty-five acres of wheat, forty acres in corn, twenty-five acres in oats, six acres of alfalfa and sixteen acres of clover. A. F. Phelps worked for the Clark Queensware Company a short time, and was then with the Leavenworth National Bank, as its first teller. He later entered the wholesale commission business, and was succeeded by Phelps Bros., which is now conducted by Harry M. Phelps. A. F. Phelps died in 1911, and his wife, who was born in 1863, died in 1921. Both are buried at Mt. Muncie Cemetery. Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Phelps were the parents of two children: Mrs. E. J. Creighton of Leavenworth, and E. Rice Phelps, the subject of this sketch.

E. Rice Phelps was educated in the grade and high schools of this city, and, after completing his education, entered the wholesale commission business in Texas, remaining there for six years, when he returned to Leavenworth and accepted employment as clerk in the Wulfekuhler State Bank, August, 1912. Mr. Phelps is an energetic young man of unusual attainments, and, in addition to his many duties at the bank, takes an active interest in civic affairs, always alert and boosting every move made for the benefit of the city and county. He is a member of the Rotary Club, and is the president for 1920 and 1921. He is a Knights Templar and Shriner.

February 4, 1913, Mr. Phelps was married to Thekla Wulfekuhler, a daughter of Otto H. and Marie T. Wulfekuhler. She is a native of Leavenworth, and a graduate of the Leavenworth High School and the University of Wisconsin. Mr. and Mrs. Phelps have two children: Edwin Rice, Jr., and Donald Otto.

Jasper S. Rice, a pioneer of this city, was grandfather of E. Rice Phelps. He came to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas in 1853 from Vermont. Ethan Allen, the famous Revolutionary soldier was a great uncle of Mr. Phelps. Jasper Rice came to Fort Leavenworth in government service and was in charge of the Pony Express from Omaha to Salt Lake City. He and Colonel William F. Cody operated this line until the Union Pacific Railroad was built, and then Mr. Rice and Fred Harvey started the Harvey eating houses, now famous all over the United States. The first one was started at Wallace, Kansas on the Union Pacific road, and the firm dissolved, Harvey going with the Santa Fe, and Rice, in 1862 began operating the Planters Hotel, and had the honor of having at one time, Abraham Lincoln as a guest in the hotel.

The Wulfekuhler State Bank was organized in 1901 with the following officers: H. W. Wulfekuhler, president; A. F. Wulfekuhler, vice-president; Otto Wulfekuhler, cashier; and L. H. Rutherford, L. A. Miller and Fred A. Walter, assistant cashiers. The present capital stock is $150,000, surplus funds $35,000, and deposits $1,500,000.00. The bank is a conservatively conducted banking institution and the officers and directors are all substantial men, whose integrity and capabilities are well known to the Leavenworth public.

The bank's deposits of $213,000 six months after its organization to more than $1,500,000.00 at the present time, show conclusively that the policy of mutual helpfulness which the bank practices has been a paying one.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cheatwood were the parents of the following children: Mrs. Rhoda Aley; William; Irving; James and Joel, who are twins; Wesley; Thomas, who has not been heard from since he volunteered in the Civil War in Indiana; Jefferson; Elizabeth; Mary; Henry; Emily and Nancy. James and Joel Cheatwood are the only ones living of the thirteen children.

Joel Cheatwood located in Kansas in 1857, and in 1865 bought 103 acres of land in Delaware Township, just north of Fairmont, from George Stagers, for $2,200.00, which land he still owns. Since then he has added 137 acres, making a total of 240 acres. Mr. Cheatwood improved the place and did general farming and stock raising, and has made a success in life by hard work. Although he is eighty-nine years of age, he is able to read without glasses fairly well, and feels fine. He moved to Fairmont in 1901, buying a home where he now lives. Mr. Cheatwood remembers many interesting incidents of pioneer days, and when he came to Kansas the Delaware Indians were on reservations here, and he says they were quite friendly. Mr. Cheatwood says that when he was eighteen years of age, he worked for twenty-five cents per day, and in a brick yard, working hard with long hours. James Cheatwood located in Kansas in 1856, and he and his brother have always lived near each other. They are as well known as any early settlers here, and have many friends. They are so similar in appearance that, when they are dressed alike, even their own acquaintances and friends can scarcely distinguish them apart.

On January 20, 1861, Joel Cheatwood married Rowena Barker, a native of Monroe County, Illinois, born December 8, 1841. In 1847 her parents moved to Platte County, Missouri. Her father and mother were Abner and Nancy (Gilman) Barker; her mother died in Illinois and her father married the second time to Elizabeth Steigers, who died in Leavenworth County, Kansas. Her father died in Platte County, Missouri. Mrs. Cheatwood is the only one living of seven children, and she is active and enjoys life for her age. The other children of Mr. and Mrs. Barker were Milan, who died at the age of seventy-four; Lysander, who died in Kansas City, Missouri, when seventy-one years of age; Philander S.; Rhoda; Newton and Nancy. Taylor Barker, a half brother of Mrs. Cheatwood, lives at Fairmont, Kansas.

Mr. and Mrs. Cheatwood have seven children: James M., of Fairmont; Ella E., the wife of Dr. Elijah Jones, of Phoenix, Arizona; Sarah B. Rice, deceased; Dora, the widow of Frank Selder, who makes her home with her parents; Cora, the wife of Louis Neudeck, of Kansas City, Missouri; Inez V., the wife of John Rader, of Platte City, Missouri.

Mr. and Mrs. Cheatwood have the following grandchildren: Leslie E. Selder of Kansas City, Missouri; Mrs. Rowena Ruth of Litteral, Missouri; Mrs. Gertrude Viola Thorson; Frank Arthur Thorson; Stillio Frederick Thorson; Mrs. Nina Cheatwood Myers of Fairmont; Elijah J. Jones; Irene Moore; Clarence A. Neudeck of Kansas City, Missouri; and Mrs. Mamie Burgess of Kansas City, Missouri. Mr. and Mrs. Cheatwood have four great grandchildren: Evalyn and Robert Jones; Mildred and Joie V. Burgess.

Mrs. Cheatwood has an interesting picture, showing five generations, also a photograph of two pairs of twins—the Cheatwood brothers, and the two daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Cheatwood—Dora and Cora.

Mr. and Mrs. Cheatwood celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary January 20, 1921. They have lived long and useful lives and are highly honored citizens of this township.

Martin Ehart, a capable and successful grocer located at 433 North Tenth Street, Leavenworth, is a native of Kuhr Hessen, Germany. He was born February 28, 1854, the son of Henry and Christine (Damm) Ehart, a sketch of whom appears in this volume with Adam Ehart's sketch.

Martin Ehart remained in his native land and attended the schools of Kuhr Hessen, Germany, until 1871, when he joined his elder brothers in London, England. While there he was employed in a bakery shop. In 1872, in company with his brothers, he left London, England, and established his residence at Leavenworth, Kansas.

Mr. Ehart was first employed in a bakery by Peter Short, at the corner of Fourth and Miami streets. From the years 1873 to 1875 he was employed as a clerk in his brother, Christ Ehart's, store. April 15, 1876, he went to the Black Hills, remaining for a short time, and upon his return to Leavenworth was engaged in teaming. November 25, 1880, Mr. Ehart opened up his first grocery business, located at 433 North Tenth Street, in a two-story building. In this building he conducted his business until in 1890 it was replaced by a two-story brick building, costing $3,500 at that time. For thirty years Mr. Ehart has conducted a clean, up-to-date grocery business, winning the patronage of a growing trade through his handling of honest, high class goods.

Martin Ehart and Mary Goergen were married December 26, 1875. She was born July 9, 1860, and died November 7, 1913, in Leavenworth, Kansas. They had two children, as follows: Henry, born June 21, 1878, residing at Leavenworth, and Mary, born September 13, 1879, living at Clay Center, Kansas.

Martin Ehart is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Turners. He is a member of St. John's Church and independent in his politics. Mr. Ehart is a public spirited and progressive citizen. He served six years, from 1902 to 1908, as councilman of Leavenworth, Kansas.

Adam Ehart, a native of Germany and a retired farmer and business man, is one of the substantial pioneer citizens of Leavenworth. Adam Ehart was born in Kuhr Hessen, Germany, September 28, 1848, the son of Henry and Christina (Damm) Ehart, both natives of Kuhr Hessen, Germany. The former was born September 27, 1817, and the latter October 18, 1815. They were farmers and shepherds in their native land.

Henry Ehart spent all but the last few years in his native land. His wife, Christina (Damm) Ehart, died at Kuhr Hessen, Germany, in 1883, and after her death Henry Ehart joined his children at Leavenworth, Kansas. He passed away April 18, 1888.

Henry and Christina Ehart were married in Kuhr Hessen, Germany, in 1835 and fourteen children were born to them, as follows: Elsie, wife of John Yhrig, born September 22, 1836, lives at Springfield, Ohio; Christopher, born June 15, 1838, died February 10, 1910; Henry, born April 15, 1841, died in Leavenworth County, Kansas; Elizabeth, died in infancy; Mary, Mrs. John Werner, was born January 17, 1843, died May 8, 1919; John Henry, born January 3, 1845, died November 18, 1895; Anna Elizabeth, wife of William Wendel, born October 9, 1847, resides at Milwood, Leavenworth County, Kansas; Adam, the subject of this sketch; Christina, born in 1850, died in infancy; Fred, born 1852, died in infancy; Martin, born February 28, 1854; Martha, wife of Dr. Gortney, born April 12, 1856, died 1908; infant, deceased; and Anna Catherine, wife of Herman Kneckler, born October 20, 1858, resides in Leavenworth, Kansas.

Adam Ehart spent his early childhood and manhood years in Kuhr Hessen, Germany. He attended the schools of his native land. On September 29, 1866, he went to London, England, and he remained there for six years, working in the Wolgmuth Sugar Factory until 1872, when he with his brother, Martin D., and sister, Martha, embarked for the United States and located in Leavenworth County, Kansas. Adam Ehart rented 160 acres of land near Milwood, Kansas, and farmed this until March 10, 1876, when he came to Leavenworth and opened up a grocery business at the corner of Seventh and Kiowa streets. This business he successfully conducted for many years, keeping abreast of the times and handling the very best of groceries. March 10, 1901, Adam Ehart disposed of his grocery business and purchased 510 acres of land in Leavenworth County. He farmed this land and made it his home until May 14, 1918, when the land was divided among his children and he retired to spend his remaining days at Leavenworth.

In London, England, October 29, 1870, Adam Ehart married Anna Elizabeth Orth. She is a native of Kuhr Hessen, Germany, where she was born January 24, 1850. William J. Domann, a successful farmer and stockman of Kickapoo Township, and owner of 160 acres of land four miles northwest of Leavenworth, was born in Jefferson County, Kansas, March 20, 1868, the son of William and Charlotte (Noll) Domann, who were the parents of twelve children, all of whom live in Jefferson County, except William J. Domann and a brother who is a priest. All of the children are living—ten boys and two girls. The father was born in Westphalia, Germany, November, 1843, and came to America when about eighteen or nineteen years of age, and settled in Kansas, where he worked as a farm hand cutting corn for $7.00 per month. He became homesick to go back to Europe, but in those days never got enough money saved to make the trip, so remained here. He also worked for the August Wulfekuhler Wholesale Grocery Company, feeding their mules for them and driving a delivery wagon. He then worked at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, for the government, freighting to western Colorado and to the Black Hills. During the Civil War he drove an ambulance and bomb shell wagon. After the war he married and moved to the old Scott farm in Jefferson County, and later bought eighty acres of land, which is now the old homestead. He now owns 2,000 acres, all choice farms in Jefferson County. He is now living a retired and pleasant life. He is a shareholder of several banks at the following towns in Kansas: Winchester, Nortonville, Potter and Salina. He and his wife, who was born in Hessen, Germany, in 1849 and came to this country when a child, are both members of the Catholic Church, and they, together with their sons, contributed $15,000 to the church building.

William J. Domann was reared on his father's farm and attended school, but was handicapped in getting an education by having to work hard. He began for himself when 21 years of age and worked for his father for one year for $500.00, board, room and clothes. The second year his father gave him a team and all necessary implements with which to farm, and he farmed the home place. His proceeds for two cars of corn that year were two twenty dollar gold pieces, corn having sold at that time for thirteen cents per bushel. This was the first gold he ever owned, and he carried one twenty in each pocket and the other in his other pocket. The same spring he sold the rest of his corn for sixty cents per bushel. He made good from the start and bought his first farm near Nortonville, Kansas, consisting of 160 acres, which he improved, building new fences, new barn and remodeling the house. He lived there for ten years, until 1900, when he sold out and bought his present farm of 160 acres, for which he paid $10,000. He built and stuccoed the house on this place, erected a barn, and refenced the farm and made other nice improvements. The place was run down at the time he purchased it, but it now presents a fine appearance due to the energy and industry displayed by Mr. Domann.

Mr. Domann was married August 30, 1892, to Frances Didde, who was born in Jefferson County, Kansas, November 27, 1871, the daughter of Joseph and Gertrude (Riepenkroger) Didde, natives of Germany, and who are now deceased.

Mr. and Mrs. Domann have had twelve children, as follows: William J., a graduate of Leavenworth High School, and who is a clerk in the postoffice at Fort Leavenworth; Agnes, a graduate of the high school at Leavenworth, and who is a teacher in Salt Creek Valley; Angela, a graduate of the high school, who lives at home; Frances, a graduate of the high school, and who now lives at home, but last year did stenographic work at the Army Service School; Aloysius, a student in St. Benedict College at Atchison, Kansas; Clara and Margaret, students in high school; Edith, Marie, Gertrude, Scholastica and Anthony, all at home with their parents.

Mr. Domann votes the Independent ticket. He is now a member of the school board of district number three; member of the Catholic Church, and of the Moose Lodge, and is a shareholder in the State Savings Bank at Leavenworth, of which bank he was a director for seven years. He and his family are substantial citizens of the township.

Thirty acres of this piece of ground is productive. Mr. Mottin does general farming and is energetic and industrious.

Mr. Mottin has been married twice, the first time in 1901 to Minnie Cotter. She died in May, 1903, and Mr. Mottin was married the second time October 22, 1912, to Mamie Vogler, who was born in Leavenworth, Kansas. No children were born to either union.

George Schweizer, deceased, was a well to do and leading farmer of Kickapoo Township for many years. He was born April 26, 1840, in Wurtemberg, Germany, and came to the United States with his parents, Melchior and Anna Marie Schweizer, in 1852. George Schweizer was the only child reared out of sixteen children born to his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Melchior Schweizer first went to Canada and later to Weston, Missouri, and in 1853 went to Leavenworth, Kansas, where Mr. Schweizer conducted the first bakery in that town. In those days there were no horses with which to deliver and Mr. Schweizer was forced to carry the bread around town in baskets. Melchior Schweizer bought a farm and in 1861 with his family moved to Kickapoo Township and improved this farm.

George Schweizer was reared and lived in this township until he died, July 12, 1911. He owned eighty acres of improved land and did general farming and stock raising, always keeping a good grade of stock. In 1860 George Schweizer with his neighbors moved an old house from Kickapoo, Kansas, with oxen to the site of the present home. An addition was put on and it made nine rooms. This old house was burned in 1903. His father was the first farmer in this township to sow wheat. His neighbors laughed at him for planting wheat here, but this same ground has been producing wheat since 1869. Mr. Schweizer was treasurer of school district number five for a number of years. In politics he was a Democrat; was a member of the Lutheran Church and of the Knights of Pythias Lodge.

in 1849 and came to Ohio, where John Schott engaged in blacksmithing until 1853, when he came to Leavenworth, Kansas. He returned in 1855 and brought his family to Kansas. They came by boat up the Missouri River, a long and tedious trip, taking them fifteen days to come from St. Louis to Leavenworth. The boat would get stuck on a sand barge and then all the passengers would have to get out and walk. John Schott became a politician after he came to Leavenworth, and was the first city marshal and later was United States marshal. While he was a policeman Mayor Anthony was the mayor of Leavenworth. Mr. Schott was born May 2, 1836, and died in 1894, and his wife, who was born April 7, 1834, died in 1889.

To George Schweizer and wife were born the following children, fifteen growing to maturity: Anna M., deceased; Karl F., of Arizona; Katherine, the wife of William LaCaille, of Kickapoo Township, a sketch of whom appears in this volume; Laura, who is deceased; Melchior, of Los Angeles, California; George, of Kansas City, Missouri; Ernest A., who lives at home and farms the home place; Fred A., who is employed by the government at Camp Funston; Andrew, who is dead; Charles Lawrence, of Nebraska, who is employed as bridge worker on the Missouri Pacific Railroad; Francis M., deceased; Lillian, the wife of H. F. Turner, and who is deceased; David J., of Nebraska, who works with a bridge gang for the Missouri Pacific Railroad; William W., of Los Angeles, California; and Lucien B., of Kickapoo Township.

Charles Lawrence Schweizer was inducted into service in the late war and went from Fort Leavenworth to Camp Funston, where he was stationed for two years in the infantry, and was discharged from there. He was one of the first of twelve men to leave Leavenworth County, and when they were asked as to their willingness to serve their country, out of the twelve, Charles Schweizer was the only one that stated he was willing to fight for his country, and he was then and there made color sergeant and carried the flag out of the county to Camp Funston.

David J. Schweizer enlisted and got as far as Dover, England, when the armistice was signed. He was in the aerial service.

William W. Schweizer enlisted at Kansas City, Missouri, and was in the 129th Field Artillery at Fort Sill, Oklahoma.

Mrs. Schweizer owns the home place of eighty acres. She is a member of the Baptist Church of Kickapoo and is an honored resident of this township.

I. W. Robinson, a progressive farmer of Easton Township, and member of a pioneer family of this section, was born on his present farm September 10, 1862, the son of Jonathan J. and Susan (Mott) Robinson, and the youngest of five children, all of whom are dead, except I. W. Robinson and Charles A. Robinson, of Denver, Colorado.

Jonathan J. Robinson was born in 1806 in Vermont. He was married twice, the first time to Miss Kieth of Indiana. They were the parents of six children, all deceased. His second wife was also a native of Indiana. Jonathan J. Robinson was a farmer and came to Leavenworth, Kansas in 1856, and homesteaded a farm, on which he built a log cabin. When he came to this county there was a printing press setting under a tree at Leavenworth. Jonathan Robinson used oxen to break and cultivate his ground. He made long trips to market with his produce. He died in 1868 at the age of sixty-two years, and his wife died in 1896 when seventy-two years old.

I. W. Robinson was reared on his present farm, and was educated in District Number Eleven School. He bought this farm after the death of his mother, and has made necessary improvements on the place. He is a breeder of sheep, and is also interested in advanced agriculture from every standpoint, having some very good ideas on the subject of farming and breeding.

He and his wife were born, reared and died in Germany.

In 1868, he came to the United States and first settled in Columbia County, Ohio, where he worked as a farm hand until January, 1873, when he came to Leavenworth County, Kansas, and bought his present farm. This place was in brush at that time, but Mr. Heim has made extensive improvements, and now has a modern, up-to-date farm. At that time, razor back hogs were in prominence in this section, and the farmers drove their hogs to St. Joseph to the market, but Mr. Heim says that the hogs of today could not walk four miles without dying. He also says that the railroads have done more for the country towards modernizing the farms than the people have done. Mr. Heim now owns 229 acres of valuable land. He owes his success to his hard work. He is one of the pioneers who has seen the crude implements used by the early farmers replaced by modern machinery, such as tractors, etc.

Mr. Heim is an independent voter in politics and is a member of the Lutheran Church. Mr. Heim helped organize St. John's Lutheran Church and donated the site of one acre for the building which is located on the north eighty acres of Mr. Heim's farm.

He bought the newspaper and printing plant in 1915 from O. M. Osborn, and Mr. Stafford has been editor and publisher since that time. This paper was founded in 1908 by Mr. Stafford and Mr. O. J. Potter, president of the State Savings Bank of Leavenworth, Kansas. The paper was conducted by different individuals until Mr. Stafford took charge in 1915. It is a flourishing paper with a good circulation.

He selected the present site of Linwood, Kansas, as the spot for his fruit farm, but the Indians who owned the land would not sell, so he had to purchase land near by. He purchased fifty-six acres, one-half mile west of the present town of Linwood and which is now his home. Unable to realize his dream of a fruit farm, Mr. Tudhope went on to Lawrence, Kansas, where he was employed on the Union Pacific Railroad, having charge of the repairs of the tracks as road master between Junction City and Kansas City.

In 1893, Mr. Tudhope left his railroad work and engaged in farming in Leavenworth County. He owned at one time over 700 acres of land. He has sold a part of it, retaining the original tract of fifty-six acres purchased in 1867 and now owns 420 acres of land.

John Tudhope has been twice married, the first time July 24, 1854, to Mary Williamson, a native of Pennsylvania, and a descendant of the original Quakers who settled in Pennsylvania with William Penn. She died April 16, 1901, age seventy-one years. The following children were born to this union: Isaac A., deceased; Viola, married Frank Duncan, deceased; Sarah Esther, the wife of Hugh Perry, who lives on her father's home place and she has two sons, John, married and has two sons, and W. T. Perry, principal of the school at Linwood, Kansas; Mary, the wife of D. C. Harbaugh, Topeka, Kansas; John, Marysville, Kansas; and James, a farmer and stockman on his father's land in Sherman Township. John Tudhope was married the second time in 1902 to Sarah Elizabeth (Meyers) Junk. No children have been born to this union.

Mr. Tudhope celebrated his eighty-eighth birthday April 11, 1921, and thirty-seven members of his family were present. They celebrated on Monday, April 11, 1921, and at this time a photographer from Lawrence, Kansas, came and took many views of the family reunion. A few friends and neighbors came to help in the celebration. Mr. Tudhope has ten grandchildren and sixteen great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild. In the home where he resides are represented five generations of the family.

In front of Mr. Tudhope's home is a row of magnificent evergreen trees, which Mr. Tudhope planted many years ago. He was inspecting the railroad ties near the Missouri river and he gathered some little cedar trees, placed them in his overcoat pocket, and upon his arrival home he planted them in his front yard and they have repaid him for his thoughtfulness by their beauty and usefulness.

The first presidential vote that Mr. Tudhope cast was for John C. Fremont and his first vote was for S. P. Chase for governor of Ohio. Mr. Tudhope is a staunch republican. He has served on the Linwood school board for twenty-nine years and has always taken an active interest in the education of the young.

This tavern was a familiar sight to the early horse dealers who were driving their stock to the South, and its genial hospitality was enjoyed by many a man in this business. Edward Martin remained in Kentucky until 1870, when he came to Stranger, Kansas. Upon his arrival in Sherman Township in the month of January, he made his residence in an old Indian cabin. He started his farming operations in the spring by renting land and continued farming rented land for many years. He later purchased 320 acres of land which he improved extensively and farmed until 1896, when he moved to the Kaw Valley at Linwood, Kansas, and engaged in potato raising. He remained on this farm of 200 acres in section 21 in Sherman Township until his death, in November, 1902. He was sixty-three years of age at the time of his death.

Edward Martin was twice married, the first time to Rebecca Albright, a native of the Cumberland Mountains of Kentucky. To this union four children were born, as follows: Jane, Mrs. George Dellitt, deceased; Daniel, deceased; George, died at the age of forty years at Bonner Springs, Kansas; and John, of Linwood, Kansas. W., the subject of this sketch; Augusta, deceased; Richard, deceased, and Edward, superintendent of the paint department of the Eastern division for the Union Pacific Railroad.

The Linwood State Bank, of Linwood, Kansas, was organized January 29, 1903, with a capital of $5,000. M. R. Howard, the first cashier of the bank, was instrumental in establishing the bank. The president of the bank was C. C. Burnett. In 1906 the banking business was purchased by A. J. Poor, with R. L. Biggert as cashier. They in turn sold the bank of Willis K. Folks in 1909. In 1912 Walter E. Head, of St. Joseph, Missouri, purchased the bank and he was assisted by J. E. Blevins as cashier. A year later, in 1913, T. W. Martin, the present cashier of the Linwood State Bank, purchased the controlling interest and has since continued as its able and successful cashier.

The original site of the bank was a little east of the present location and during the flood of 1903 the safe was submerged in sixteen feet of mud and water; six feet of this was mud. After a great deal of difficulty the safe was fished out of its muddy place and deposited in an old smoke house, fourteen feet square. Later it was moved into an unoccupied room of the Linwood Lumber Company's building and in 1907 was moved to its present location.

The bank has been robbed twice in its history. The first time during the time that R. L. Biggert was cashier. The safe was blown and $1,800 was taken. The second robbery occurred July 21, 1916, while T. W. Martin was cashier. He with his son, Murray Martin, were alone in the bank, shortly after lunch. It was about one thirty in the afternoon. Three men came in and locked Mr. Martin and his son in the vault while they ransacked every place for money. They found $1,300 and made their escape. Two of these men were apprehended at Kansas City, Missouri, where they were convicted and sent to the State Penitentiary. One of these men escaped from the prison in March, 1921.

Mr. Short was born in Atchison, Kansas, September 17, 1859, the son of Oliver F. and Frances (Catlin) Short. Oliver F. Short was a native of Virginia, and Frances (Catlin) of Illinois. They were married in 1857 in Springfield, Illinois, and came to Atchison, Kansas, where Mr. Short was employed as a government surveyor.

In the days before the Civil War the work of a surveyor was full of many hardships and dangers. Not alone the wildness of an unsurveyed land but the lurking Indian, who was jealous of his rights, had the early pioneers to contend with. Oliver Short knew all of these things and experienced the many hardships of his work. He surveyed all over the northern and western Kansas and also went into Indian Territory. In 1874 Oliver Short and his two sons, H. C. and Truman, in the company of nineteen other men were surveying land. For the convenience of their work they were camped in three camps, six men in each camp. The Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians had been harassing them for some time and one day while H. C. was left in camp away from the rest of the company the Indians came and destroyed every man in the three camps. Mr. Short and his son Truman were killed on Monday and their bodies were not found until the following Wednesday. Some of the men endeavored to get to the main camp where H. C. Short and three other men were stationed, but were waylaid by the Indians who killed every member of the party and also their oxen. This massacre occurred in Meade County near Meade Center. The bodies of Oliver Short and his son Truman were buried in Mt. Muncie Cemetery. His wife, Frances (Catlin) Short, survived him many years, passing away in 1912 in Leavenworth, Kansas. While his father was surveying the lands of Kansas, his son, H. C., accompanied him on many of his trips. Between 1880 and 1882 Mr. Short crossed the Oregon Trail twice. He spent six years in the West and upon his return to Lawrence, Kansas, he purchased the abstract business from S. F. Atwood, Wood, Spaulding and Bowen, consolidating them into one big business. He has continued this line of work for thirty-five years and has built a reliable and trustworthy business. Mr. Short served nine months as city commissioner of Leavenworth and was elected a member of the Board of County Commissioners in 1904 and re-elected in 1908. At the expiration of this latter term the present courthouse, costing $100,000, was built. The finishing, wiring and heating plant cost an additional $60,000. This great sum, $160,000, was paid by the county without issuing any bonds. In 1916 Mr. Short was re-elected as county commissioner of the second district and in 1920 he was made chairman of the board.

The L. & T. railroad runs through the farm and a water tank, which furnishes water for the railroad, is located on the place. The land is well watered with a fine spring and water flows the entire year. Mr. Herries is a fine man and has many staunch friends in the township.

In 1870 Mr. Herries was married to Margaret Gatchell, a native of Wyandotte County, Ohio, near Sandusky. She is the daughter of Hiram and Sarah Gatchell, both of whom died in Ohio, she at the age of sixty-five years on January 16, 1887, and he in the year 1890.

Mr. and Mrs. Herries have had the following children: Myrtle, the wife of Herman Eggert, of Jefferson County, Kansas; Isabelle, the wife of Murray Eggleston, of Lawrence, Kansas; James, of St. Joseph, Missouri, who married Fannie Johnson; Emma, who lives at home; Hiram, of St. Joseph, Missouri, who married Rydia Cockrell, a prominent teacher of this county at one time, and who now teaches in St. Joseph as substitute; and William, who died at the age of twenty-three years.

Mr. and Mrs. Herries have the following grandchildren: Bessie, Margaret, Howard, Fannie and Lottie Eggert; Edward, Hiram and Ruth Eggleston; David H., Mary Marine and Glenn Herries.

Edward Eggleston was in the United States Navy at the Great Lakes Training Camp for a few months during the World War, and was transferred to Boston, where he developed tubercular trouble. At the time he volunteered for service he was a medical student at Lawrence, Kansas.

David Herries was a charter member of the Eureka Grange and later transferred his membership to Delaware Grange at McLouth, Kansas. Mr. Herries has filled the offices of director and treasurer of the school board.

Mr. Herries remembers the hard times of '73 and '74, when the chintz bugs destroyed the crops, and also the grasshopper "panic" of '74 and '75. He says the grasshoppers were so thick that the dust on the earth seemed to be alive, but that the chintz bugs did more damage than the grasshoppers.

Roy Seifert, a member of a pioneer family of this section, is the owner of 160 acres of land in High Prairie Township, seven miles southwest of Leavenworth, Kansas, and two and one-fourth miles north of Boling. He was born in Stranger Township August 28, 1895, the son of William and Flora Seifert, of Leavenworth. William Seifert is a native of Ohio and came to Kansas with his father when about ten years of age. His wife is also a native of Ohio and is the daughter of Herman Ittner, an early settler of High Prairie Township.

Roy Seifert was educated in the public schools of Leavenworth, attending both the ward and high schools and, since finishing his education, he has followed farming and dairying, making a success in both lines of work. His farm of 160 acres is well improved. He built a fine farm residence in 1917, has a good silo and barn, and the farm is watered by natural springs, which, with the rolling and fertile grass land, make the farm ideal for raising cattle. Mr. Seifert has seven grade cattle and fourteen registered Holsteins with a registered male. Mr. Seifert sells his milk to a dairy in Leavenworth, Kansas. He also raises pure bred White Leghorn poultry, having about 200 hens. Mr. Seifert has a good farm, which is well kept, and the residence is on an elevation, giving one a fine view of the surrounding country.

September 19, 1917, Mr. Seifert was married to Lula English, a daughter of W. A. and Cora English, of Leavenworth. Mrs. Seifert was born in Delaware Township and was educated in the schools at Leavenworth. Mr. and Mrs. Seifert have one son, LeRoy. They receive their mail on a route from Leavenworth.

Mr. Seifert is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America of Boling. He also belongs to the Grange at Boling.

George L. Rapp, a well known and enterprising farmer of Easton Township, was born July 31, 1861, at Baldwin, Kansas, the son of Jacob and Louisa (Rapp) Rapp, being the third of eight children, three of whom are living: Martha, the wife of John Vollmar, of Kansas City, Kansas; Katherine, the wife of David Freedle of Piper, Kansas, living on a farm. Jacob Rapp was born in Wertumburg, Germany, in 1836 and died in 1878. He was a tinner in his native land, and came to the United States when sixteen years old, and settled in Baldwin, Kansas, in 1862. He afterward moved to a farm in Easton Township, where John G. Heim now lives. In 1865, he went to Leavenworth, Kansas, and burned lime there for four years, his family living on the farm, to which he returned in 1869 and engaged in the flour mill business, building a flour mill at Millwood, in Easton Township, which he conducted until his death

The Jacob Rapp Water Power flour mill at Millwood was one of the first mills to be built in Easton Township. Mr. Rapp built the mill in 1871. It was one of the historic spots of the township. Thirty thousand bushels of wheat and ten thousand bushels of corn were ground each year at this mill. The mill products were never shipped; the mill was used only to grind grain for the farmers of the community.

Jacob Rapp is buried on the Heim farm, together with his wife and two daughters in a private cemetery of the Rapp family. Mrs. Jacob Rapp was also a native of Germany. She died 1889 at the age of forty-nine years.

George L. Rapp was one year old when his parents came to Leavenworth County. He was educated in school district No. 6, and remained on the home farm until his mother's death. In 1907, he bought his present farm of eighty acres. He does general farming and stock raising, and is one of the dependable citizens of the township. In politics, Mr. Rapp is a republican. He served nine years on the school board in district number twenty-three.

Mr. Rapp was married January 3, 1895, to Eliza Schwettman, who was born in Clinton County, Illinois, November 22, 1867, the daughter of

THE JACOB RAPP GRIST MILL

Fred and Louisa (Poss) Schwettman, both natives of Germany. They lived in Leavenworth County for twenty-five years; both are deceased.

Mr. and Mrs. Rapp have four children, all living at home; Walter, Minnie, Mary and Elva. The family are members of the Lutheran Church.

Thomas K. Wilson, a prominent farmer, and one of the oldest pioneers now living in High Prairie Township, was born in Muskingum County, Ohio, April 7, 1846, the son of William and Lucinda (McKinney) Wilson, who came to Kansas in 1857 and settled at LeCompton and entered 160 acres of land. About six years later they moved to Leavenworth County and settled in High Prairie Township near Boling, later moving to Leavenworth, where Mr. Wilson died in 1908. He is buried in High Prairie Cemetery.

William Wilson was prominently identified with the Presbyterian Church and came west with the view of doing church extension work. He was instrumental in building churches at Olathe, Topeka and Lawrence, Kansas, the first Presbyterian Church at Lawrence, and, with Doctor Minor and others, Mr. Wilson assisted in establishing the State University at Lawrence. After coming to High Prairie Township he also built a Presbyterian Church here. During the Civil War he was chaplain of the Sixth Kansas, appointed by the governor. Mr. Wilson was a clerk in the State Legislature at one time, giving him an opportunity to become acquainted with the pioneers of territorial days. He was personally known to Judge LeCompton, James H. Lane and Governor Carney, also Quantrill, who sacked Lawrence in Civil War times. Mrs. Wilson is also buried in High Prairie Cemetery.

Thomas K. Wilson came to Leavenworth in 1863, but has lived on his present farm since 1866. This place consists of 240 acres and was formerly known as the Thompson farm, Mr. Wilson buying out the heirs. In 1870 he was married to Sarah Thompson, a daughter of William and Sarah Thompson, who settled here about the year 1860 and lived here until their deaths. Mr. Wilson also owns 160 acres, formerly his home place, northwest of Boling, Kansas, and 320 acres in Wallace County, Kansas.

Mr. Wilson's home place is an excellent farm, with good improvements. The rock building where he lives is one of the best constructed dwellings to be found here. He also has a well constructed barn with dimensions of fifty by fifty feet. The land is fertile soil and well watered. Mr. Wilson has been renting the place for the past five years and spends his time in reading.

Mr. Wilson has filled the office of trustee of his township and also served on the school board for twenty years.

Mrs. Wilson died in 1913 and is buried in High Prairie Cemetery. They had the following children: Mrs. Lulu Cook Copeland, of San Francisco; Mrs. Mamie Harrison, of Leavenworth, Route One; Mrs. Daisy Warden, of Easton, Kansas, Route One; Mrs. Zoe Smith, of Leavenworth, Route One; Mrs. Hester Schweizer, of Los Angeles, California; Newton, of Leavenworth; and William, who died in Osborn County, Kansas, in 1912 and is buried in High Prairie Cemetery.

Mr. Wilson has twenty-three grandchildren living: John, Lloyd, Catherine, Thomas and Gordon Cook; Guy, Hazel, Daisy, Hubert, Howard, Woodrow, Isabelle, Eugene and Robert Harrison; Jack, Ward, Zoe and Elizabeth Schweizer; Harold and Walter Smith, Jr.; Irwin Wilson; Hester and Helen Warden. He also has two step-grandchildren: Clarence and Elmer Warden.

Mr. Wilson has a keen memory and vividly recalls pioneer days and many interesting incidents. As he saw eastern, central and western parts of Kansas many years ago, he says he would like to take a trip over the routes he made in those days and see the progress made since the Indian days of the fifties. He remembers hearing James H. Lane make a speech at LeCompton, Kansas, when making a race for United States Senator against Marcus J. Parrott, and that Mr. Lane wore a faded buffalo overcoat with a rip down the back a foot long. Mr. Wilson attended church at LeCompton in 1857, which was then the capital of the state, and he says there were only three women present: Mrs. William Lamer, the merchant's wife; Mrs. Wilson, his mother, and her daughter, Mary, who died in Salt Lake City. He says that the hall was crowded with men, all armed with pistols in their belts and bowie knives in their boot tops.

Mr. Wilson has been a consistent good roads booster from the time the agitation for good roads was commenced in this county, and the Leavenworth-Springdale road runs along the north side of his farm. His long residence here has made his face familiarly known in Douglas and Shawnee counties as well, where he has a host of friends.

The following pioneer settlers of this county are recalled by Mr. Wilson: Leslie Salisbury, who entered the land now owned by his son, Emerson; Captain Scruggs, who entered the land now owned by C. V. Campbell; George Burges, who entered the land now owned by Mr. Barnard; H. Donahue, who entered the land of Mr. Myers; and Ute Barr, who entered the Brummel farm.

Russell Wilson, more familiarly known as "Russ" Wilson, is the popular and efficient sheriff of Leavenworth County. He was born in Doniphan County, Kansas, November 6, 1879, the son of John and Minnie (Alford) Wilson, both natives of Kentucky. Muncie Cemetery. His wife died in 1881 and was buried in Wolfe River Cemetery. Two children were born to them, Julia, wife of R. A. Atkinson, Kansas City, Missouri, and Russell, the subject of this sketch.

Russell Wilson was educated in the public schools in Doniphan County and came to Leavenworth with his father in 1895. For many years they conducted a feed and sale stable, where they worked up a very lucrative business. In 1918 Mr. Wilson was elected sheriff of Leavenworth County and was re-elected in 1920 with no opposition. During the World War, when the government was buying up every available mule that the county afforded, Mr. Wilson bought mules for the government.

Russell Wilson and Anna Thompson were united in marriage in October, 1903. She is the daughter of James and Bridget (Sullivan) Thompson, residents of Leavenworth. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, four of whom are living, as follows: Bessie; Frank, died in infancy; Floyd; Julia, and Jane. They make their home in the sheriff's residence at the county jail.

Mr. Wilson is a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles. His popularity as a county official is shown by the fact that in 1920 there was no opposition to his re-election.

engaged in the dairy business for the past six years in High Prairie Township, and purchased his present farm of 166 $\frac{1}{4}$ acres, formerly the Kowalewski farm, in March, 1920. He uses a Pinetree milker of three single units. Mr. Seifert has twenty-one head of registered Holstein cattle with registered bull, "U. S. Amesby Skylark Canary Homestead," who is from one of the best cows of the Disciplinary Barracks. He also has ten grade cows. Rev. A. G. Dick, the present pastor of the St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church, Leavenworth, Kansas, is a worthy successor of the two noble pastors who succeeded him in this parish. The St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church had its beginning when Rev. M. Meyer came to Leavenworth November 9, 1862, organized his church and started preparations to build the church edifice. This was placed at Sixth and Delaware streets and the first service was held Christmas Day, 1862. In 1866 the church was moved to Seventh and Miami streets, where the pastor, Reverend Meyer, was enabled to do greater and more efficient work for his growing flock.

In 1863 the parochial school was established and the field of its labor has increased as the years have gone by. In 1882 Rev. M. Meyer moved to St. Louis, Missouri. The Rev. C. Hafner succeeded him and remained as pastor until the fall of 1907. At the beginning of his pastorate the frame building was replaced by a substantial brick one, which was again replaced, in 1911, by the present brick church. Rev. A. G. Dick took up his duties as pastor January 5, 1908. The church was built in 1911 and the parsonage was built in 1916. The church property, including the parochial school located at Sixth and Osage streets, the present principal of which is R. E. Appelt, is valued at $60,000.

A. G. Dick was born in Ohio August 6, 1877, the son of Anton and Anna (Thielmann) Dick, both natives of Germany. Anton Dick was born in Germany in 1852 and came to the United States in 1866. Mr. and Mrs. Anton Dick were the parents of three children, as follows: Charles, residing in Michigan; A. G., the subject of this review; William, residing in Michigan. Anton and Anna (Thielmann) Dick still reside in Michigan.

In 1905 A. G. Dick and Otille Kamprith were united in marriage at Monroe, Michigan. They have two children, Herbert, born in 1908, and Edgar, born in 1912.

The St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church, under the leadership of its pastor, Reverend Dick, was aggressive and in the lead in its war work. Forty-six boys and one Red Cross nurse were sent to the front. All of them returned with one exception, Carl Schwandt, whose body rests across the seas.

The Bullard farm home which is located two and one-half miles northeast of Tonganoxie, Kansas, is one of the splendid places of Leavenworth County. The residence, which was built a few years ago, was planned by Mrs. Bullard, and constructed under her personal supervision. It is a handsome residence, artistically designed, finished and furnished. A wide, comfortable porch extends on three sides of the house, and the place presents a pretty appearance. This is one of the places of which Leavenworth County is especially proud.

Henry Shelby Bullard, a prominent farmer and stockman of Leavenworth County, is a native of Illinois. He was born in Sangamon County, that State, March 18, 1858, a son of John and Sarah (Fallis) Bullard and the youngest of eleven children born to them. John Bullard and his wife were natives of Kentucky, the former from Shelby and the latter from Henry County from which counties the subject of this sketch was named. John Bullard and his wife rode on horseback from Kentucky to Illinois about 1839; this was their wedding tour. They spent their lives in Sangamon County, Illinois.

Henry Shelby Bullard was reared in Sangamon County, Illinois, and attended the district schools and later took the regular course at the Kemper Military College at Boonville, Missouri, where he was graduated. He then returned to Illinois where he remained until the death of his father. He saw much of the early day life on the plains. At a very early date he hauled passengers and freight between Harper and Anthony, Kansas, at a time when that section was wild and unsettled and Indians were numerous and Mr. Bullard had many experiences with them. After spending about three years here, Mr. Bullard returned to Illinois. Five years later he came back to Kansas and engaged in the dry goods business at Lawrence. He conducted that business for three years and sold out and went to Iowa where he bought and sold cattle until 1888 when he returned to Kansas.

acres, in 1876; Miami, Miami County, 160 acres, in 1878; Fairmount, Leavenworth County, 160 acres, in 1879; Osage, Osage County, 800 acres, in 1889; Summit, Leavenworth County, 400 acres, in 1894. It was the most valuable apple crop ever grown by one man in the Middle West and brought to Mr. Wellhouse the title of "The Apple King." By 1913 he had raised twenty-seven crops, aggregating 600,000 bushels. He was a member of the Kansas State Horticultural Society and a director for four years, treasurer fifteen years, and president ten years. In the spring of 1865 he was captured at Aubrey, Kansas, by Confederate guerillas, who committed various depredations and shot to death his traveling companion. The success in life of Frederick Wellhouse depended largely upon his ability to directly forecast the future, which he never ceased to study. A large share of it he also owed to his indomitable energy and his steadfastness of purpose. Practical labor had made him a competent farmer, and honest dealing, sensible living and intelligent effort all lent their share of success to the new and closely related industry to which he gave the close application of a master mind in the art of agriculture and horticulture. His unusual career was strikingly emblematic of those laudable characteristics which reveal American manhood in its inspiring form. He was married in January, 1848, to Susan, daughter of Daniel Housley, of Copley Township, Summit County, Ohio, and had four children, Walter, who is secretary, at Topeka, of the Kansas State Horticultural Society; Mary C., wife of Hamilton Moore, of St. Paul, Minnesota; Horace M., and Cora, wife of H. Charles E. Johnson, a well-known farmer of Tonganoxie Township, was born in Mitchell County, Kansas, February 17, 1879, the son of A. C. and Ann (Mack) Johnson, both natives of Michigan.

A. C. Johnson was a Civil War veteran, who answered President Lincoln's call for men for ninety days. He enlisted with the Michigan volunteers and lost a leg at the Battle of Bull Run. He was married in 1862, to Ann Mack, who was born in 1846. They came from Michigan to Mitchell County, Kansas, with ox teams and pre-empted 169 acres of land and also 160 acres of timber culture land. They lived in a dugout. Afterwards A. C. Johnson and wife moved to various parts of the United States, going from Kansas to California, thence to Rogue River valley, Oregon, where he farmed for three years. They then went to the state of Washington, and settled at Cleveland, Washington, where he was engaged in the mercantile business. He died at Spokane, Washington, in 1909, and his wife died at Alberta, Canada, in June, 1911.

Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Johnson, as follows: Frank, deceased; Herbert A., Redcliff, Canada; Ada, married Thomas Hooker, Bickleton, Washington; Charles, the subject of this sketch; Freddie, died in infancy; and Edna E., wife of Benjamin Plowman, Candish, Canada.

Charles E. Johnson attended school in Iowa and the business college at Lawrence, Kansas. Mr. Johnson came to Leavenworth County, Kansas, in 1912, from Washington, where he had lived for a time.

February 21, 1912, Charles E. Johnson and Elizabeth Duncanson were united in marriage. She was the daughter of James and Rachel (Gossett) Duncanson, pioneers of Leavenworth County. The former was born in 1839 in Ohio and the latter June 24, 1838, in Ohio. They were united in marriage September 13, 1860.

James Duncanson and wife came to Lawrence, Kansas in May 22, 1868, stayed there two days, incidentally met I. B. Dutton, who then lived east of Tonganoxie on or near Stranger. Mr. Dutton invited him to his home to see that part of Leavenworth County. Brought him to Tonganoxie, where he decided to locate which he did two days later. He bought a lot the next week, built a house and moved into same in less than one month from the date of leaving his home in Ohio. In June of same year he bought a quarter section of land of the Union Pacific Railroad Company. During July he proceeded to "break sod" on twenty acres of this quarter, planted corn, and in December harvested several loads of corn, having resided in the state just seven months.

Mr. and Mrs. Duncanson resided continuously on this farm, having moved there in April, 1869, until their deaths, or more than fifty years.

They had the real pioneer "grit" and stood up and pressed forward under losses and trials that would have discouraged any but the bravest. The second year they were here the grasshoppers came by millions, and ate everything but the prairie grass, and in 1870 the drought literally dried up everything but the prairie grass. Discouraged, but not vanquished they made this farm a haven of comfort and plenty where their many friends often came for a day of real happiness.

James Duncanson was one whom to know was to wish to know better, whose promise was unbreakable and whose word was a bond. He was a reader and a thinker, and a mine of information on all questions of worth, taking an active interest in all that was vital to the community; he possessed a remarkable memory and a quick wit. He descended from an old pioneer Kentucky family, his mother being a niece of Gen. Jubal Early, of Confederate fame.

Mrs. Duncanson was a woman well fitted by nature, heredity and training for the part she was to play in the development of the West. She never complained of the hard times, nor sighed for the flesh pots of old Ohio, that she had freely given up, but she had a steady faith in working and trusting as became a pioneer, the descendant of a race of pioneers who helped in the building of the State of Ohio. Her great-grandfather, John Gossett, was a member of the first Legislature of Ohio, and her great-grandfather, Boatman, helped in framing the constitution of that state. In her sphere she proved herself a worthy daughter of such empire builders.

Her father, Abraham B. Gossett, became a member of John C. Fremont's expedition of engineers that crossed the plains in 1835. They reached Pike's Peak on that first trip. During that journey he fell in love with eastern Kansas and made plans to come there but "border troubles" prevented until too late for him.

James Duncanson was commissioned a lieutenant during the Civil War but never was in actual service. He was located at Camp Dennison. For over fifty years, James Duncanson and wife labored on the farm and reared their family. They won the esteem and friendship of many friends during their long and useful lives. Mrs. Duncanson died September 12, 1916, and James Duncanson died March 4, 1920. He was a charter member of Henri Lodge, A. F. & A. M., Tonganoxie, and was a Mason for sixty years, and he was also a member of the Eastern Star.

Mr. and Mrs. James Duncanson were the parents of eight children, as follows: Sylvia E., born July 1, 1861, died in 1904; Wilbur M., born August 4, 1864, resides at Valley Falls, Kansas; Amelia, born January 1, 1867, died August 14, 1867; Alfred, born November 24, 1868, died in Tonganoxie, July 28, 1869; Nancy, born June 10, 1871, died September 25, 1889; Mortimer, born July 2, 1873, a farmer in Tonganoxie Township; Rachel Elizabeth, born October 3, 1878, the wife of Charles E. Johnson; Frederick, born July 19, 1880, resides in Pueblo, Colorado.

He is also a member of the Farmers Co-operative Exchange at McLouth, Kansas. He is a republican and one of the substantial, enterprising farmers of Tonganoxie Township.

He began with the fire department on November 1, 1892, and was appointed chief on April 11, 1917, succeeding Michael Bahler.

The fire equipment of Leavenworth is as fine as any city of its size. Gerardus Rozendal, who is well known in Leavenworth as the "lettuce man", began the growing of hot house vegetation, fruit and truck gardening in 1898. He was born in Holland February 4, 1870, the son of Dirk and Giliska Rozendal, who came to America in 1880 and settled at Leavenworth. He was employed here as machinist at the old glucose factory for a number of years, and he and his wife eventually settled in St. Joseph, Missouri, where they died, he at the age of fifty-nine years and she at the age of seventy-two years. Both are buried at Mt. Muncie.

Gerardus Rozendal received his education in Holland and in the Leavenworth schools. He began work in the glucose factory at the early age of eleven years, and, while there, learned the machinist trade, which knowledge was very advantageous to him when building the present plant.

In 1898, Mr. Rozendal began operating hot beds just outside the city limits on Ohio Avenue, but not liking the hot bed, he constructed a green house on a small scale, with a glass house 40 by 15 feet, later increasing this one to 16 by 100 feet and also building another the same size. In 1919, he moved to his present location on Washington and Ohio Avenue, where he now has 10,000 feet under glass, devoted to the raising of lettuce, cucumbers, tomatoes and tomato plants for early field grown tomatoes. Mr. Rozendal does intensive farming under the glass and furnishes the city of Leavenworth with lettuce, early cucumbers, and his products are mostly consumed here. His hot house tomatoes find an excellent market at home and many of his field grown tomatoes are shipped to western Kansas. His first shipment of field grown tomatoes in 1921 brought $6.00 per bushel in Kansas City, Missouri. All of the equipment, the glass, hot water heating system, etc., were constructed by Mr. Rozendal and the Skinner irrigating or sprinkling system were installed by him. Mr. Rozendal has a wide acquaintance and many friends.

Father Jerome was reared and educated in his native land. He attended St. Coleman's college, Fermoy, County Cork, where he completed his classical course in four years. He then attended All-Hallows College of Dublin for three years, completing his philosophical course. In 1909, Father Jerome came to the United States and landed at New York. He attended the St. Bonapenture's seminary for his theological course.

In 1911, after finishing his theological course and ordained in the priesthood, Father Jerome was sent by Right Reverend John Ward to take charge of this parish. Father Jerome was more or less the architect as well as the builder of the beautiful church, which was known as Holy Angels Church, but which he has named St. Patrick's Church.

St. Patricks Church had eight boys go from the parish to fight in the World War, two of them were left upon the battlefields of France. The church is located close by the Hoge Cemetery which contains four acres of land.

Father Jerome has labored for ten years in the parish and well merits the esteem and honor in which he is held not only by his parishioners but by every one in the neighborhood.

Speaking to the writer of this article, Father Twomey remarked: "A man is a man, and I don't care a snap what his religion and politics are; that is his own business."

St. Joseph's Church of the Valley of Kickapoo Township. Shortly before the Civil War a number of Catholic families settled in the central part of Kickapoo Township, and mass was said occasionally by Rev. Father Dufourri of the Leavenworth Cathedral, at the home of Charles Algeer, the present Leger Motton farm. In the spring of 1863, a Catholic congregation, later to be known as St. Joseph of the Valley, was organized at the home of William McGraw by the Rev. Albert Heiman, and mass was held regular once a month. The following members were present at the organization: John Heintzelman, John Rogan, E. Brown, familiarly known as "Yankee Brown," whose wife was a Catholic, gave two acres of land and a small church, 14x30 feet, was built under the direction of Rev. Ambrose Butler, then connected with the Cathedral of Leavenworth. The building of this church was the cause of an influx of Catholics in its neighborhood, and, three years later, the first building being taxed to its capacity, an addition was added in 1871 by the same Father Butler. The edifice stood until the year 1893, when the present church was built on the same spot by the Rev. Francis Caton. In 1903 a brick residence was erected by the Rev. A. Grov-taers, who became the first resident pastor. A cemetery, called Mt. Olivet Cemetery, is located near the church, and the property of the congregation consists of five acres. Father Wiman was succeeded in 1868 by Rev. A. Butler. After him the pastors and their time in office follows: Rev. A. J. Abel, 1873-1874; Rev. Peter J. Suite, 1874; Rev. Martin Huhn, 1874-1878; Rev. William Smith, 1878-1881; Rev. B. Vonderlage, 1881-1882; Rev. B. J. Hayden, 1882-1885; Rev. Sylvester Meehan, 1885-1888; Rev. James J. Dunning, 1888-1889; Rev. Francis H. Eaton, 1889-1895; Rev. H. The congregation at the present is composed mostly of the children and grandchildren of the first settlers, and practically every one owns his home. The number of families is seventy, all engaged in farming.

Wallace Franklin Hovey, editor and manager of The Leavenworth Post, was born October 22, 1882, at Swanton Manor, in Butler County, Iowa. Ten years later found him in Brown County, Kansas, where his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Horace Nelson Hovey, had removed. His early education at Hiawatha Academy prepared him for the position of school teacher in country schools. The day he obtained his majority found him seeking enrollment in the University of Kansas. Previously he had been engaged in newspaper work when not teaching, having started The Hiawatha Daily World for Ewing Herbert.

During his college years, he was a staff correspondent for The Kansas City Star. After graduation he became business manager of The Hiawatha Daily World. Soon afterward he went to The St. Joseph News-Press. Later he was engaged as reporter on The Kansas City Journal, St. Louis Post Dispatch. Metropolitan daily newspaper work was not to his liking and by 1912 he was back in the country, being editor of The Olathe Register. He found weekly newspaper work too slow and in 1913 he became business manager of The Great Bend Daily Tribune, Will Townsley's newspaper, in central Kansas.

The year before the two world's fairs on the Pacific coast Mr. Hovey took up publicity work with the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad. At San Francisco, while engaged in news work, he met Albert T. Reid, president of the Kansas Panama-Pacific Exposition committee, and acquired considerable stock in The Leavenworth Post of which he became editor and manager in July, 1915. Since that time he has had but one aim—to make The Post one of the best daily newspapers in Kansas. From a money losing daily, The Post has become a valuable property.

"If I ever make any money as manager and editor of The Post, Leavenworth will be the beneficiary," said Mr. Hovey to the historian. "All that I can accumulate in the way of filthy lucre will go to the benefit of Leavenworth," is the statement that Mr. Hovey made. Having no children, this newspaperman expects to leave whatever he may possess to Leavenworth charitable institutions.

Wallace F. Hovey was married at Hiawatha, Kansas, September 19, 1910, to Miss Carrie M. Steele, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Steele. Mrs. Hovey was born at Rulo, Nebraska, and at the time of her marriage was society editor of the Hiawatha Daily World.

Wallace F. Hovey was born with enough "pep" for two, or if not he has since acquired this amount. He finds time while at his editorial desk to look after the details of his paper from every angle, and when his best reporters are out on a hot scent for news they often find the editor has beat them to it. He is loyal to friends, honorable and just to employees and in the conduct of his paper is unafraid.—Written by Ed Blair.

Pulley, who owns and operates the Pulley Dairy Farm, one of the most successful and best dairy farms in the county, is a native of the Kansas, and was born at Leavenworth, February 11, 1893, the son of Charles and Elizabeth (Sandwriter) Pulley, the latter being deceased. Mr. McQuillan pastures about one-half of the farm, has twenty-five acres in meadow and the remainder under cultivation. He has ninety head of Shorthorn cattle and eighty head of Duroc Jersey hogs, all eligible to registry. Mr. McQuillan is a good practical stockman, and has a thorough knowledge of farming in general.

January 8, 1902, Mr. McQuillan was married to Annie Farrell, a daughter of Patrick and Margaret (O'Mara) Farrell, who are both deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Farrell were also both natives of Ireland, he from County Kildare and she from King's County. They were married in Pennsylvania and came to Kansas about the year 1856 and settled in Leavenworth, where Mr. Farrell operated a saw mill. In 1865 they moved to Alexandria Township and bought 160 acres of land, later purchasing an additional 160 acres, which they owned at the time of their death. Mr. Farrell died January 20, 1895 and his wife died September 20, 1898, and both are buried in St. Thomas Cemetery in Springdale, Kansas.

Mr. and Mrs. Farrell were the parents of the following children: Dennis, whose present address is unknown; Mary, a sister of charity at Grand Junction, Colorado; Michael, of Old Mexico; John, a farmer of Alexandria Township; Frank, who lives on the home place; and Mrs. McQuillan.

Mr. and Mrs. McQuillan have four children living and one, Mary, who died at the age of fourteen years. The others are: Charles, Francis Arnold, Loretta and William, who all live at home with their parents.

Mr. McQuillan is a member of the Grange at Springdale, and also a member of the Farm Bureau. He receives his mail on route three out of McLouth, Kansas.

Frank A. Farrell is a prominent farmer of Alexandria Township, and is proprietor of Farrell pioneer home. He was born on the farm where he now lives December 28, 1872, the son of Patrick and Margaret Farrell, a sketch of whom appears in connection with Peter McQuillan of this volume.

Frank A. Farrell was educated in the Kerr School. He has lived on his present farm all of his life. The home place consisted of 160 acres, but Mr. Farrell has purchased 160 additional acres on the west and eighty acres three-fourths mile northeast of his residence, thus making a total of 400 acres that he owns. Mr. Farrell has added many improvements—rebuilt the residence, had a new barn forty by thirty-six feet and other outbuildings, which are all painted and nicely kept. The farm is well watered, a branch of Fall Creek running through the place. Mr. Farrell does general farming and stock raising and is very successful. He is well known in the township and has many friends.

February 13, 1901, Mr. Farrell was married to Christina Pennock, a daughter of Charles and Christina (Wolfe) Pennock, both deceased. Their home was in High Prairie Township, where Mrs. Farrell was born. She was educated at Bell and Springdale schools. Charles Pennock died in 1911 and his wife died in 1912. Both are buried at Benthel Cemetery in Alexandria Township. Charles Pennock was a Civil War veteran. He and his wife were the parents of the following children: Elizabeth, the wife of Rufus Courtney, on the home farm; Catherine, the widow of Henry Sharp, of California; Caroline, the widow of Fitz Gibbons, of Dallas, Texas; Charlie, who died at the age of nineteen years; Julia, the wife of James Renis, of Denver, Colorado; Mrs. Frank Farrell; and Volley, the wife of Sam Douglas, of Dallas, Texas.

By a former marriage of Christian Wolfe Pennock to Mr. Soper, she has a daughter, Nettie Soper, of Kansas City, Missouri. She is now Mrs. David Fulk.

Mr. and Mrs. Farrell have six children: Balbina, who attends the high school at Leavenworth; Ollie; Eugene; Francis; Charlie; and an infant daughter who is deceased.

Ed McQuillan, a well known farmer of Alexandria Township, who has won success in spite of difficulties, having practically lost his eyesight in a mining accident, is a native of Leavenworth, born in April, 1872, the son of Patrick and Mary (Mohan) McQuillan, a sketch of whom appears in the biography of Peter McQuillan.

Patrick McQuillan was an early pioneer of these parts, and was in Kansas City, Missouri, when there was but one store there. At one time he owned 480 acres there, but sold it and came to Leavenworth and bought property here, which he sold and bought land in Alexandria Township. In the early days he freighted from Westport Landing to Denver, Colorado, and from Fort Leavenworth to Denver and to Fort Scott. He also did grading and transfer business and was engaged in this work in Denver, Colorado, grading for the depot and Rio Grande shops at that place. He also did grade work from Colorado Springs to Manitou, and shipped from Denver to Oregon Short Line, and, while working there, sold out his outfit and returned to his farm in Alexandria Township. The land on this farm was broke by old man Garrett with oxen.

Ed McQuillan left home at the age of sixteen years, spending one year in Missouri and six months in Mississippi. He then returned and went to Colorado and worked for the Figger Four Company, a cattle company, on a ranch for one and one-half years, then was engaged in mining and worked for the United States mine, of which Ed Wright was proprietor. He was then three years with the Anaconda Copper Mine at Butte City, Montana, and then returned to the Independence Mine at Cripple Creek, Colorado. From there he went to Lake City, Colorado, and worked in the Ulay mine, and then to Salida, where he worked in an iron mine, and while there had the misfortune to practically lose his eyesight by a premature blast. Besides these years of working in mines, he did considerable prospecting, but after his serious accident returned home. He later returned to Pueblo, Colorado and was engaged in the clothing business with his brother-in-law, W. F. Camberon, and, after quitting the clothing business, went to Behring City, Alaska, and prospected there with his brother, Frank, returning to the farm in Alexandria Township in 1905. He now owns 106 acres, his home place at Springdale, and also owns 145 acres on Walnut Creek. Mr. McQuillan rents out the bottom land, but farms the home place.

Mr. McQuillan is possessed with remarkable resistance, and has overcome obstacles and made a success in life by his energy and ability.

August 26, 1908, Mr. McQuillan was married to Blanche Collins, a daughter of Henry and Mary (Schmedling) Collins, both living near the Bell schoolhouse in High Prairie Township. Mrs. McQuillan was born at Mt. Olivet and received her education there. Henry Collins was a native of France, and his wife was born in St. Louis, Missouri, and came here with her parents many years ago. He is seventy years of age and she is fifty-five years of age.

Mr. and Mrs. McQuillan have eight children, as follows: Edward Henry, Clara Elizabeth, Gertrude Frances, Robert Woodrow, Blanche Philomine, Nellie Theresa, Peter Petain and James Joseph.

Mr. McQuillan was formerly a member of the Western Federation of Miners Union. The family receive their mail on route one from Easton, Kansas.

W. W. Sparks, of Easton, is a member of a well known pioneer family of Alexandria Township. He was born one-half mile of his present home April 16, 1874, the son of Moses and Anna (Kincaid) Sparks, who came to Kansas in 1860 and settled on the farm which is now owned by Mr. Knapp. They owned 160 acres of land. Moses Sparks' father, Stephen Sparks, came here at the same time and died in Easton a number of years ago. Moses Sparks died on the home farm, and they are buried in Sparks Cemetery in Alexandria Township. Anna Sparks is also buried in this cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Moses Sparks were the parents of the following children: Mrs. Alice Clinkenbeard, of Easton, Kansas; Frances Corwine, deceased; T. A., of Easton; Bell Sparks, of Easton and Mrs. Laura Sanders, of Leavenworth.

W. W. Sparks was educated in the District No. 70 school and has made his home in this township all of his life. He is well known and has many friends in this community.

Mr. Sparks farms thirty-five acres of the Adams farm and eighty acres of the J. H. Pauley farm.

In September, 1894, Mr. Sparks was married to Anna Adams, a daughter of E. M. and Mary M. Adams, who settled in this township about the year 1890. E. M. Adams is deceased and is buried at Sparks Cemetery, and Mrs. Adams lives on the home place.

Mr. and Mrs. Sparks have seven children living: Maude, the wife of Walter Creech, of Hopkins, Missouri; Pearl, Ray, Ruby, Audrey, Erma and Everett, the two last named being twins. A son and daughter died in infancy.

Mr. Sparks is a member of the Grange at Hebron School, District No. 1.

Melvin K. McConkey, a well known citizen of Basehor, Kansas, and member of a pioneer family, was born in Fairmont Township, November 13, 1866, the son of James G. and Harriet N. (Conger) McConkey. His parents came from Paris, Illinois, in 1861, and settled at Leavenworth, where they lived until 1864, when they moved to Fairmont Township and bought a farm of 240 acres, one and one-half miles northwest of Basehor, for which they paid $2,200.00. This farm is now owned by Melvin K. McConkey. James G. McConkey was with the Kansas State Militia during the Civil War and was in Price's raid. He engaged in general farming until his death in 1896. His remains are buried at Mt. Muncie Cemetery, and his wife died about the year 1912 and is also buried at Mt. Muncie. James McConkey assisted in organizing the Prairie Garden District, which is now the Basehor School District. He and his wife were the parents of the following children: Georgia F., the wife of John Umphrey, of Basehor; Emma L., the wife of Dean Gordon, of Wichita; Minnie G., the wife of A. W. Jaggard, of Bonner Springs, Kansas; and Melvin K., the subject of this sketch.

Melvin McConkey was educated at Prairie Garden School, and lived on the home farm until 1908. This farm is known as the McConkey farm, and is well improved with good residence, large barn, granary, garage and other buildings of use in general farming. LaVarie Brothers now operate a dairy on this place and also do general farming.

Melvin McConkey has also been of assistance to his township in a public way, serving for several years as treasurer. He has many friends in Basehor and surrounding vicinity. In 1908 Mr. McConkey bought the residence in Basehor where he now lives. His wife was Elizabeth Berg, a daughter of Rev. George Berg, a German Methodist Episcopal minister who died in 1905 and is buried at Greenwood Cemetery. Mrs. Berg lives with her daughter.

Mr. McConkey is a member of the Knights and Ladies of Security, also the Yeoman Lodge.

Charles Geisen, a prosperous farmer of Alexandria Township, and member of a prominent pioneer family, was born on the farm where he now lives April 8, 1864, the son of Francis and Christina (Mausion) Geisen, both of whom were natives of Coblenz, Germany, on the Rhine, and who were married at Weston, Missouri. They came to Leavenworth County in 1853, and located on the farm now owned by his son, Charles Geisen. This farm is five miles southeast of Easton, Kansas, and ten miles west of Leavenworth. Francis Geisen was a member of the Kansas State Militia during Price's raid. He died January 7, 1909, at the age of eighty-three years, and his wife died March 13, 1917, at the age of eighty-eight years, and both are buried at Bethel Cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Geisen were the parents of the following children: Francis, who died at the age of six years; Henry, who with his wife were found murdered at Council Grove, Kansas, about the year 1888; George, who died at the age of twenty-three years of typhoid fever; Andrew, of Edinburgh, Texas; Charles, the subject of this sketch; and Clara, the wife of John Clevenger, of Mission, Texas.

Charles Geisen received his education in the public schools of his district, and has lived on the home farm continuously all of his life. He bought out the heirs after his father's death, and has also bought 100 additional acres, making a total of 260 acres which he now owns and farms. He was in the dairy business until 1917. He has twelve acres of alfalfa, seventy acres of wheat and corn. The place is well watered with a fine spring and running water. Among the improvements are a fine barn forty by sixty feet with basement, cow barn, silo, garage, and a nice two story residence, which was built in 1894. The buildings are all well kept and present a neat appearance. Mr. Geisen has been very successful, which success he has obtained by good management and sheer ability.

April 27, 1893, Mr. Geisen was married to Sarah Jane Truesdale, a native of County Down, Ireland, and who came to America at the age of fourteen years. They were married by the Rev. W. M. N. Page, of the Presbyterian Church. Mr. and Mrs. Geisen have four sons: Francis, who is on the home place; Clarence Earl, who served six months in the United States Army during the late war at Camp Funston; Andrew, who died in infancy; and Carl William, who lives at home; and David Edie, also at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Geisen are members of the Bethel Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Mr. Geisen has been a steward of the church for the past fifteen years, and also served as director of the school board of his district for twelve years.

Jacob Geisen, an uncle of Charles Geisen, formerly owned 160 acres just east of the Charles Geisen farm. He lived there for five years, and then moved to Minneapolis, Kansas, where he still lives at the age of ninety-one years.

The Wildwood school house in District No. 49 is located on the southeast corner of the Geisen farm, and the first house was constructed of logs. The present building was built in 1869. Among the early teachers of this school were: William Vananam, John Brown and a Professor Bowman. All of the early teachers had a difficult task here on account of the colored and white pupils not getting along peaceably.

The Bethel Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Alexandria Township, was organized in 1870 with the following trustees: Thomas Starnes, George Starnes, Samuel Randolph, Wesley Davidson, Buell Trackwell, John Sanders and Joseph King. The church is in northeast quarter of section 9, township 9, range 21. The first pastor of this church was the Rev. William Forsythe. The acknowledgment of the deed, given by Lewis and Nancy Burns to the church, was made before Lucien Baker, notary public, who was afterward United States Senator from Kansas. Sarah, the wife of Wesley Davidson, mentioned in the deed, is the only surviving member of the church since its organization.

The Bethel Cemetery Association was organized the same year as the church and consists of a tract of two acres of ground.

The present minister is the Rev. George Kimberlin, of Jarbalo circuit, and the present membership is about fifty.

W. I. Biddle, warden of the Federal Prison at Leavenworth, was born in Pennsylvania and came to Kansas in 1879 with his parents when a boy thirteen years old. He served four years as an apprentice learning the machine moulding trade, going to night school during that time.

In a dull winter period when all the single men in the moulding shop were laid off, he applied to the late Col. D. R. Anthony for a job as a "cub" reporter. At the end of a two weeks' tryout, during which time Colonel Anthony found that the boy could get the news even if he had trouble in writing it, he was given a place on The Leavenworth Times staff. Within two years he was city editor of the paper, a place he has filled at different times for more than thirty years.

Young Biddle was trained by Colonel Anthony in politics and he went through many local and state battles with him at a time when Leavenworth contests were no pink tea affairs. Before he was twenty-one years old Biddle was secretary of the Leavenworth County Republican Committee, and he has been chairman of the county committee six times. He has served as chairman of the First Kansas Congressional Republican Committee four times and has been a member of the Kansas Republican State Executive Committee three times. He has been the manager of the campaigns of Congressman D. R. Anthony, Jr., in the First District.

Biddle was register clerk in the Leavenworth postoffice four years, and later on postmaster four years during the administration of President Taft. Inspectors gave him a high rating on his management of the office.

Biddle was on the board of directors of the Kansas Penitentiary two terms covering six years, the last year as president of the board. During the time he was connected with the management of the prison the board had charge of all the business affairs of the institution, supervised the discipline and looked after parole matters. Three different wardens, E. B. Jewett, W. H. Haskell and J. K. Coddling (the latter in his first year in the position), served while Biddle was on the board.

In the six year period while Biddle was on the board stripes for prisoners and the lock-step were abolished at the Kansas Penitentiary. The "water cure" and the frame "crib" punishment was stopped. The first prisoner's night school was established, Capt. John Seaton with Biddle going before Legislative committees to get a small appropriation to start it.

The contract convict labor system in which prisoners were hired out to companies to make overalls and furniture were abolished. Biddle personally made the motion to end them. A new brick plant, one to make paving brick, was established at that time. The twine plant was enlarged, ice plant put in and new buildings erected with prison labor at very little appropriated money from the state.

The old bad smelling kitchen was torn away and the present new and modern one put in, Biddle moving to do so, as the records of the prison will show.

The parole system was started at the Kansas Penitentiary, the second state in the Union to try it out, while Biddle was on the board. Warden E. B. Jewett and Biddle decided on and wrote the rules governing the granting of paroles and for the conduct of prisoners while out on probation, which have been copied by many states since. Under the care taken in recommending paroles by the board, while Captain Seaton, T. B. Ballinger and Biddle were members, only seven per cent proved delinquent.

In addition to six years' service in active prison management, Biddle has been making investigations of prison affairs and writing articles about the three penitentiaries at Leavenworth for more than thirty years. He has made a study of prison affairs, and no one with the exception of the late Major B. W. McClaughry has even been appointed to a wardenship at any of the three Leavenworth penitentiaries with Biddle's practical experience in the management of prisons.

Harry H. Seckler was born in Leavenworth August 28, 1873, the sixth of seven sons of John and Catherine Seckler. The parents were pioneers of Leavenworth County, coming here from Cass County, Illinois, in 1857. Mr. Seckler pre-empted a claim in Atchison County, now a portion of the townsite of Effingham, being in the party led by Web Wilder and Col. D. R. Anthony. The father was a clothing merchant in Leavenworth, engaging in active business for forty-six years. He died in 1911 at the age of eighty-four. He often told of the early days in business when "bull-whackers" with ox-trains, coming in from the West, brought new outfits of clothes with gold dust, took their purchases to the banks of the Missouri River, got their first bath in weeks or months, changed apparel and then struck out for their eastern homes. He began business on Shawnee Street near the old Planters Hotel, and successively occupied stores first east of the present Leavenworth postoffice, then 315 Delaware Street, 423 Delaware, and lastly at the southwest corner of Fifth and Delaware streets. He was known as the first manufacturer of clothing for men in Kansas, at one time employing a force of twenty tailors.

Harry H. Seckler was educated in the Leavenworth grade schools, attended the Ohio Military Academy, Portsmouth, Ohio, graduated from Marmaduke Military Academy, Sweet Springs, Missouri, attended Kansas University and the University of Wisconsin. In college he was a member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity. At the first call for volunteers in the war with Spain he aided in organizing Company C, Twentieth Kansas Volunteer Infantry, went to the Philippines as its first lieutenant and afterwards commanded for three months a battalion of recruits of the First Oregon Regiment at Camp Merritt, San Francisco. He took part in the Philippine Insurrection and was discharged from the service on surgeon's certificate of disability.

Harry Seckler has spent almost his entire life in journalistic work. His first effort was as editor-in-chief of a military school monthly; then he was sporting editor of the Wisconsin Cardinal, and upon his return to Leavenworth from college he was employed on the Evening Standard. In 1897 he went to The Leavenworth Times and obtained schooling in newspaper work under the late Col. D. R. Anthony. In 1900, upon his return from the Philippines, he worked in St. Louis, Portland, Oregon and was city editor of the Astorian at Astoria, Oregon. He returned to The Times in 1901, then was city editor of the Evening Standard when it came under Colonel Anthony's management, and in 1902 went back to The Times as telegraph editor. He has filled successively the posts of reporter, telegraph editor, city editor, advertising manager and business manager of The Times.

On July 27, 1902, Harry Seckler and Alice C. Hertel were married. Mrs. Seckler is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hertel, Sr., of Leavenworth. They are members of the First Presbyterian Church.

Harry Seckler is a member of Leavenworth Lodge No. 2 Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, Azor Grotto Mystic Order Veiled Prophets of the Enchanted Realm and Abdallah Temple Ancient Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

LeRoy T. Hand, lawyer, Leavenworth, Kansas, has been engaged in the practice of his profession for the past five years. He was born March 1, 1888, in Easton Township, Leavenworth County, Kansas. His parents were John J. Hand, Jr., and Katherine L. (Byron) Hand, who is now deceased.

John J. Hand, Jr., was born in the city of Leavenworth December 6, 1859. He was the oldest son of John and Katherine Hand, who emigrated to this country from Ireland at an early date. Both of the parents of John Hand, Jr., are deceased, the father having died October 31, 1913, while the death of the mother occurred December 3, 1903. John and Katherine Hand were the parents of five children, four of whom are living, as follows: John Hand, Jr., the eldest son, resides in Leavenworth County near the little village of Lowemont; Thomas and Henry Hand also reside in the above mentioned community on farms, while Alice Herren resides in the city of Leavenworth. James Hand is deceased.

Upon arriving in Leavenworth, the first employment secured by the late John Hand was with the saw mill company which was operated in early days at the mouth of Three Mile Creek by Murphy and Scruggs. Later Mr. Hand was for a number of years employed on the government farm at Fort Leavenworth. During the 60's he purchased a farm a short distance northwest of the village of Lowemont and removed there with his family. He remained on this farm until his death, in 1913.

Katherine L. (Byron) Hand, the mother of LeRoy T. Hand, was the oldest daughter of Michael and Mary Byron. They emigrated to Leavenworth from Ireland during the '50s and for a number of years after arriving here Michael Byron was employed as a cabinet maker. Later he purchased a farm in the locality of the little village of Millwood in Easton Township where he lived until his death, October 16, 1897. He survived his wife three years, she dying at the age of fifty years, June 19, 1894. Michael and Mary Byron were the parents of twelve children, five of whom are living. Patrick L. Byron, the oldest living son, resides at Portland, Oregon; Margaret V. Harrigan resides at Linden, Indiana; Mary V. Byron lives in Washington, District of Columbia; Nellie B. Clavin resides at Lowemont, Kansas, while Robert E. Byron is at present in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Katherine L. Hand, the oldest daughter, died August 21, 1920.

John Hand, Jr., and Katherine Byron were married March 9, 1886 at Easton, Kansas. During the early part of their married life they resided in Easton Township, Leavenworth County, Kansas, where they engaged in operating a farm. Four sons were born to their union and no daughters. LeRoy T. Hand, the subject of this sketch, an attorney, resides in Leavenworth; James Leo Hand resides at Lincoln, Nebraska; Capt. Harry Vincent Hand, A. S. S. C. U. S. A., is at the present time stationed at Coblenz, Germany, with the American forces at that place, while Tracy A. Hand resides with his father at the Hand home near Lowemont, Kansas. In 1900 John Hand, Jr., with his family, removed to Kickapoo Township, Leavenworth County, Kansas, where he is at present living. On August 21, 1920, Katherine L. Hand the mother and wife, died at the family home after a comparatively short illness.

LeRoy T. Hand, after graduating from the common schools of Leavenworth County, took up the work of teaching at the age of eighteen and followed that line of work for eight years in Leavenworth and Atchison County common schools. In 1916 he was admitted to the Kansas State Bar and since that time has been engaged in the practice of his profession in the city of Leavenworth. His legal education was obtained through hard and persistent study during his spare moments, he never having had the opportunity to attend college. At the age of thirteen years Mr. Hand met with an accident which necessitated the amputation of his left arm at the elbow. While this misfortune has impeded him in his work to a great extent, it has served as an incentive to him to go into the game of life for the bigger things. Few, even of his most intimate friends know that Mr. Hand is rapidly forging to the front as a writer of short stories. His "stuff" as he refers to it has appeared in a number of eastern magazines under a nom de plume. In collaboration with Jesse A. Hall, his associate in the practice of law, he has compiled and written the greater part of the historical chapters of this History of Leavenworth County.

Mr. Hand is an ardent Democrat politically and was a great admirer of the Wilson administration. He is plain spoken oftentimes to the point of acridity. He has a large circle of admirers and friends in his home county and city. Mr. Hand is a member of the Knights of Columbus, Council No. 900, of Leavenworth, and while he has never held public office has always taken an active interest in civic and public affairs.—Written by M. J. Flannery.

Jesse A. Hall, a well known attorney of Leavenworth, was born November 12, 1875, on a farm four miles southwest of Easton, Leavenworth County, Kansas. He is a son of Joshua and Lydia L. Hall.

Joshua Hall was born January 10, 1825, in Patrick County, Virginia. He came to Leavenworth County, Kansas, in August, 1854, and located on a farm four miles southwest of Easton. He was married to Lydia L. Bristow in Easton Township, May 19, 1857. Lydia L. Bristow was born near Lafayette, Indiana, the daughter of William H. Bristow, who conducted one of the first stores at Easton. She was a woman of high character and attainments. She shared the trials and difficulties of her husband and family during the pioneer days of Leavenworth County. She reared a large family and on her shoulders fell the duties of the head of the family in 1885 when her husband died. She remained on the old homestead and with the aid of her son, Daniel, was able to rear the minor children to manhood and womanhood.

The education of Jesse A. Hall was obtained largely under the direction of his brother, John F. Hall, who graduated from the University of Kansas in 1897. Principally through his brother John's efforts, Jesse A. Hall attended Campbell College at Holton, Kansas. From this college he entered the University of Kansas in the fall of 1898 and was graduated from that institution in 1901 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. After his graduation he served as principal of Bonner Springs Schools, El Dorado High School and teacher of Mathematics in the Leavenworth High School. In the fall of 1910 he was elected county clerk of Leavenworth County and held that office for four years. He was appointed police judge of Leavenworth city in the spring of 1918 and held this office till the spring of 1921.

Mr. Hall was admitted to the practice of law in the Supreme Court of Kansas in the spring of 1910 and has practiced in Leavenworth since that time. On August 6, 1902, Mr. Hall was married to Nettie E. Griffith, of Lawrence, Kansas, and to this union was born one child, Helen, now thirteen years of age. She has just been graduated from the eighth grade in the Leavenworth schools.

Mr. Hall became a member of Easton Lodge No. 45, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, in the fall of 1897. He affiliated with Leavenworth No. 2 in 1907 and has served as its master. He is a Royal Arch Mason, a Knight Templar and a member of Abdallah Shrine. He belongs to the Kiwanis Club, Young Men's Christian Association and is secretary of the Leavenworth County Chautauqua Association.

This history of Leavenworth County which he, in conjunction with LeRoy T. Hand, has written, has been a pleasure on his part. To record the story of Leavenworth County so that posterity might know what manner of men and women were those who developed this fair and fertile land into the thriving and rich county has been a labor of love with him.
